VANDEVENTER TRUST ROBBERY SUSPECT HELD

Man Believed to Be Leo M. Harrison, Sought for $30,000 Holdup, Is Arrested in Chicago.

HE AND A WOMAN PASSED BAD CHECKS

H. B. Givens, Sandbagged by Harrison, His Stepbrother, in Robbery, Goes to View Prisoner.

Leo M. Harrison, who sandbagged his stepbrother, Harry B. Givens, secretary of the Vandeventer Trust Co., the evening of Feb. 7, and took $18,000 cash and $12,000 securities from the bank, is believed to be under arrest in Chicago.

The inquiry which led to the arrest brought out facts indicating that Harrison was in St. Louis about three weeks ago, for a few days, and that he worked as a soap salesman while here. It also appeared that he and a woman companion had passed bogus checks, which were drawn on the Vandeventer Trust Co.

These checks were signed, in two cases, with the name "L. Harrison," and in other cases with other names, written, according to Givens, in a handwriting which he recognized as that of his stepbrother.

Traced to Chicago.

Givens left for Chicago last night to view the prisoner. Representatives of the Burns Detective Agency expressed confidence that the man under arrest was the Leo Harrison wanted here for the bank assault and robbery. However, a woman who knows Harrison, and whom the Chicago police have questioned previously as to his whereabouts, declared last night that the prisoner was not Harrison.

In tracing Harrison's movements after the robbery, it has been learned that he went to an automobile agency, where he had bought a used Jewett car, saying that he would come by and pay for it. The night of the robbery he paid for the car, about $500, presumably out of the money which he took from the bank, and drove away. He was traced to Chicago.

Within the last few weeks, a worthless check drawn on the Vandeventer Trust Co., and signed with the name Kelsey, was given to Hotel Jefferson. Givens, seeing this check, noticed that the signature was in a handwriting like that of his fugitive stepbrother, Harrison. He found that a woman giving her name as Kelsey had opened a checking account with the trust company recently, but had closed it, having never had more than a $15 balance.

Living With Woman.

Complaints as to several checks caused them to trace the pair known as Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey to the Motor Tool Specialty Co., 2609 Washington boulevard, where it was learned, the man was employed as salesman, and was discharged for turning in spurious orders. About the same time, it was learned, a Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey had to give up their room at the Coronado Hotel, because other guests complained of their quarrels. It was learned that a woman guest at the Hyde Park Hotel in Chicago recognized a guest there, whose name appeared on the register as "L. Harrison," as the missing Leo Harrison. She said she knew him in Florida two years ago. The woman known as Mrs. Kelsey is said to have been at the Hyde Park Hotel with him.

A trunk belonging to him was shipped from Chicago to a point outside, then back to Chicago, where it was directed to the Edgewater Beach Hotel. The man who claimed it at an express office yesterday was arrested and is being held in belief that he is Harrison.

Harrison, who is 26 years old, came here last September from New Orleans, and was made welcome at the home of his stepbrother, Mrs. Julia M. Harrison, 5 North Skinker road. Givens, who is Mrs. Harrison's son, also lived there.

A Non-Paying Boarder.

The stepson remained for five weeks as a non-paying boarder, got two jobs and lost them both because of financial irregularities. He got the habit of calling at the Vandeventer Trust Co., 3565 Olive street, in the evening, and riding out to the house with Givens. As he appeared subsequently, he decided for a time when Givens would be there alone. Such a situation was presented when the Harrison left at 6 p. m. on Feb.

"MAN OF THE GREAT WASTES," IDEAL OF RUMANIAN QUEEN

"But I Have Never Met My Pioneer," She Says in Articles "About Men."

(Copyright, 1925.)

LONDON, May 23.—Queen Marie of Rumania has written a series of newspaper articles, the first of which will be published next Sunday. Advance advertisements announce it will be entitled "About Men," and the following passage is given as an excerpt from the parts where the Queen describes her "ideal man:"

"I want to ride through the great wastes with him, to feel the trees, swim rivers, climb lonely peaks; I want to share his tent, his fire; his food. I want to lean my head on his shoulder and hear his strong, faithful heart beat."

The the Queen adds the following in italics:

"But I have never met my man of great wastes; my pioneer."

COVER CHARGE OF $1000 EACH PAID BY 1000 PERSONS

Money to Go Toward Erection of New Orthodox Jewish Seminary and College.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—A cover charge of $1000 each—said to be the highest ever paid for a dinner in the history of communal fund raising—was paid by about 1000 persons tonight at a hotel Astor dinner in honor of the breaking ground for the five buildings of the Yeshiva of America. The five buildings, composing the $5,000,000 Jewish Seminary and college, will cover a three-block area on Amsterdam avenue, between 186th and 188th streets.

Samuel Levy, chairman of the campaign, told the diners the building fund now totals $2,000,000 and construction is to begin within a month.

The movement to build the Yeshiva of America was launched, Levy explained, because of the overcrowding of the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary here, which for more than 40 years, has been the leading orthodox Jewish educational institution in America.

HEIRESS TO $1,000,000 DISAPPEARS FROM HOME

Maude Lee Mudd, 16, of Miami, Ok., Departs and No Trace of Her Has Been Found.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Ok., May 23.—Maude Lee Mudd, 16 year old Indian heiress to an estate valued at more than $1,200,000, has disappeared from the home here of her mother, Mrs. Susan Bomberry, and officers have been unable to find any trace of her.

The disappearance of the girl followed on the heels of a writ of prohibition granted Thursday by the State Supreme Court barring District Judge J. J. Smith, Mrs. Bomberry and her husband, Levi Bomberry, from attempting to interfere with William Simms of Vinita, United States Probate Attorney and guardian of the heiress, in the custody of the ward. Mrs. Bomberry said she believes Maude has been "kidnaped." Simms, who came here in an effort to gain some clew as to the girl's whereabouts, said he was positive the mother knew where Maude was.

The Indian Department at Washington has been notified of the girl's disappearance and requested to assist in restoring her to the custody of her guardian.

TIDAL WAVE ON LAKES, SNOW IN MICHIGAN

Heavy Property Damage in New York State Caused by Fluctuation in Level of Water.

RAPID DROP IN MERCURY IN CHICAGO

Fall of 35 Degrees in Four Hours Follows Wind From Northeast—Storm Warnings Are Displayed.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, May 23.—Wind, rain and what was described as a tidal wave struck a series of devastating blows at central and a portion of Western New York today, causing property damage estimated at thousands of dollars but resulting in no deaths and few injuries. The tidal wave swept virtually the entire southern shore of Lake Ontario, from the mouth of the Niagara river at Youngstown and Oswego, raising the water about four feet above normal. Its origin remains a mystery tonight. At the time it occurred there was only a light wind.

By the Associated Press.

ALPENA, Mich., May 23.—A seven-foot fluctuation in the level of Lake Huron, without precedent on the lake, the United States Weather Bureau here reported, occured along the East shore last night. The rise and fall was most marked at Rockport, the water rising four feet and falling seven, leaving a large freighter on bottom in a loading slip. Later the water rose and the freighter was released. The current in Thunder Bay River was reversed, the water racing upstream rapidly, carrying debris from along shore. The water was still fluctuating today.

The fury of the wave seemed to center near Sodus Point, where between the lowest and highest level of the water there was a difference of eight feet. The same variation was reported from Oswego. Slight earth tremors were said to have been noted by some residents at Sodus Point.

Serious damage to shipping and lake front property was reported from Summerville and Charlotte, north of Rochester, Poultneyville and Sodus Point, Oswego, and smaller places along the shore. At Olcott Beach, Wilson and Fort Niagara, all along the shore line in Niagara County, some rise and fall of the water was noted, but at no time did it assume the proportions of the wave east of those points. Soil brought up by the lake added between 15 and 20 feet to the width of a sand bar at Sodus Point.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 23.—In Chicago yesterday the mercury jumped from 50 to 94 degrees in 15 hours. Today it dropped 23 degrees in one hour. At 3 o'clock this afternoon the thermometer reached 85 here. Then the city was struck by a shifting wind from the northeast and at 7 o'clock the thermometer had skidded down to 50, a drop of 35 degrees in four hours, and the mercury was still headed downward.

St. Paul at 7 o'clock tonight reported a temperature of 48, while at, Milwaukee the mercury was around 50. Superior reported a freezing temperature today and from Northern Michigan came reports of rain, sleet and snow. Nearly all this territory yesterday was in the grip of a heat wave that broke all previous records. At Cleveland a horse race was run in a hail storm. Northeast storm warnings were displayed on all the Great Lakes.

The Weather Bureau expected Chicago and vicinity to be in the grip of a strong wind before morning with further lowered temperatures. Freezing or near freezing temperatures were anticipated in the Lake Superior region with much colder weather throughout the Middle West and Northwest before morning.

Area in Michigan in Grip of Snowstorm That Began Friday.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., May 23.—While reports from other parts of the country told of extreme heat, this city and the Lake Superior country was suffering from a heavy snowfall which started Friday night and is still showing no signs of a let-up.

Accompanying the snow is a strong wind which was preceded by an electrical storm which for a time put out of commission the electric light and power systems of the two Saults. The wind reached tornado proportions at Trout Lake, 50 miles west of here, damaging property.

AFTER 10 HOURS IN CELL, TAYLOR SIGNS OWN BOND

Former Circuit Judge to Appear in Police Court Tomorrow on Careless Driving Charge.

RESENTED ARREST AFTER AUTO CRASH

Says He Was Taken Out of Bed to Police Station on Mere Word of Another Man.

Former Circuit Judge Daniel G. Taylor, who spent 10 hours in a police station cell yesterday because he refused to sign his own bond, as a protest over the circumstances of his arrest on a charge of careless driving, is due to appear in Police Court tomorrow morning.

During his voluntary imprisonment, Judge Taylor had numerous callers, few of whom were permitted to enter the cell room. The one who finally persuaded him to sign his own bond and free himself was Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co.

A few minutes after 4 o'clock, when the cells were filling up with prisoners, whites and negroes, and the temperature was 87, Wade's limousine rolled up to the Laclede Avenue Station, and Wade got out and entered. He was allowed to confer with Taylor in his cell, with the turnkey at a discreet distance. In five minutes Wade had persuaded Judge Taylor to sign on the dotted line.

Signs $500 Bond.

Judge Taylor donned his collar, coat and hat and left his cell. He affixed his signature to a $500 bond, which his wife earlier in the day had signed. It calls for his appearance before Police Judge Rosecan at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

When reporters asked him for a statement, Judge Taylor shook his head. Wade, asked to disclose his persuasive conversation with Judge Taylor, smiled and said nothing. He and Judge Taylor left the station by a side door and departed in Wade's automobile.

Judge Taylor had been arrested at 6 a. m. at his home, 4907 Pershing avenue, by Sergt. Lutker. Lieut. Henry was on duty when he was brought to the station and placed in a cell on his refusal to sign his own bond.

The arrest was made on complaint of Leo Van Claedt, 3840 Lindell boulevard, who charged that Judge Taylor, driving an automobile west on the south side of Lindell, crashed into his parked Ford touring car in front of his home at 3 a. m., throwing the parked car against a lamp post and knocking it down.

Van Claedt said he left his home and had a discussion in the street with Judge Taylor, and that the latter refused to pay for the damage to the parked automobile and drove away.

Tells of Arrest.

In a statement from his cell to a Post-Dispatch reporter, Judge Taylor said: "My arrest and incarceration was based on the proposition that a man, not an officer of the State, might, by his mere word, bring about the arrest and incarceration of another man for refusing to pay civil damages."

Judge Taylor said that when he was taken to the station and asked by the police if he would pay the damages done to Van Claedt's car, he replied he would consider the matter, whereupon the police asked Van Claedt if he wanted Judge Taylor locked up, and Van Claedt said he did.

"What is liberty, what is law, what are the rights of citizenship when such a situation can obtain," Judge Taylor continued. "My family has lived in Missouri for generations and never did any wrong deed. The police know where I could be reached; that I am financially responsible, and yet they subjected me to the indignity of coming to my home at 6 o'clock in the morning, taking me out of bed and dragging me off to a police station."

At 8 o'clock Mrs. Taylor called on her husband and implored him to accept his release on his own bond. He refused, but she signed the bond which he later signed. Another ineffectual attempt to obtain the prisoner's signature was made at 11 o'clock by Jacob Chasnoff, a law partner.

Judge Taylor had addressed a public meeting and was on his way home when the collision occurred, he told Chasnoff. He said he had not sought to evade liabil-

PRESBYTERIAN REPORT HITS HAYS ON 'BAD' PICTURES

Department of Moral Welfare Would Have Him Explain Why He 'Defends Them.

ASKS HIM TO NAME FILMS HE STOPPED

Report Is Made Public After Hays, as Elder of Church, Speaks on Pension Plan for Ministers.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 23.—Will Hays, head of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, and an elder of the Presbyterian Church, is asked to explain why he "condones and defends" producers who turn out "bad" pictures, in a report of the Department of Moral Welfare of the church, made public today.

Hays, who is chairman of the church's committee of laymen seeking to raise $15,000,000 to put the denomination's new pension plan into effect, appeared before the Presbyterian general assembly today, presenting the committee's report. He left at noon for New York.

The welfare department's report will be circulated among assembly commissioners on Monday in pamphlet form by Dr. Charles Scanlon, assistant secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education.

Dr. Scanlon also plans to bring the report formally before the general assembly for action.

It quotes a New York interview with Hays in March last, in which the latter said that more than 100 questionable books and plays have been kept from the screen voluntarily by our members.

"However, Mr. Hays fails to say that hundreds of grossly immoral pictures are daily shown by these same companies and that salacious books are being constantly filmed by these same companies," the report declares.

"This sophistry is as if a criminal pleaded explanation because he did not commit as many crimes as he might have committed, though he does not deny guilt. It is pertinent to ask Mr. Hays to name the objectionable pictures which he has succeeded in having debarred from the screen since he took his present position, March 6, 1922.

Hays' Stand.

"To the writer, Mr. Hays said that he had not been able to eliminate bad pictures made before he took office, nor to prevent the production of additional evil ones since.

"Mr. Hays modestly claims to be only an 'advisory' to the motion picture industry and when those by whom he is employed refuse to take his advice, he disavows responsibility for the objectionable pictures."

The report, if it is placed formally before the assembly, seeks to have the body adopt the following resolutions:

That the church "adhere firmly" to its repeated declarations in favor of local, state and Federal regulation of the motion picture industry.

That emphasis be placed on "the fundamental importance of Christian education as the only permanent safeguard against the evil of unwholesome motion pictures."

Pointing out that the interests which Hays represents produce 90 per cent of the motion pictures turned out in the country, the report asks: "Shall a half dozen men who hold a controlling interest in one of the most influential enterprises of the world be allowed to influence and often debase the ideals and conduct of millions of people daily without restraint, regulation or control?"

The Pension Plan.

The Presbyterian Church, through the General Assembly pledged itself anew today to bring to completion the pension plan and a Presbyterian center at Washington.

The 1000 commissioners voted to accept a report which will hasten the success of the church's new pension plan for ministers and their dependents involving raising of $15,000,000 and a second which will finally mean the establishment of a great Prebyterian edifice in Washington.

Hays in presenting the report on the pension system announced that Secretary Andrew W. Mellon had accepted the treasurership of the laymen's committee empowered to obtain the initial fund.

GOV. BAKER DEFERS NAMING NEW SENATOR

"Monday or Tuesday," He Tells Expectant Group in State Capital

Everything was set for an announcement, at Jefferson City yesterday afternoon, of Gov. Baker's selection of an appointee to the United States Senate, for the seat vacated by Senator Spencer's death. But the announcement did not come and the Governor said it would not be made until some time tomorrow or Tuesday.

Dr. Cortez Enloe, closest counselor of the Governor, telephoned to the headquarters of St. Louis and Kansas City newspaper reporters in Jefferson City in midafternoon, saying that the Governor would make the announcement as soon as he reached Jefferson City, on the train arriving from St. Louis at 5 p. m.

The train came, and the governor on it. Politicians and state job-holders, lining the front of the railroad station, drew near while reporters confronted the Governor, just back from three days in Southeast Missouri.

All they heard was "There will be no announcement until Monday or Tuesday." Then the Governor greeted Mrs. Baker, got into the automobile with her and rode to the mansion, while the job-holders and reporters followed, some by motor and some toiling up the steep grade on foot.

This was learned from the prison warden today. Leopold has been suffering from the ailment for several days and was taken to the hospital and placed on a diet to prepare for the operation. The operation will be performed by Dr. J. A. McKelvey, State surgeon.

HOPE BASED ON WEATHER REPORTS FROM THE NORTH

Intimations That Explorer May Have Continued Across Polar Cap to Alaska Scouted.

MESSAGE BEFORE DEPARTURE CITED

Considered Likely He Is Making Prolonged Observations Instead of Quickly Hopping Back.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The North American Newspaper Alliance announced, through the Associated Press, at 9:30 o'clock tonight that no news has been received from the Amundsen-Ellsworth North Pole expedition. The Alliance further announced that the weather at the Spitzbergen base of expedition continues perfect, with moderate temperature. Summer sunlight, no wind and ice freezes.

Special Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

OSLO, Norway, May 23.—While grave concern for Roald Amundsen and his associates is felt throughout Norway, continued calm weather and unbounded faith in Amundsen's sagacity and resourcefulness have served to allay public fears. Public interest has been aroused to a pitch of patriotic fervor, and Amundsen, buffeted by years of misfortune, has suddenly risen to the status of a national hero.

At the quaint medieval Akers church there were special services of prayer for the safe return of the voyagers tonight—a prayer which was echoed up and down the Aker river and throughout the farthest reaches of Amundsen's homeland. The lights are still burning in the windows of the Storthing, where members of parliament, public officials and Norwegian men of affairs are poring over maps and discussing the chances of Amundsen's safe return. At the Royal University, the greatest scientists of Norway are charting and plotting the remotest possibilities touching the fate of the voyagers, which they will formulate in a recommendation for any possible attempt at rescue.

Weather Carefully Studied.

At the national weather bureau, the entire staff is engaged on weather studies, attempting to weigh the menace of the storm gathering in Siberia. This unsettled area has been given constant attention today and reports tonight were more hopeful with indications possibly for indefinite continuance of the clear skies which caused Amundsen to take his leap into the North.

It is now nearly 60 hours since the planes departed. It was understood at the Spitzbergen base that, if the planes did not return in 24 hours, it would mean that they had made a landing at the pole. But this landing was to have been for six hours only. Amundsen's failure to return has led the Norwegian press to conclude, in the face of its persistent optimism, that the possibility that the planes cannot rise again must be faced, and that Amundsen and his mates may even now be starting their long, desperate ice journey to Grantland or Perry Land—with all the cruel hazards of the north against them.

Amundsen repeatedly has told

BENDER DEMANDS MILLER'S LIST OF "SIX" NAMES

Republican City Committeeman of Fifth Ward Writes to Mayor on His Recent Statement.

EXECUTIVE ALSO HAS LETTER FOR BENDER

Committeeman Asked to Resign From City Boxing Commission Says He Will Decline to Do So.

A demand that Mayor Miller immediately make public the names of the six members of the Republican City Committee who, he said Friday, his investigators had informed him accepted "money or promises" from the Democrats in the last election, is contained in a letter to the Mayor by A. Samuel Bender, Republican City Central Committeeman from the Fifth Ward.

The letter will reach the Mayor Monday morning.

Simultaneously, a letter is going through the mails from Mayor Miller to Bender, requesting his resignation as a member of the City Boxing Commission to which he was appointed by Mayor Kiel. His term expires in January of next year, and Bender said yesterday that the Mayor would not get his resignation until that time.

Bender's letter severely criticises the Mayor for his "vicious charges" and compares him to a "Don Quixote with determination your armor and your tongue a sword, consciously seeking new windmills to conquer."

Mayor Severely Criticised.

"Only rank cowardice would stifle your tongue from giving the names on concluding the charges," the letter continues. "Such conduct as yours is more becoming a common scold than the chief of a city like ours. Unfortunately there is no common scold statute on our books to cope with such a situation."

Mayor Miller is further referred to as "a most noble crusader," and Bender charges that "at the usual when your veracity is challenged you take refuge in evasion and resort to a smoke screen to conceal the true issues."

Bender announced today that he would shortly attempt to have the committee probe charges against the Mayor on the ground that he and Director of Public Safety Streil had violated the Charter in "organizing" what he says is a system of classified employes. Streil has contended that this was done in order that he might investigate the fitness of employes prior to installing the force in accordance with the allotments of his department under the appropriations bill. He said he proposed to re-engage those employes who were capable, within the limit allowed by the ordinance.

Mayor's Reference to Bender.

Mayor Miller, in his statement today replying to the charge that he had said "five members of the committee should be in the penitentiary," referred to Bender's statement as a "slight disturbance."

Bender said last night that he proposed to introduce resolutions at the next meeting of the City Committee condemning the Mayor for the "reasons" for his resignation, withdrawing further Boxing assistance in the defense of the county brought against the Mayor by William L. Bender announced Friday that he would shortly attempt to have the committee prefer charges against the Mayor on the ground that he and Director of Public Safety Brod had violated the Charter in "requesting" wholesale resignations of classified employes. Brod later explained that this was done in order that he might investigate the fitness of employes prior to curtailing the force in accordance with the allotments of his department under the appropriations bill. He said he proposed to re-engage those employes who were capable, within the limit allowed the department.

Mayor's Reference to Bender.

Mayor Miller, in his statement Friday replying to the charge that he had said "five members of the committee should be in the penitentiary," referred to Bender's statement as a "slight disturbance."

Bender said last night that he proposed to introduce resolutions at the next meeting of the City Committee condemning the Mayor for the "requests" for city employes' resignations; withdrawing further financial assistance to the defense of the contest brought against the Mayor by William L. Igoe, defeated Democrat, and calling upon the Miller Contest Committee to refund to the City Committee such money as it has thus far advanced in the Mayor's behalf.

Bender said that the City Committee was told by the Mayor that it would be reimbursed for its expenditures in the contest but added, that the Mayor's failure to keep other promises to the committee, had destroyed his faith in his word. The chief expenditure of the committee thus far involves about $1000 paid to six watchers $6 a day per man for watching the ballots of the last election in the vault at the Election Board headquarters in the City Hall.

Text of Bender's Letter.

The full text of Bender's letter to the Mayor follows:

"Your statement of the 22nd inst. convinces that you are running true to form, and is on a par with many of your earlier notorious and unwarranted attacks for which you have heretofore been bitterly denounced. As usual when your veracity is challenged you take refuge in evasion and resort to a smoke-screen to conceal the true issues.

"A most noble crusader, you go forth a la Don Quixote with defamation your armor and your tongue your sword, constantly seeking new windmills to conquer.

"I wonder if your mind is capable of comprehending the stigma your vicious charges have placed on every man and woman comprising the Republican City Committee. Assuming that it may not be capable of doing so I beg leave to inform you that they are direct charges of lack of integrity, of dishonesty and disloyalty against every member of the City Committee, male and female. I, as a member of that body still demand that you make known the names, if any, so that the public may know to whom you refer.

Compared to "Scold."

"Only rank cowardice would still your tongue from giving the names or retracting your charges. Such conduct as yours is more becoming scold than the chief executive of a city like ours. Unfortunately there is no common scold statute on our books to cope with such a situation.

"In conclusion my dear Mayor, isn't it slightly absurd if not "slightly disturbing" to go to the pains of a voluminous statement when as you say you 'do not wish to be considered as answering one A. Samuel Bender?'"

The Mayor could not be reached for a statement last night.

JURY IN CASE OF GIRL WHO KILLED 'BETRAYER' STILL OUT

Is Said to Stand 10 to 2 for Acquittal for Slaying of Alleged Father of Baby.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 23.—Uncertainty had not ended late tonight for Olympia Macri, 19-year-old opera student, who for five weeks has been on trial here, charged with the murder of John Bagnano, alleged father of her baby girl.

The jury began its deliberations at 11:35 a. m. Judge Avery's charge was considered absolutely fair. He lingered over the explanation of what the law considers self-defense and stressed the fact, no matter whether the defendant was attacked or not, if she believed she was about to be attacked she had a right to fire in self-defense.

Shortly after 4 p. m. the jury asked for further explanation regarding the law on self-defense. This was given by Judge Avery, who then was asked to explain once more "a reasonable doubt."

In every murder trial there is what is known as underground rumor from the jury room. Tonight there was a persistent rumor that the jury stood 10 for acquittal and two for manslaughter.

Olympia was cheered when she learned that Mrs. Josepha Whitney, New Haven society leader, had told her attorney she would take her into her own home.

AMERICAN PROPOSAL AGAINST GAS IS LOST IN COMMITTEE

Delegation Probably Will Continue Fight on Floor at Arms Traffic Control Convention.

By the Associated Press.

BENEVA, May 23.—After struggling for several days with the American proposal for the inclusion of a clause in the arms traffic control convention forbidding the use of poison gas, the committee dealing with the subject tonight reluctantly reported it was unable to agree to the American suggestion.

The American delegation, under the leadership of Representative Theodore E. Burton, probably will continue its efforts on the floor of the conference to have a resolution against the poison gas adopted. The conference adjourned today to meet again early next week.

'CUBAN' STAMPS MADE IN ST. LOUIS TRAP MAN ON SHIP

Californian About to Sail for Havana Is Arrested at New Orleans by Secret Service Men.

STAMPS TO BE USED BY RUM RUNNERS

Prisoner, Held for Possession of Counterfeit Revenue Labels, Says He Bribed Printer Here.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, May 23.—Secret service agents today arrested Charles E. Doran, of Sacramento, Cal., after he had boarded a steamer for Havana and lodged him in the House of Detention in default of $5000 bond on a charge of possessing counterfeit Cuban revenue stamps.

Julian T. Baber, Secret Service head here, said Doran had admitted possession of 140 sheets of spurious 5-peso stamps which Doran is reported having said, were printed in St. Louis. Federal agents would not divulge the source of the information leading to Doran's arrest. Baber said Doran had asserted he was to deliver the stamps to a man in Cuba known to him only by his first name. It is presumed the stamps were to have been used in labeling bottles for export from Cuba to this country.

In his confession this afternoon to Baber, Doran told of having had the stamps printed in a printing establishment in St. Louis, the name of which is withheld by the Secret Service pending further investigation.

Doran told Baber he bribed a photo-engraver of the printing firm to take him into the plant on Sunday when none of the other employes was there. It was then, he said, that he and the engraver printed the stamps and later destroyed the plates.

Only part of Doran's confession was made public the rest being withheld for further investigation. He was arrested only a few minutes before sailing time. When Baber made himself known to Doran the bearer of the counterfeit stamps remarked:

"Well, you've got me. I'll have to stand the gaff."

Dry agents here say the stamps in Doran's possession were undoubtedly intended for use in giving an air of genuineness to the so-called "overnight" Cuban whisky which is being brought into the United States by scores of rum running ships.

DEMAND FOR ANOTHER CUT IN U. S. TAXES INCREASING

Movement Indicates Formation of Nation-Wide Organization to Promote Definite Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The demand for another cut in Federal taxes has begun to take definite shape and advices received by the Treasury today indicate that a nation-wide organization is slowly forming to promote tax reduction along definite lines.

While the Treasury has made no plans and probably will take little part in proposals for tax cuts other than to show by its calculations where and how the rates may be lowered, the business, financial and professional interests now getting together probably will submit a practically completed bill to carry its ideas into effect. Treasury officials were not advised as to views held by the organization.

The Treasury Department has estimated that the maximum cut in total volume of taxes could not exceed $200,000,000.

Tax receipts thus far this year are running slightly ahead of Treasury estimates. Customs receipts are a few million dollars ahead of the same date last year.

Prosecutor's Salary Limit.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 23.—Another decision was handed down by the state supreme court today ruling that county prosecuting attorneys salaries cannot be limited to $2,500 a year, as was provided by a law passed in 1921. Several weeks ago the court held the statute unconstitutional. The ruling today was in the case of Redrick O'Brian, prosecuting attorney of Randolph county, from January 1, 1921 to January 1, 1923, against the Randolph county court. Prior to the passage of the 1921 act the prosecutor's salary in Randolph county was $5000 a year, according to the court's record, and after the law went into effect it was reduced to $2,500 annually.

QUARRY BLASTS ARE LIKENED TO EARTH TREMORS

Persons Living Near One in County Testify Pictures Are Jarred From Walls and Dishes Broken.

STONES FALL IN THEIR YARDS, THEY ASSERT

Witnesses Heard in Case in Which Citizens Seek to Enjoin West St. Louis Quarry Co.

Witnesses in Circuit Judge Wurdeman's court at Clayton yesterday compared the operations of the West St. Louis Quarry Co. to an earthquake, as one by one 52 of them testified in a suit brought by property owners asking for an injunction against the company's method of operating the quarry on Olive street road, between Kingsland avenue and the Kirkwood-Ferguson street car tracks.

Twenty-two of the witnesses were plaintiffs in the suit, property owners in the quarry vicinity. Others were their tenants, former tenants, and persons who frequented the vicinity.

They charged that pictures were jarred from the walls and plastering from the ceilings; that windows were rattled and entire houses often shaken by the quarry blasts. Showers of stone, they said, fell upon their roofs and in their dooryards. Blasts continuing through the night, they testified, prevented sleep and had resulted in severe nervous strain.

Two Companies Defendants.

The West St. Louis Quarry Co. leased the quarry from the Lamb Construction Co. and both are defendants in the suit.

Mrs. Paul Ebbs, 765 Westgate avenue, University City, told the court that stones had fallen like hail in her back yard after one blast last year and that one of them struck her baby, inflicting a painful injury to its leg. Such showers, she said, were not uncommon. Twice last year her home was rocked by them, she testified. She said she had become a nervous wreck through fear of injury to herself and her baby and had been forced to move from the vicinity.

W. A. Kelley, of 825 Leland avenue, testified explosions had shaken his apartment like an earthquake, that the glass in picture frames was often broken and he couldn't keep his pictures on the walls. A choking white dust from the rock crusher, he said, kept children indoors when they should be outside at play. Children, he said, were badly frightened by the blasts.

Iceman Showered With Rocks.

That he had been struck violently on the neck by pieces of flying rock while delivering ice in the vicinity of the quarry was the testimony of Edward Braehme, of 9369 Easton avenue, an iceman. He had seen glasses and plates knocked from household shelves and broken on the floor by the force of quarry explosions.

Mrs. Julia Dean Lademan, wife of the owner of an apartment at 820 Leland avenue, testified she had become excessively nervous from living in the quarry vicinity. Blasts jarred plaster from the ceilings of her husband's property, she said, and it was impossible to keep tenants under the circumstances.

The hearing is to be continued tomorrow.

Two Sergeants, Seven Patrolmen Shifted to Detective Bureau in Further Police Shakeup.

CHANGES IN BEATS OF FOUR PATROLMEN

Action With Approval of Board and for Good of the Service, Chief Gerk States.

A further reorganization of the Police Department was made yesterday when two detective sergeants and eight detectives were transferred to uniform duty and two sergeants and seven patrolmen were shifted to the Detective Bureau by Chief of Police Gerk. Four patrolmen also were transferred to different districts from the ones in which they had been working. The changes become effective today.

The changes were made, Chief Gerk stated, "for the good of the service." The action was taken with the approval of the Police Board, which recently made wholesale changes in the department. Although the pay of detectives and patrolmen is the same, the transfer to detective duty is considered a promotion.

Those returned to uniform duty and the districts to which they were transferred were: Detective Sergt. William A. Dempsey, former head of the gambling squad and recently in charge of Precinct H of the Detective Bureau, to Dayton Street District; Detective Sergt. Patrick J. Kelly and Detective Ivan H. Johnston to North Market; Detectives John A. Nooney and William C. Payne to Angelica; Detective Edward F. Miller to Laclede; Detective John W. Lewis to Magnolia; Detective Edward F. Brennan to Carr; Detective John Bechererer to Deer and Detective Charles McConnell to Carondelet.

Those transferred from uniform duty to the Detective Bureau: Sergt. Christ J. Smith, of North Market; Sergt. Ollie J. Sopp, former traffic policeman, who recently has been in Dayton Street District; Patrolmen Charles Cook, Angelica; Roy White, Laclede; James Sanders, Soulard; August Wendt, Magnolia; Emil Pucci, Carr; Harry J. Brown, Carondelet, and Walter Bauer of Soulard. The two sergeants were made detective sergeants.

Patrolmen transferred from one district to another were: John McCaffrey from Deer to Carr, Edward J. Burke from Carr to Deer, Oliver J. Simon from Laclede to Soulard and John R. Rogers from Wyoming to Dayton.

PRESBYTERIAN REPORT HITS HAYS ON "BAD" PICTURES

is encouraged to go ahead with plans for the building of a "monumental" church there to act as a Presbyterian center and a permanent quarters for the general assembly.

Actual solicitation for the $15,000,000 pension fund, Hays said, will begin as soon as 4000 churches have adopted it.

Less Than Ditch Diggers.

"For a life of service the average material compensation of preachers in America is less than that paid ditch diggers," he said. "This situation, long endured, is a moral crime.

Under the new plan, minimum pensions will be $600 and maximum $2000. It is to go into effect April 1, 1926.

The assembly is rapidly clearing its decks in preparation for the settlement of the issue, whether or not the church will demand a literal acceptance of Presbyterian faith from those preaching its gospel.

This will be brought to the fore in disposition of the complaint of a group of ministers of the new presbytery against the presbytery for licensing young ministers to preach who do not believe in the virgin birth, the bodily resurrection and other Bible miracles. The complaint now is before the judicial Committee, which will set as a secret court of justice on it and report its findings to the assembly.

Southern Presbyterian Church Has 456,000 Members.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 23 — There were 456,585 members of the Southern Presbyterian church enrolled at the close of the fiscal year, March 31, Dr. J. D. Leslie, stated clerk, Chattanooga, Tenn., reported to the general assembly today.

Totals accessions to the church during the year numbered 24,200, he reported. This was said to represent one of the best annual growths in the church's history. Membership at the end of the previous year was 438,818 and, discounting losses through deaths and withdrawals, the present figures showed a gain of 17,767. The denomination, the report said, has 3500 churches.

Still No Report From the Amundsen Expedition

me that he had mapped out every possible contingency in shaping his plans for the polar flight, and that he would not make the effort where any factors of uncertainty remained. For this reason, and from my observation of his methods during years of acquaintance, I am convinced that he is safe—and that he has reached the pole.

Crowds on the streets and in front of newspaper bulletin boards were dispirited tonight, with the receipt of a radio from the Steamship Fram, at Spitzbergen, saying that the Hobby had returned from its cove in the drift ice with no news of the planes. It is understood here that the Hobby will venture out again tomorrow. It is compelled to proceed with the utmost caution as the sea is filled with drift ice and small "growlers."

Informed opinion here inclines to the opinion that there is open water near the pole and it is regarded as quite probable that Amundsen has found an opening in the ice in which to land. Those who know Amundsen have the utmost confidence in his ability to lead his party to safety-landing on either land or water.

Equipped for Long Journey.

His planes carry oomiaks, which Amundsen is expert in handling, sleds and other necessary equipment for a long journey. While they carry food for only 30 days, it is quite possible for them to live on the country, as they have abundant ammunition. It is possible that they will find puffins—somewhat akin to a duck, but equipped with a parrot beak for digging caves in tundra narwhals, the sea unicorn, which provides excellent food, and of course, seals.

Polar authorities still insist that there is every reason to hope the adventurers are safe, but they say it with less conviction than last night. They are worried about the possibilities of dough or rotten ice, which make safe landings or ascents impossible, and they are looking anxiously toward Siberia—stronghold of the homeguard of Arctic gales. It is estimated that the temperature at the pole is about zero, or possibly five degrees below.

As midnight approaches, the crowd still lingers in front of the office of Tiedens Tegend, the great Norwegian newspaper. Old women with shawls on their heads, are among them, and some of them can be heard fervently praying. The only word which can come to them is from the radio of the waiting Fram. It is silent.

U. S. Navy Officials Inclined to Believe Amundsen Landed Safely.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23.— Navy department officials do not think the time has yet arrived to worry seriously over the outcome of the attempt of Capt. Raold Amundsen and his daring party to fly to the North Pole. While conceding the possibility that both planes may have met with disaster, they are inclined to believe that Amundsen found a place to land safely and determined to remain a little longer than originally planned. Another day or two will pass before they become convinced that Amundsen will not fly back to his base.

Admiral Eberle, Chief of Naval Operations and Acting Secretary of the Navy, today was quite optimistic over Amundsen's chance of success. He said he would not give up hope for several days.

Asked whether it would be feasible to send a naval plane into the polar region in an attempt to rescue the Amundsen party, Admiral Eberle replied in the negative. He pointed out that it would be foolhardy to send a single plane, and that in any event it would have to be taken north on a vessel, to Etah or some other point.

As a matter of course, the admiral added, the planes attached to the MacMillan expedition will conduct a search for Amundsen and his party if they are not heard from meanwhile. MacMillan plans to sail northward June 17. The admiral feels this is the only practicable way to send relief to Amundsen from this country should his party require it.

He pointed out that in order to accomplish anything it would be necessary to organize a complete expedition in any event and MacMillan has already done so and will have three naval planes with his party.

The purpose in sending three planes, Admiral Eberle said was to have one always in reserve. All three machines will not be permitted to fly at any one time. Under no circumstances will they be permitted to abandon their radio equipment. On this point Admiral Eberle was emphatic. He declared he also had insisted that the planes be equipped with standard naval radio transmitters, in order to insure reliability of communication. They will take along high frequency short wave sets, also, but must have the standard equipment, as experience has demonstrated that the high frequency signals are apt to jump over an area of 300 or 400 miles and then be picked up perhaps a thousand miles further distant. Such a jump in the signals while the planes were flying from their northern base might make it impossible to maintain communication.

Danish Governor of Greenland Thinks Amundsen Will Return.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, May 23.—Dergaard Jensen, Danish Governor of Greenland, told the Associated Press today that in his opinion there is no reason for uneasiness regarding the safety of the Amundsen-Ellsworth expedition to the pole.

He said Amundsen is the most energetic man he has met, but also is very cautious. Therefore, the Governor believed if fogs threatened to separate the two flying boats Amunsen would have descended and waited for the weather to clear.

He expressed the opinion that Amundsen had made his plans so accurately that he is almost certain to return safely. He said that Amundsen has repeatedly showed that he has the courage to avoid an unnecessary hazard, no matter what the temptation to attempt to overcome it may be.

A few minutes later the squad visited a store at 506 Chestnut street and arrested Albert Krammer. Similar evidence was seized. At the store of Tom Kearney, 407 Walnut street, the squad arrested Dan Murphy, Kearney's assistant, who was in charge. Several tabs were found there also. They also found a half barrel of beer on the premises.

About noon detectives stationed on the free bridge, arrested Clarence Thornton, 28, of 5562 Gano avenue, a saloon keeper, when they found 12 five-gallon cans of alcohol in his ford sedan in which he was driving into the city. The liquor was confiscated and Thornton was charged with possession and transportation of liquor.

OSAKA, Japan, May 23.—Two hundred houses are reported to have collapsed and numerous fires are raging today in the vicinity of Toyo-Oka, a town of 7700 population, 50 miles northwest of Osaka, as the result of an earthquake which sent terrified residents into the streets, fearing a repetition of the disaster of 1923.

The earthquake, according to meterological reports, was a horizontal vibration of nearly three inches, which is a record for the last 20 years. The temblor was continuous and lasted for several minutes.

Airplanes Ordered to Scene.

Reports received here by the vernacular newspapers report the Toyo-Oka postoffice has collapsed and the railroad station is burning. Military airplanes have been dispatched to the area affected to investigate the extent of the damage.

No detailed reports have been received here as yet as to the casualties. Tajima province, in which the temblor was centered, is a thinly populated area. The important industry in the section is the manufacture of wicker baskets, the damage to which has not yet been estimated.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, May 23.—The Department of Communications received this official dispatch from Toyo-Oka this morning which said:

"Violent earthquake this morning. Many houses shaken down. Fires started in two places and many casualties are expected. Communication with Tottori was re-established with difficulty as railroad tunnel betwee. Kinosaki Springs and Takeno crumbled."

The authorities are investigating to determine what relief measures will be necessary. Only a slight shock was felt in Tokio.

The Osaka advices added that the quake lasted for three minutes. A severe shock also was felt at Kobe.

Dispatches from Tokio to the Evening News say it is reported the town of Kinosaki was destroyed by the earthquake. It was reported a railroad train had been buried in the collapse of a tunnel near Hyogo. The Ikuno silver mine was reported greatly damaged by collapsing tunnels.

OSAKA, Japan, May 23.—Two hundred houses are reported to have collapsed and numerous fires are raging today in the vicinity of Toyo-Oka, a town of 7700 population, 40 miles northwest of Osaka, as the result of an earthquake which sent terrified residents into the streets, fearing a repetition of the disaster of 1923.

The earthquake, according to seismological reports, was a horizontal vibration of nearly three inches, which is a record for the last 20 years. The temblor was continuous and lasted for several minutes.

Airplanes Ordered to Scene.

Reports received here by the vernacular newspapers report the Toyo-Oka postoffice has collapsed and the railroad station is burning. Military airplanes have been dispatched to the area affected to investigate the extent of the damage.

No detailed reports have been received here as yet as to the casualties. Tajima province, in which the temblor was centered, is a thinly populated area. The important industry in the section is the manufacture of wicker baskets, the damage to which has not yet been estimated.

TOKIO, May 23.—The Department of Communications received official dispatch from Toyo-Oka this morning which said:

"Violent earthquake this morning. Many houses shaken down. Fires started in two places and many casualties are expected. Communication with Tottori was established with difficulty as railroad tunnel betwee... Kinosaki Springs and Takeno crumbled."

The authorities are investigating to determine what relief measures will be necessary. Only a slight shock was felt in Tokio.

Town of Kinosaki Destroyed by Quake, London Reports Say.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—The Evening News correspondent at Tokio says the earthquake in Southern Japan was of a terrifying nature. Some loss of life is reported, he adds, but there are no details.

Dispatches received by Reuter's agency from Osaka says fires have started in several places in Toyo-Oka. Considerable damage is reported from other towns in Tajima province.

The Osaka advices added that the quake lasted for three minutes. A severe shock also was felt at Kobe.

Dispatches from Tokio to the Evening News say it is reported the town of Kinosaki was destroyed by the earthquake. It was reported a railroad train had been buried in the collapse of a tunnel near there. The Ikuno silver mine was reported greatly damaged by collapsing tunnels.

Found Dead After Abduction

MISS AIDA HEYWARD.

Miss Heyward was kidnaped from her summer home in Maine by a man who shot her aunt and then set fire to the house. Her body was found yesterday in a cottage at Pine Point, Me., after several days' search.

KIDNAPED WOMAN IS FOUND DEAD

Miss Aida Heyward Had Been Taken Away by Man Who Shot Aunt and Fired Home.

By the Associated Press

WINTHROP, Me., May 23.—The body of Miss Aida Heyward, who was taken from her cottage at Lake Maranacook early Wednesday by a man who shot her aunt, Mrs. Emma L. Towns, and set fire to the cottage, was found today in a room on the second floor of a cottage owned by Jennie Gray at Pine Point.

The Gray cottage is about a mile and a half from the former home of Miss Heyward. The State authorities had the name of a man to whom they believed had abducted the woman. The body was found on a bed cot. It was believed that Miss Heyward had been choked to death.

The body was found by Charles S. Towle, former Deputy Sheriff; S. Lee Woodman and Dr. Carl J. Bates, all of Winthrop, who were conducting a more detailed search of cottages about Lake Maranacook.

A general alarm has been sent out to capture Harry A. Kirby, of Watertown, Mass. who for two weeks has been occupying the cottage where the body was found and working in a local factory.

A postcard was received by Postmaster Earl B. Jones this morning from Kirby, directing that any mail for him be forwarded to Augusta. Mail came for Kirby today and was forwarded on the 11 o'clock car. State policemen in plain clothes are on watch at the Augusta postoffice and vicinity.

Partly Under Mattress.

When the body was found it was partly beneath a mattress which had been pulled up in an attempt to cover it. The tongue gave evidence that death was due to strangulation.

The cottage where the discovery was made is owned by L. Jennie Gray of Watertown, Mass., and is known as the Flint Cottage. About a fortnight ago Kirby is said to have come to Winthrop, taken up his abode in the cottage and obtained employment in the oil cloth factory at Winthrop, where he since has been working.

Yesterday Kirby is alleged to have gone to the farm house of Mrs. Ford Bearce, not far distant from the scene of the tragedy, and sought to hire a room there. "I am afraid to stay in my camp alone. I wouldn't stay there another night for $1000," he is alleged to have said.

This morning he left Winthrop early and said he was going to Augusta. Since then he has not been heard from. In addition to the evidence of strangulation there was evidence that Miss Heyward had been attacked and mistreated before she was murdered. The cottage where the body was found is on the east side of Lake Maranacook, at what is known as Big Pine Point.

Permission to Use Cottage Given to Man.

By the Associated Press.

WATERTOWN, Mass., May 23. Miss Jennie Gray, owner of the cottage at Lake Maranacook, Me., in which the body of Miss Aida Heyward, missing since Wednesday, was found today, said she had given Harry A. Kirby, who is sought by Maine police in connection with the woman's death, permission to use the cottage while the Gray family was not there. Miss Gray, who is a teacher in the Junior high school here, related emotion when told of the crime. Her brother said that his sister knew Kirby's wife as a classmate when she attended school in

DIVORCED WIFE OF LAWSON WATTS WEDS

Former Miss Florence Mott Becomes Bride of A. C. Bottolph Jr. of Pasadena.

Mrs. Florence Mott Watts, who was divorced two weeks ago from Lawson M. Watts, well known amateur golfer and vice president of the First National Bank, was married yesterday to Albert C. Bottolph Jr., member of a prominent Pasadena, Cal., family.

Mrs. Bottolph has spent the past year in California since her separation from Watts, and returned only a short time ago to St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Howard Billman of the Church Federation in the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. David Alonzo Bixby, in the Forest Park Hotel.

Fourteen guests were present, including Mrs. F. O. Watts Jr., a sister-in-law of the bride's first husband, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones, the latter of whom is a sister of Lawson Watts.

The divorce from Watts was obtained on the day the suit was filed and news of the decree was not made public until a week after it had been granted. Mrs. Bottolph in her suit charged Watts was indifferent, had told her he did not love her and declared he was sorry he had married her.

They were married Feb. 5, 1919, a short time after Watts came from France, where he had served as a Lieutenant of motor transport. He is a son of F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank. Mrs. Bottolph before her marriage to Watts was Miss Florence McElroy Mott and made her home with Mrs. Bixby. The Bottolphs departed yesterday for a honeymoon in California.

'PROFANITY' CUT OUT OF PLAY

Even Shaw Is Overruled by Birmingham Authorities.

LONDON, May 23.—The height of British blasphemous profanity—the word "bloody"—with which George Bernard Shaw so delightfully shocked the public here when his play, "Pygmalion" first was produced, has just been banned from English stage language.

The adjective was employed in the London production of "White Cargo" when, near the end of the last act, one of the characters calls another a "poor, bloody fool." Lord Chamberlain, who censors plays here, made no objection to its use in London, but the play has just been produced at Birmingham where the municipal authorities promptly ordered excision of the word.

EVOLUTION CASE READY FOR GRAND JURY

Trial of Tennessee Teacher Expected to Begin Soon After Indictment Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, Tenn., May 23.—Dayton tonight was dusting off its best bib and tucker in prepartion for the first phase of the court test of the constitutionality of the recently enacted Tennessee law against the teaching of evolution in public schools.

Presentment of an indictment to the Rhea County Grand Jury, at a special session Monday, will start the proceedings expected eventually to decide whether evolution is a theory, a science or both in Tennessee, and whether it can form a part of school courses, against which a law has been placed on the statutes.

Teacher Central Figure.

John T. Scopes, science teacher in the Rhea County High School, is the central figure in the test. Formally charged with a violation of the law, three Justices of the Peace, sitting at a hearing decided he was "technically if not intentionally guilty," and held him to the Grand Jury. Though bonds were fixed at $1000, he was not required to post sureties.

The case has thrown Dayton squarely in the center of the stage of publicity. The county seat of Rhea County is a small town, with a population of approximately 2000. An immense lawn surrounds the courthouse where the trial will be held and it is planned to install loud speakers that those who gather there may hear the trial. Tents will be set up to augment hotel facilities.

The Scopes case had its inception at a drug store gathering when Scopes was present. Discussion turned to the evolution law and Scopes remarked he was teaching it in the biology courses of his science department.

Dr. George W. Rappleyea, chemical engineer, manager of an iron and coal company in Dayton, thereupon suggested that Scopes submit to arrest that a test case might be made of the new law.

Agreed as to Test Case.

Scopes, acquiescing, Dr. Rappleyea, went before a Justice of the Peace and swore to a warrant for the school teacher's arrest. He was charged with teaching evolution in a biology review April 21, when the law became effective by approval of the Governor March 21.

When news of the test became known the postoffice and telegraph office at Dayton showed greatly increased business. Letters and telegrams came from all parts of the United States for Scopes and Dr. Rappleyea. Some of the communications to the school teacher cheered him in his stand, while others were frankly critical.

First news of the arrest of Scopes gave Dr. Rappleyea as the prosecuting witness, but did not bring out that he was friendly to the theory of evolution, so he has found himself in the peculiar position of being applauded by friends of the law he is trying to have declared unconstitutional.

INVITES 'COUNT' TO DINE; NOW HER $2500 RING IS GONE

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, May 23.—An American woman, Mrs. Mairo Hicks of New York, apparently did not know that prudence is necessary when making acquaintances at Montmartre dance halls and restaurants even when elegant professional dancers introduce themselves under such well-sounding titles as 'Count De Rucillor.'' Her ignorance in these matters cost her a gold bracelet and a platinum bracelet ring worth $2500 which the professional dancer, Serge Papini, alias Count de Rucillor, is accused of stealing. Mrs. Hicks invited him to dine with her after the dance. That same evening the jewelry disappeared Papini has been arrested.

Say Kroger Employe Confessed.

An employe of a Kroger store in Kirkwood last night admitted, county authorities said, that he was an accomplice in the robbery of the store March 24, when $96 was taken by two armed men. He told the authorities the robbery of the store was arranged by him and the other two men and said he obtained $28 as his share of the loot.

VANDEVENTER TRUST ROBBERY SUSPECT HELD

7. Then, as Givens related, Harrison struck him twice on the head with a bag of buckshot, and drew a revolver, threatening to shoot him. He tied Givens' hands, and took two cash boxes, containing the money and securities.

Walked Out of Door.

Harrison threatened to lock Givens in the vault, Givens said, and Givens begged him not to do so, as the vault had a time lock and would not open until Monday. Givens said Harrison made the remark, "I ought to kill you," then seemed to relent, and apologized for his act, saying he was desperate. He locked Givens in a washroom and walked out of the front door, near the busy Grand-and-Olive corner. Givens, after freeing his hands, telephoned to his mother's home and told his story to a neighbor, who called for a policeman.

HOLDS NATURAL CHILD IS A LEGAL HEIR

Supreme Court Reverses St. Louis Decision, Giving Woman Property of Her Mother.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—A natural child has the right to inherit property through the mother and must be recognized as a legal heir of the mother, according to an opinion handed down today by Division No. 1 of the Supreme Court, reversing a decision of the St. Louis Circuit Court.

Through this ruling the Supreme Court remanded the case and directed the St. Louis Circuit Court to enter a judgment for a woman plaintiff in her suit to recover a house and lot in St. Louis from the husband of her mother. The plaintiff, the petition set forth, was born long prior to the marriage of the mother and was not the child of the defendant in the case.

When the mother died, in 1915, it was stated, her will bequeathed all her property to her husband, the child not being mentioned in the document. The latter brought suit to obtain a share in the estate, asking to recover a house and lot, but the Circuit Court dismissed the suit, holding title of the property belonged to the defendant.

In the opinion, which was written by Judge Woodson, the Supreme Court held that under the present state law, natural children were capable of inheriting on the part of the mother, this law superseding the old common law under which a natural child was no person at all, and therefore incapable of inheriting property. The opinion stated the plaintiff was the daughter of the deceased, and, there being no other children, was entitled to the property. In this all the judges concurred.

"So far as I am concerned," Judge Woodson wrote, "I see no sound reason why the natural children of both men and women, when known, may not inherit from both. I see no immoral principle which would or should prevent them from inheriting their parents' estates."

In the trial of the case, the defendant claimed the property formerly was owned by his mother, and that he purchased it from her, but not wishing to have the title in his own name, he put it in the name of his wife. He also testified he had never heard of a child of his wife until suit was filed to gain possession of the property.

SALARY SUIT OF FIREMEN IS ADVANCED ON DOCKET

Supreme Court en Banc Sets Case for Hearing During October Term.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 23.—The petition of the St. Louis City firemen for a writ of mandamus, to compel the St. Louis Board of Estimate and Apportionment to include in the budget a $25 a month salary increase for firemen, was advanced on the docket by the Supreme Court en banc today and set for the October term of court en banc. The day on which the case will be heard will not be determined until the October docket is made up.

The action of the court was on a motion recently filed by Alroy Phillips, attorney for the firemen, asking that the case be advanced for early hearing. It was contended in the motion that immediate action was necessary on the ground that a city charter interpretation was involved; that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment was attempting to override initiative ordinance approved by the people granting the salary increase, and that the firemen were in need because the salary increase was being held up.

SUSPECT IN MURDER 9 YEARS AGO IDENTIFIED, POLICE SAY

Illinois Officers Trail Printer to St. Louis, Thence to Louisville, and Arrest Him.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., May 23.—A suspect in Louisville has been identified as Earl Taylor, a printer, wanted here for the murder of Leon and Dollie Charvat at their home nine years ago, according to information received by police from William Kunst, city detective who went to Louisville yesterday with requisition papers from Gov. Small. Kunst made the identification, he said.

The trail became hot this week when police officials at Jacksonville, Ill., keeping a watch on relatives there, became suspicious and following them to St. Louis and thence to Louisville, arrested the suspect.

Taylor is said to have shot and killed the Charvat's following domestic trouble between himself and wife during a quarrel with her at the Charvat home where they roomed. Mrs. Charvat is said to have interfered with Taylor while he was beating his wife, and knocked him to the floor. Charvat came into the room and Taylor is said to have shot both.

'Mystery Woman' a Swiss Policeman's Daughter

Record of Nina Jaeger, Serving Larceny Sentence in New York, Reveals Extensive Frauds in Geneva.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—"Nina" Jeager, adventuress and alleged international spy, serving a term of from 14 to 28 months in Auburn Prison for the larceny of $5800, is the "woman of mystery" no longer. From Geneva, Switzerland, comes information which reveals the astounding early history of this woman, who is labeled by the Swiss police "aventuriere extraordinaire" of "disconcerting audacity."

The daughter of a policeman in the village of Coire, she determined, despite her lack of education, to become a grand dame. Pretty and intelligent, she got a place as check girl and waitress in an exclusive restaurant. Here she won the regard of an octogenarian patroness of the place and became her maid. She studied languages desperately and copied the manners and costume of her employer's guests. Finally she got securities worth 33,000 francs from the old lady and disappeared.

Activities at Geneva.

Here, during the war period, there is an interlude in the verified history. She tbld Miss Mabel Sprague, probation officer in New York, that she had been imprisoned in both Germany and France as a spy.

After the war a certain Mme. Dolores appeared at Geneva. Passing as an heiress whose fortune was temporarily tied up by litigation, she easily broke into the best society. She rented a sumptuous villa at Vessy for the summer of 1920, without paying a sou in advance. The furniture, rugs and decorations did not suit her fastidious taste, so she ordered them removed into storage and contracted for thousands of francs' worth of new things.

Finally some of the concerns with whom Mme. Dolores had dealt became suspicious. An investigation was started.

Hearing of it, Mme. Dolores began secretly to dispose of the choice furnishings she had bought on credit and even of the original furniture of the villa. Furthermore, she contracted innumerable "small loans" of sums up to 10,000 francs from her "guests" and acquaintances.

Employed as Linguist.

Suddenly Mme. Dolores disappeared. Months later she was apprehended at Havre and extradited to Geneva, a lenient Judge, unable to believe the evidence and because of "extenuating circumstances" gave her only two years in the house of correction. She served one year and was released.

During 1922, Nina Jaeger arrived in the United States. Because of her linguistic ability she was employed by the Travelers' Aid Society as interpreter. She took a back room for $4 a week in the boarding house at No. 26 St. Marks Place operated by Frank Lattfe, a Hungarian, from whom, bit by bit she took his life savings, $3000.

Finally he had her arrested. She pleaded guilty to grand larceny Feb. 28 last and was sentenced.

She did not seem to be annoyed by the sentence. But she did fear the deportation which will follow. "I'll kill myself before I'll return to Europe," she said.

B. Shepherd on William Proctor and Frank Daniels, two of the defendants and employees of M. B. Davis, one of the principals in the case.

Proctor was sentenced to 60 days in the Escambia county jail here while Daniels was ordered to serve a three months term.

Davis and Charles Land, prominent turpentine operators, and Carey Whitefield, a third employe of Davis, the others convicted, will be arraigned for sentence Friday, May 29.

NEW RULE WILL SIMPLIFY CONTEST OF INCOME TAXES

Revenue Department Slashes Red Tape Surrounding Disputed Claims.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23. — The Bureau of Internal Revenue will place rules in effect June 1 which are expected to simplify the handling of controversial income tax cases and expedite their movement through bureau routine and to the board of tax appeals. After that date, it was announced today, only three instead of the present four hearings will be held before internal revenue officials on contested cases.

While no definite calculation can be made as to the time saved by the change, bureau officials expect it will expedite cases two weeks to a month.

Under the new plan, the taxpayer who disagrees with the bureau's findings will make first protest and have the first hearing before conference committees in the income tax section. Failing of agreement there, the case then will be heard before a supervising internal revenue agent. If the taxpayer desires to carry the case higher, and if that hearing does not result in an agreement, appeal may be taken to the internal revenue commissioner.

Appeals from the bureau to the board of tax appeals are made by the taxpayer as heretofore, the bureau having no jurisdiction over the case once notice of appeal to the board is given.

CONTESTED WILL OF GROCER SUSTAINED BY JURY VERDICT

The will of Louis Stapelfeld, 88 years old, a retired grocer, who died March 2, 1924, was sustained yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Hamilton's court. Three jurors refused to sign the verdict. Stapelfeld bequeathed the bulk of his $50,000 estate to Mrs. Sophronia Barringer of 3141 St. Vincent avenue, his "good and faithful friend," as the will recited. This will was dated April 24, 1922, two months before he was declared of unsound mind by a jury in the Probate Court.

WOMAN, HURT IN FALL FROM AUTOMOBILE, DIES

Miss Josephine Zimmer, 22, Suffered Fractured Skull in Accident Wednesday.

Miss Josephine Zimmer, 22 years old, of 213 Marion street, a laundress, died yesterday afternoon at City Hospital of a fractured skull and internal injuries suffered last Wednesday night when she fell from the running board of an automobile at Lafayette avenue.

Miss Zimmer was standing at the corner of Eighteenth street and Lafayette avenue with Miss Mary Koval, 16, of 2303 South Twelfth street, waiting for a street car when an automobile driven by Neal Ogilvy, 19, of 1435 North Ninth street, a chauffer, passed. Mistaking Miss Zimmer for a girl friend, Charles Schieff of 1108 Madison street, who was in the machine, spoke to her and when he discovered his mistake apologized and offered to take the girls where ever they wished to go.

Accepting the invitation, Miss Zimmer asked to be driven west in Lafayette avenue until she overtook her sister, who, she believed, was walking west in Lafayette. She stood on the running board until the girl Miss Zimmer thought was her sister was overtaken, and when it was discovered that the girl was not her sister, she asked to be returned to Eighteenth and Lafayette. Ogilvy turned the machine around sharply, causing Miss Zimmer to fall from the running board.

Ogilvy was arrested and released on bond. He will be rearrested for the Coroner. The death was the sixty-sixth automobile fatality this year, as compared with 51 for the same period last year.

JUDGE TAYLOR FREE ON BOND, DUE IN COURT TOMORROW

ity, and had offered to buy van Claeb a new Ford and had left the scene under the impression his offer was satisfactory. Judge Taylor said he saw no justice in using the Police Department as a collection agency.

John J. Nangle, William LeBeatme, Charles Lemp, Tariton Francis and Rowe Garesche were among the others who tried to persuade Judge Taylor to accept bond. Garesche is a son-in-law of Judge Taylor.

As the day wore on, it was announced at the station that if Judge Taylor persisted in his determination to remain locked up until Monday, he would be taken to Police Court in a patrol wagon and, as is customary with bondless prisoners, would be placed in the court cage pending a hearing.

Judge Taylor, aside from conversations with his callers and the police, spent the day smoking cigars and reading newspapers and a book. He had removed his hat, coat and collar and stretched himself out on a hardwood bench. In a cell to one side were four negroes and to the other side, four women who were the first to obtain freedom, thanks to a professional bondsman.

Court Denies Prohibition Writ.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23. — Roy B. Garvey, Kansas City, charged with the murder of his father, Sept. 6, 1922, must go to trial, the Missouri supreme court, en banc, ruled today when it denied Garvey's motion for a rehearing on his application for a writ of prohibition against Circuit Judge Thomas B. Buckner of Kansas City to prevent the judge from sitting in the trial.

FRICKER SENTENCED TO BE HANGED JUNE 13

Farmer, Who Was Convicted of Murdering Dairy Maid's Husband, Denied New Trial.

Unless executive clemency intervenes, Emil Fricker, formerly well-to-do dairy farmer of Highland, Ill. will be hanged on Saturday, June 13, for the murder of John Nungesser, second husband of his former dairy maid, with whom he was infatuated. A motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge Louis Bernreuter in the Madison County Circuit Court at Edwardsville yesterday and sentence formally pronounced.

The condemned man accepted the sentence with calmness, as he did when a jury in the same court announced its findings and recommended the death penalty on April 3. "They oughtn't to push off on me a murder someone else did," was his only comment.

Testimony at the trial was that by thearts he had induced Eldo Wernle, his son-in-law and Jacob Landerb, a farmhand, to waylay and assassinate Nungesser, his neighbor, because Nungesser had married the dairy maid. The murder occurred on Sept. 15 last. After his arrest in this case, Fricker was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder, in 1920, of the woman's first husband, Robert Kehrli.

HELD ON SON'S STORY THAT HE KILLED GIRL

East Chicago (Ind.) Man Denies Knowledge of Killing of Child, 15, in November.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Information furnished East Chicago, Ind., police by an eleven-year-old boy involving his own father may result in clearing up the brutal murder last November of Florence Guazes, 15-year-old girl whose body, the head almost severed by a razor, was found in the rear of a foundry in the Indiana town.

The boy giving the information is Steven Yasovich. According to the boy, his father, Jack Yasovich, a 52-year-old laborer, came home the morning after the murder with his shirt spotted with blood. He forced the boy, Steven said, to heat water to wash away the stains.

"I've just killed that Guazes girl But don't you tell. If you do I'll kill you too," Steven quoted his father as saying. The elder Yasovich was arrested, but stoutly denied any knowledge of the killing.

MORE PRESSURE BY U. S. ON WAR DEBTORS LIKELY

Official Intimation in Washington of Desire to Publish Actual Obligations of Every Nation.

COOLIDGE SUMMONS SENATOR BORAH

Administration Also Feels That Relief and Reconstruction Loans Should Be Settled Now.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The Washington administration is giving consideration to the question of exerting additional pressure on the government's foreign debtors to hasten funding negotiations.

There was today the official intimation of a desire to publish the actual obligations of every nation indebted to the United States and show how much principal and interest has been received on account of those debts.

Another development was a visit to the White House by Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who was summoned by the President for a talk on the debts situation.

The information that the new steps to hurry funding negotiations were impending gave rise to a rumor that a meeting of the debt commission soon would be called.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Administration officials feel that there is even more justification for seeking settlement of relief and reconstruction loans advanced to various foreign governments after the World War than for urging payment of pre-armistice obligations.

Several governments to which relief and reconstruction advances were made have failed to pay anything on either interest or principal and their attention has been called to the special agreement made at the time under which they gave a specific pledge that there should be no discrimination against the United States and in favor of other governments in the repayment of such obligations.

27 SEAMEN IN SMALL BOATS PERISH IN STORM

Life-Saving Boats From Station on French Coast Hurled Back by Seas.

QUINTER, France, May 23.—Twenty-seven of 32 seamen in two small boats were drowned during a storm along the Brittany coast today. Life-saving boats from the St. Brieuc station were hurled back by heavy seas.

Two small sailing vessels were in distress off Kerity and Penmarch, and life-saving boats put out to the rescue. An hour later both lifeboats were found dashed almost to pieces with 15 or 16 life-savers dead, their bodies still strapped to the seats. They had perished in their attempt to rescue the men on the ships.

The two vessels battled with the waves for a long time, but eventually both were swept upon the great rocks guarding the coast, and 12 men perished. Hundreds of the coast folk watched their struggles, but without power to aid them.

SALARY CLAIM HELD INVALID

Discharged Deputy Food Commissioner Loses $1,400 Contest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23. — The claim of R. E. L. Marrs of Carthage against the state for $1400 in salary as a deputy foor and drug commissioner, for a period of six months when he was not actually serving in the department, was overruled by the Supreme Court en banc today, when it affirmed a judgment of the Cole County circuit court in refusing to grant a writ of mandamus compelling payment of Marrs' salary.

Marrs was removed as a deputy November 30, 1921, by E. L. Barnhouse, then pure food and drug commissioner, without stating cause. Marrs contended the removal was illegal, asserting one section of the law fixed a definite date for expiration of his term. That section, part of a law establishing standards for inspection of ice cream, superseded another section which made the term of deputies dependent upon the pleasure of the commissioner, Marrs contended.

Marrs, after his removal, filed salary vouchers every month, asserting he still legally held the job, although prevented from doing the work by the alleged illegal dismissal.

COOLIDGE IMPROVES, LEAVES FOR CRUISE

Slight Illness Overcome and President Boards Mayflower for Week End.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Apparently recovered from a slight attack of indigestion which caused him to cancel his morning engagements, President Coolidge left this afternoon for an over-Sunday cruise down the Potomac on the Mayflower. With him were Mrs. Coolidge and a group of friends.

On the yacht also were the two White House physicians who had attended the President earlier in the day.

The President appeared at his office in a wing of the White House as usual at 9 o'clock, but half an hour later advised Secretary Sanders that he felt ill. He walked back to the White House proper to lie down and a call immediately was sent out for physicians.

They found that Coolidge had eaten something at breakfast which did not agree with him, but that his illness was not serious. In a short time the President was able to go to his study to work on routine business and while there had a brief conference with Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, on an angle of international relations

12 YEARS IN QUEST OF DRUG TO FIT A DEFINITE NEED

Dr. Veader Leonard Tells of His Laboratory Work in Discovering New Powerful Germicide.

Science and determination, setting out 12 years ago to find a drug to fit a definite need of prime importance to mankind, finally produced an acceptable laboratory product a year and a half ago, and brought it to the point of being a commercial remedy two months ago, used throughout this nation and spreading in use around the globe.

It was a young man two years out of medical school who set out on this scientific quest in 1913. Yesterday, this physician, a trim figure of not quite 37 years, with all the poise of the professional man told the assembled members of a leading medical organization about the clinical application of his discovery and was hailed by them as one who has made a distinct contribution to the world.

He is Dr. Veader Leonard, an independent research worker in the department of bacteriology of Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene, Baltimore, Md., member of the National Research Council, chairman of the Clinical Committee on Internal Urinal Antisepsis and discoverer of hexylresorcinol. His address, along technical lines, was before the closing session of the annual meeting of the American Urological Association, comprising the leading medical specialists whose field embraces the need for Dr. Leonard's new drug.

Tells of His Quest.

Dr. Leonard told of his quest in conversation with a Post-Dispatch reporter after his address. One thing he emphasized particularly was that the new drug is not a cure-all and is not safe for self-administration; it may be taken with safety only while the patient is under direct observation of a physician.

Hexylresorcinol is a germicide for the treatment of infections of the urinary tract. Its name is not so formidable as it looks at first glance — hex-yl-re-sor-cin-ol, with the accent on the "hex" and the "sor." The name betrays the formula, for the "hexyl" is significant of six certain units reacting with resorcinol, a poisonous acid akin to carbolic acid. The product, hexylresorcinol, is nonpoisonous, easy to take, internally in repeated large dose, and has 50 times the germicidal power of carbolic acid.

Simple, it seems, but back of the finished product are those years of patient experimentation, discouragement and difficulty. Yet there was the definite need that moved the young scientist—probably more than anything else medical men in this field needed was an internal urinary germicide that would give more than rather mediocre results.

Dr. J. R. Caulk President-Elect of American Urological Association.

Dr. John R. Caulk of 50 Vandeventer place is the president-elect of the American Urological Association, having been chosen at the annual business meeting, at Hotel Chase Friday. The association closed its twenty-second annual gathering yesterday.

Dr. Caulk, who was chairman of the local Arrangements Committee, is a specialist, with offices in the University Club Building. Dr. Clarence R. O'Crowley of Newark, N. J., is the new president, having been elected a year ago. The president-elect serves as such for a year before actually taking office. This is the leading organization of genito-urinary specialists.

Dr. Homer G. Hamer of Indianapolis, Ind., and Dr. James B. Cross of Buffalo, N. Y., were re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively. Directors chosen were: Dr. French Carey of Chicago, Dr. Montague Boyd of Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Benjamin Thomas of Philadelphia and Dr. William Spitzer of Denver, Colo.

Technical papers were read at the sessions, beginning Thursday.

MUNICIPAL OPERA SEASON, WHICH BEGINS TOMORROW, TO LAST TWELVE WEEKS

THE Municipal Opera season, which opens tomorrow night, will extend for 12 weeks this year instead of 10, as in 1924, it was announced yesterday. Removal of the Fashion Pageant, an event which occupied the last two weeks of the season, to the new Garden Theater in University City made possible the extension.

A resolution adopted by the Board of Aldermen Friday, authorized the longer season. The proposed schedule of productions had been planned for 10 weeks, and it is likely that two added weeks will be given over to revival of operas popular in former years. The 1919 season, which was the first, lasted six weeks, then for the next three years it was eight weeks, and last year was 10.

SON OF DEPARTMENT STORE OWNER ACCUSED OF ROBBERY

Edward Hillman Jr. Alleged to Have Used Revolver in Seizing Auto Claimed by Estranged Wife.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Edward Hillman Jr., son of the department store magnate, was arrested today on the charge of robbery with a gun. The warrant was taken out by his wife, Dorothy Martin Hillman, now living with her parents in Evanston.

Hillman appeared at an Evanston garage last night and seized a valuable automobile stored there in his wife's name. In order to induce the garage man to part with the machine, Hillman is said to have put a gun at his head. This argument succeeded and young Hillman left with the machine.

"The machine is mine and I never gave it to her," he said when asked to put up a $10,000 bond. "She took it from in front of my home." He gave bond.

The pair aroused public interest last fall when Mrs. Hillman ran off to New York a month after marriage. Hillman pursued the train in his automobile and sent frantic wires ahead to stop her. She reached New York, went into seclusion for a time and returned with her mother. It was said there was a reconciliation, but it was of short duration.

ALLEGED SHEPHERD JURY TAMPERER PUT UNDER BOND

To be Held Under It Until His Counsel Answers Questions Regarding Charge.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Sidelights again outshone courtroom activity at today's session of the trial of William D. Shepherd, for the murder by typhoid germ inoculation of his foster son, William N. McClintock. After the four jurors sworn in yesterday and the defendant had been locked up until 10 a. m. Monday, Judge Lynch summoned James Callan, charged with tampering with a juror. A harsh wrangle took place at the hearing, a climax being a demand by Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney, that William Scott Stewart, counsel for Shepherd, be held for contempt.

Callan was held under $2500 bond until his counsel replies to written questions regarding the story related by Philip J. Barry, former local head of Federal Department of Justice agents, who was dismissed from the venire when he told the prosecutor he had been "approached."

Barry told the court Callan, an old friend, represented himself as acting for counsel for Shepherd. Callan offered no money, Barry testified.

BOND ARRANGED BY 'JELLY ROLL' HOGAN REFUSED

Man Charged With Killing Policeman Goes Back to Jail When Source Is Learned.

After he had ordered the release on bond of John Vollman, charged with murder in the first degree, Circuit Judge Wurdemann at Clayton yesterday rescinded the order when he learned that "Jelly Roll" Hogan, leader of the Hogan gang, had arranged for the bond.

Vollman is charged with killing Rudolph Hartung, a plain clothes patrolman, in a pistol fight at 9201 South Broadway, in March. Vollman was wounded, but has recovered, and came into court yesterday with Gus. E. Koenig, 6217 Rober place, and "Cap" Troll, professional bondsman. After Koenig and Troll had qualified for $114,000 Judge Wurdemann fixed Vollman's bond at $20,000 and ordered him released.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Noble then asked Koenig and Troll who had asked them to go on Vollman's bond, and when both answered, "My old friend, Eddie Hogan," Judge Wurdemann inquired if they meant "Jelly Roll" Hogan. When they answered in the affirmative, Judge Wurdemann said:

"Mr. Clerk, this man is a gangster. Rescind my order and hold him without bond."

Vollman thereupon was led back to jail.

INCREASE IN AVERAGE SPAN OF HUMAN LIFE INDICATED

Widespread Acceptance of Principle of Prevention of Disease Seen as Chief Cause.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—In 1909, Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, submitting a report for the Roosevelt Commission, predicted the span of the average human life would soon be extended 15 years, and that the death rate, in the case of many diseases, would be materially reduced. Reports submitted tonight at the annual dinner meeting of the Hygiene Reference Board of the Life Extension Institute, in the Union League Club, indicated both of these predictions have virtually been realized.

On the face of this showing, Dr. Louis I. Dublin, insurance statistician, said ten more years should be added by 1950—making the average span of life 65 years.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—The Supreme Court en banc today granted a preliminary writ of prohibition, restraining Circuit Judge Huck of Ste. GOOD WILL TOURISTS OF COMMERCE CHAMBER HOME

Party, Traveling in Special Train, Visited 48 Cities and Towns in Northern Half of Missouri in Week.

Tired but triumphant, nearly 100 members of the Sales Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce returned home late yesterday after a Good Will tour in Missouri which took them through 48 cities and towns in the northern half of the state. The party, which traveled in a special train furnished by the Missouri Pacific railroad, started from St. Louis last Sunday night, making the first stop at Jefferson City Monday morning.

The trip, the 23rd to be made under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce, and designed primarily to give sales managers of the manufacturng and jobbing houses an opportunity to study at first hand the problems encountered by their sales forces on the road, was pronounced the most successful ever made. It has been an annual event since 1898, when the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce inaugurated the first trade trip, with the exception of a few years during the war.

Results of Great Benefit.

The results of the trips has without exception been of great advertising value to St. Louis and the many civic and commercial institutons represented. In charge of the party were Philip A. Becker of the Central Credit Corporation, chairman, and Scott Delkins, secretary. They were assisted by Roy S. Rauschkolb, manager of the Development Service department, and Robert E. Lee, secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association.

Everywhere on the trip the Good Will tour was given the heartiest reception. The last day's tour began at Mexico, where a night stop was made Friday nght. The first stop was made at Wellsville. Then Montgomery City, Warrenton, Wright City and Wentzville were visited in the order named before arriving at St. Charles.

There the tourists found themselves surrounded and outnumbered by the girls of Lindenwood College, so they quickly surrendered. They were driven directly to the college dining hall where lunch was served and an interesting program enjoyed until the two hours allotted were over. Guy C. Motley, secretary of the college, was a member of the touring party all week, but he had not disclosed the lavish plans made for a climax of the six days' festivities.

Five Public Night Meetings.

At each of the five night stops public meetings were held at which the residents of the various cities were addressed by the corps of speakers with the party. The programs, usually were in two sections, that of the homefolks invariably being given first place. Then the visitors told of the many advantages St. Louis had to offer, in addition to giving them a splendid musical entertainment. Besides the meetings many personal calls were made on the merchants.

Civic Development Noted.

The civic development of many of the communities visited was astonishing to most of the tourists. Everywhere were seen paved streets. White way lights and public buildings of expensive design and ample proportions. Department stores, though smaller than those in the Missouri metropolis, were quite as complete and stocked with goods of a quality to satisfy the most fastidious trade.

On every hand there were innumerable new automobiles. Culture and prosperity dominated the attitude and remarks of the crowds who gathered to meet the trains. But despite the stylish clothes of the girls and the city manners of the men and boys, everywhere there was a clamor for the souvenirs which the tourists presented lavishly.

Members of the party who had made similar trips to other trade territory expressed themselves as amazed at the progress they found in their own State. Without exception they voted the trip the best they ever had and one which is bound to accomplish great good, both for the city of St. Louis and for the cities visited.

Members of the Tour.

Among those who participated in the tour were:

John Patrick, Joseph B. Kleinhauser, Celsus O'Rear, R. D. Corlett, E. Robert Pommer, J. N. Browndyke, Scott Wilson, C. C. Hall, Phil A. Becker, W. H. Ogden, A. C. Smith, Julius Rosenberg, Lynn F. DRIVER HURT WHEN AUTO CRASHES INTO PHONE POLE

Peter Yachim, an oil filling station proprietor of 216 West Louis avenue, St. Louis County, suffered a fractured jaw and severe cuts on the throat at 6:10 p. m. yesterday when the automobile he was driving crashed into a telephone pole in the 9400 block on South Broadway.

Yachim said the accident was caused by a defective steering gear. He was taken to Alexian Brothers' Hospital, where his condition was pronounced critical.

PLAN JURY COURSE FOR WOMEN

A program of study to fit women in Missouri for jury service was discussed at a meeting of the Missouri Women's Legislative Committee yesterday at the Kirkwood Country Club, at which Mrs. George Mangold of St. Louis was elected chairman.

No definite action was taken but the suggestion will be submitted to the 350 member groups of the committee for consideration. A legislative program for 1927 will be prepared.

STRANDED WHALE DECLARED A SQUAT

Organization Using Vacant Clubhouse Has No Title to Site, Court Rules.

A decision handed down yesterday by Circuit Judge Miller that the Carondelet Motor Club has no right, title or interest to the present site of its clubhouse at 6700 South Levee. The property, the Court holds, is the property of Michael Hendy, a former city detective, and the club is practically a squatter.

If the decision is carried out the club will either have to pay Hendy for the land, dismantle its present clubhouse, which was an old excursion boat, or make it seaworthy again and put it back in the Mississippi River.

When the club was organized several years ago it fitted up a three-masted schooner as a place of amusement for its members. This became leaky, and in 1914 the club got rid of it and purchased the "Olga," which had come from the Gulf of Mexico with a valuable cargo aboard. The testimony showed that the whale was shipped to Chicago to be converted into shoe polish, and "The Olga" was handsomely fitted up as new quarters for the club. It was moored first in one place and then another, depending on the stage of the river, so that high water carried it to its proper location and left it on dry land some distance away from the water's edge.

Hendy filed suit in which he contended the club was unlawfully occupying the land in controversy. The club, in its reply, asserted that on the theory of undisputed possession for 10 years. A further defense was set up that the club had acquired title from a man who claimed prior ownership by squatter's rights. Hendy exhibited a chain of title dating back many years.

The decision, it is said, affects the title of other alleged squatters on the same locality. Hendy has another suit pending in which he seeks to dispossess George Henneberger, Constant Henneberger and Henry Henneberger from land on Haven street. In this suit he also asks for $10,000 damages.

TILDEN W. ORCUTT DIES OF ACUTE APPENDI

He Was Inventor of Vacuum Designed to Eliminate Moths and Other Insects.

Tilden Webster Orcutt, 47 years old, died yesterday morning at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium from acute appendicitis, for which he had been operated upon. He is survived by his wife and five children.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from an undertaker's parlor at 4235 Lindell boulevard, with interment at Valhalla Cemetery.

Orcutt was the inventor of a vacuum vault designed to eliminate moths and other insects. The government entomologists tested the system and found it effective, and a corporation was formed to market the invention.

BILL TO REPEAL VAGRANCY LAW BEFORE ALDERMEN

Randall Introduces Measure to Knock Out Ordinance Being Invoked in "Clean-up" Drive.

Alderman Randall explained yesterday that he had introduced a bill in the Board of Aldermen Friday to repeal the vagrancy ordinance, which has been invoked by the police against persons in various walks of life in the new "cleanup" campaign, because he thought the law was being used against persons who are not vagrants, and because he didn't believe in such a law.

He introduced the bill of his own volition. His constituency is the Second Ward, in North St. Louis. Elucidating his motive, he said:

"I don't believe in such a law. My idea of a vagrant is that he is a bum, with no place to live and nothing to eat, who is a menace to the community and has to steal to live. A man who can take care of himself shouldn't be classed as a vagrant, even if he takes a bet now and then. The police have been arresting all sorts of people under this ordinance."

Bill Is Second Snag.

The purport of the bill was not known to other Aldermen when it was introduced, but a Post-Dispatch reporter, investigating yesterday, discovered its object and questioned Alderman Randall.

This is the second snag in the course of the policy of wholesale arrests to break up the breeding places of crime. The first was the reversal of Police Court convictions under this ordinance upon appeal to the Court of Criminal Correction. In the latter tribunal, Judge Gayer on Thursday set aside vagrancy fines against persons picked up by the police dragnet but not known to be guilty of crime.

Use of the vagrancy ordinance began with the primary idea of getting convictions against horse-race bookmakers, since a technicality made it virtually impossible to convict them of gambling. It is considered by the police that it is vital to the war on crime to stop gambling of all sorts.

Five alleged bookmakers were fined $200 each as "vagrants" by Police Judge Rosecan on Thursday, at the same time that the higher court was hearing appeals from vagrancy fines assessed by Police Judges Beck and Rosecan. The Police Judges were appointed by Mayor Miller, under his "law enforcement" policy and took office on May 1, the same day the police announced that the vagrancy ordinance would be invoked.

Might Veto Repeal.

On first consideration at City Hall it is believed possible that the repeal ordinance may be passed. However, in view of Mayor Miller's attitude, it is likely he would veto the repeal, and there is some doubt whether the necessary two-thirds vote to pass it over his veto could be obtained. The repeal bill has not yet been referred to committee.

The repeal bill carries an emergency clause, which would make it effective at once upon approval.

The vagrancy ordinance, which was approved on July 5, 1921, and carries a maximum fine for viola-

He Was Inventor of Vacuum Vault Designed to Eliminate Moths and Other Insects.

Tilden Webster Orcutt, 47 years old, died yesterday morning at the Missouri Baptist Sanitarium from acute appendicitis, for which he had been operated upon. He is survived by his wife and five brothers.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon from an undertaker's parlor at 4235 Lindell boulevard, with interment at Valhalla Cemetery.

Orcutt was the inventor of a vacuum vault designed to eliminate moths and other insects. Government entomologists tested the system and found it effective. A corporation was formed to market the invention.

BILL TO REPEAL VAGRANCY LAW BEFORE ALDERMEN

Randall Introduces Measure to Knock Out Ordinance Being Invoked in "Clean-up" Drive.

Alderman Randall explained yesterday that he had introduced a bill in the Board of Aldermen Friday to repeal the vagrancy ordinance, which has been invoked by the police against persons in various walks of life in the new "cleanup" campaign, because he thought the law was being used against persons who are not vagrants, and because he didn't believe in such a law.

He introduced the bill of his own volition. His constituency is the Second Ward, in North St. Louis. Elucidating his motive, he said:

"I don't believe in such a law. My idea of a vagrant is that he is a bum, with no place to live and nothing to eat, who is a menace to the community and has to steal to live. A man who can take care of himself shouldn't be classed as a vagrant, even if he takes a bet now and then. The police have been arresting all sorts of people under this ordinance."

Bill Is Second Snag.

The purport of the bill was not known to other Aldermen when it was introduced, but a Post-Dispatch reporter, investigating yesterday, discovered its object and questioned Alderman Randall.

This is the second snag in the course of the policy of wholesale arrests to break up the breeding places of crime. The first was the reversal of Police Court convictions under this ordinance upon appeal to the Court of Criminal Correction. In the latter tribunal, Judge Gayer on Thursday set aside vagrancy fines against persons picked up by the police dragnet but not known to be guilty of crime.

Use of the vagrancy ordinance began with the primary idea of getting convictions against horse-race bookmakers, since a technicality made it virtually impossible to convict them of gambling. It is considered by the police that it is vital to the war on crime to stop gambling of all sorts.

Five alleged bookmakers were fined $300 each as "vagrants" by Police Judge Rosecan on Thursday, at the same time that the higher court was hearing appeals from vagrancy fines assessed by Police Judges Beck and Rosecan. The Police Judges were appointed by Mayor Miller, under his "law enforcement" policy and took office on May 1, the same day the police announced that the vagrancy ordinance would be invoked.

Might Veto Repeal.

On first consideration at City Hall it is believed possible that the repeal ordinance may be passed. However, in view of Mayor Miller's attitude, it is likely he would veto the repeal, and there is some doubt whether the necessary two-thirds vote to pass it over his veto could be obtained. The repeal bill has not yet been referred to committee.

The repeal bill carries an emergency clause, which would make it effective at once upon approval.

The vagrancy ordinance, which was approved on July 5, 1927, and carries a maximum fine for violation of $300, defines vagrants as follows:

"1. Every person without any visible means of support, who may be found loitering around houses of ill fame, gambling houses or places where liquors are sold or drunk. 2. Every person who shall attend or operate any gambling device or apparatus. 3. Every person who shall be engaged in practicing any trick or device to procure money or other thing of value. 4. Every person who shall be engaged in any unlawful calling whatsoever."

Captain Aboard His "Mattress Ship" on Arrival Here

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

Makes River Trip of 202 Miles on Mattress

Iowan, Bronzed and Wet, Sails Safely Into Harbor Here — Power Furnished by Small Motor.

On the crest of the waves from a passing tug, a "mattress ship" sailed into St. Louis harbor at 3:30 yesterday afternoon after an uneventful journey of 202 miles from Keokuk, Ia. Aboard, bronzed, wet, and smiling was Sidney Helms of Des Moines, Ia., who was cook and crew and the captain, too, and the mate of the floating bed.

His boat was an ordinary mattress of the kind that Helms sells up in Des Moines. He got the idea of his trip, he said, from using the mattress to fish from in the Des Moines river. For Helms, who came originally from Pine Bluff, Ark., is a devout angler. Aboard he carried a box of fishing tackle, but it was never opened. "There wasn't any time for fishing," Helms told reporters.

The mattress was tacked under a slight board frame, which was so built as to throw up a toboggan-like fender in front. At the rear was attached a small motor which furnished power for most of the journey. Motor trouble just after he left Keokuk Wednesday, however, delayed him and while companions who accompanied him in a motor boat tinkered with the engine Helms steered with a paddle and let the current carry him. About eight miles an hour was his average speed.

Twice he encountered brisk winds, Helms said, and the waves on the river washed over him and his craft. At his stopping points along the way he was met by his daughter, Emma. She was an anxious young lady for, as she told reporters, she wasn't sure whether her father could swim.

Helms was met, when he came to port just above Eads Bridge, by a crowd of perhaps 500 people, for his coming had been advertised by local dealers and distributers of the mattress and a group of St. Louis bathing girls was taken aboard a raft made of two of the mattresses tacked to wooden frames and towed for a short distance around in the river.

312,000 CATHOLIC PRIESTS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Statistics prepared by the Society of the Divine Word show that while there are approximately 312,000 Catholic priests in the whole world, there still is a great demand for workers in Catholic mission fields. It is estimated that of the earth's population of 1,700,000,000 there are about 300,000,000 Catholics.

Two-thirds of the total number of priests, the society's report said, "are doing pastoral and educational work in Europe and only one-third devote themselves to pastoral and missionary work outside of Europe.

"In Africa there is only one priest for every 400 Catholics and $2,000 pagans; in Oceanica, only one priest for every 300 Catholics and 110,000 pagans; in Japan, only one priest for every 880 Catholics and 220,000 pagans; in China, only one priest for every 800 Catholics and 100,000 pagans, and in India only one priest for every 860 Catholics and 100,000 pagans."

MRS. WOODROW WILSON SAILS FOR VISIT TO FRANCE

Registered Under Name of "Miss Eleanor Collins" on the Liner Majestic.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the war President, registered on the rolls of the liner Majestic as "Miss Eleanor Collins," sailed at 1 o'clock this morning for Cherbourg, whence she will go to Paris by motor.

Mrs. Wilson has as her traveling companion Miss Belle Baruch, daughter of Bernard M. Baruch, who was chairman of the War Industries Board under President Wilson.

Wearing deep mourning and carrying a boquet of white gardenias under her arm, Mrs. Wilson said it was her rule to "say nothing." This is her first trip abroad since the memorable trip with President Wilson, to negotiate the Treaty of Versailles after the World War. Baruch accompanied her and his daughter to the steamer. After a few days in Paris, Mrs. Wilson plans to motor through France and possibly to visit Belgium.

BRIDGE APPROACH TO GO TO HIGHEST COURT

Writ of Error Has Been Granted in Decision Denying Mandamus Order.

Supporters of the abandoned northeastern railroad approach to the Free Bridge announce their intention of taking their cause to the United States Supreme Court, with the allowance Friday by the Supreme Court of Missouri of a writ of error in a decision of that body last March denying a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the City of St. Louis to prosecute suits for condemnation of land for the approach in East St. Louis.

The plaintiffs in the petition for the writ of error are Joseph J. Luechtefeld and F. William Kuehl, describing themselves as taxpayers of St. Louis. They were also plaintiffs in the previous legal efforts to compel the Mayor, Comptroller and County Counselor to prosecute the condemnation suits, and the petition was filed by Luke E. Hart, former Alderman, who instituted the previous proceedings.

According to Hart, the present action is the final recourse of supporters of the approach. The granting of the writ of error calls for a decision by a member of the Federal Supreme bench within 30 days on whether the subject is one for review and decision by the United States Supreme Court.

The condemnation suits were dismissed in Federal Court at East St. Louis last November by City Counselor Senti in compliance with the vote of the people on the bridge referendum in the Nov. 4 election, and after the Election Board refused a recount of the vote. The petition on which the writ of error was granted attacks the repealing ordinance as being not legislative and not repealing ordinance 32,616, which established the right-of-way for the approach and provided for condemnation of property involved.

Opponents of the approach have declared the approach will cost $5,000,000, while supporters still maintain that it can be built for the $1,500,000 provided by the 1923 bond issue.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review says:

"Public interest in the market has been keen for several weeks, but this week a good many investors found themselves unable any longer to remain in the grandstands and look on. One by one they began to re-enter the market, which has become more inviting with each fresh advance. Public participation still is small, but the important point is that until this week buying of the character that forced prices so high after the election had not been seen since the downturn in stocks early in March. Large institutions, business men and wealthy investors in position to buy outright have been accumulating stocks ever since late in April, and some pools have resumed activities.

Two-Million-Share Days Return.

"Meanwhile stocks have been going up. Prices have gained persistently since the turn of the present month, and nothing tempts like steady gains, providing strikes seem to promise clear weather ahead. The week brought a return of 2,000,000 share days on the New York Exchange. . Never in its history had the New York curb market been so busy before. Activity in public utilities this week compelled the management to enlarge the space devoted to issues of that character. Numerous pools and large dealers took the opportunity to unload substantial lines, but prices nevertheless improved faster than at any time in present movement. Although the public is getting back into the market, it has not lost its head and so far is not even the controlling factor.

A Selective Market.

"Essentially the market continues to be a selective one. Stocks are being picked with a degree of care, and for that matter, wisdom that the public never shows when it becomes the biggest power in an advance. Insiders hear what is going on in a particular security and then buy stock. The stock advances. Afterward announcements of a merger, splitup or increased dividend tell the story of the rise. Those on the outside who watch several such performances begin to gain confidence that what has happened in one case may happen in another. New rumors are listened to and acted upon. Eventually what has heretofore been a market for rich men only has become broader in a short while if things keep up as they are beginning. Now that stocks are about up to the peak levels at which the public left the market two and a half months ago, the public may feel that its judgment has been vindicated.

Rubber at New High.

"Business goes on about as before. The market in such commodities as wheat and cotton is awaiting crop reports. Weather conditions are watched closely. Perhaps no stabilization in the leading agricultural groups can be expected until early summer. Iron and steel conditions have made no material improvement, and things may grow somewhat worse before they get better, but the belief is that the industry before long will pass its poorest period for the present. Signs of revival in the summer are seen by some of the shrewd prophets. Crude rubber prices have touched new high levels. Hand-to-mouth buying still is the rule in virtually all lines, but with the railroads giving their best performance in their history dealers will scarcely see advantage in stocking up with goods.

Easy Money Factor.

"Increasing confidence in the sound position of business and certain definite signs of better times overcast make investors willing to accept security risks. Pronounced ease in money rates, however, and the reasonable assurance that money will remain plentiful for some time to come still stand out as the great distinguishing feature of the present market. Liberty bonds held at their peaks for the year and sound corporation bonds are taken immediately when new offerings appear. Advances in the reserve ratios testify to the immense reservoirs of credit in the country, and nothing in the statistics indicates that it will be drawn upon heavily soon for the expansion of our own business enterprises.

Sterling Cable $4.86⅛.

"Chief interest in the foreign exchange market during the week was attached to the further advance that carried sterling cables up to $4.86⅛, within a small fraction of parity. This movement was followed by various statements in regard to forces that have been at work by which this higher level was established and to the power exerted to carry along the upward movement that actually started many months ago. Representatives of leading bankers, in discussing the movement, now say that New York banks in the period of the steady advance transferred large amounts of deposits to London, finding employment there for these funds at equal to a net of 5 per cent. Statements in detail reported these transfers by New York banks to amount in various cases from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, reaching an aggregate of several hundred million dollars. Leading foreign exchange dealers are tacit confirmation to these statements, and in addition said that a large amount of the banking buying of spot sterling had been balanced by sales of sterling for forward delivery at a discount of ¼ cent a month. The transfer of funds is understood to have been helped or directed by affiliations of the English Government.

French Francs Down.

"French exchange showed a declining tendency all through the week, although rallies came at times after large sales had forced the rate to lower levels. The greatest weakness followed statements in regard to the plans of the new French Government to advance the debt to the United States. Checks on Paris held as low as 5.11½ yesterday, compared with 5.19 a week ago. Italian exchange was weak in the first few days, lira checks selling down to 4 cents, then rallying to 4.08 following statements in regard to the Italian debt, but declined again yesterday. Wide fluctuations occurred in Norwegian and Danish exchanges, but gains made in the first half of the week were retained to a good extent when other rates declined. Spanish pesetas showed a strong tone the greater part of the week. Brazilian exchange also developed strength, moving up 60 points from the low level of the preceding week."

Prices Irregular Saturday.

"Little progress was made in either direction in speculative stocks in today's short but active session of the stock market. Increased profit-taking brought about an easier trend at the close. Individual issues registered sharp advances before the end of the session, however, notably Union Bag & Paper, Brown Shoe, Wright Aero and May Department Stores. Motors were fairly well supported, with Pierce-Arrow issues featuring. Case, Iron Pipe and some of the steel shares ruled easier. In the bond market chief interest centered in the foreign group, which worked steadily higher. Prices as a rule were steady in quiet trading.

Further Price Adjustments.

"The general steadiness of the list in the face of rather general profit-taking emphasized the assorptive power of the market. Speculative securities moved within comparatively narrow limits as further price adjustments were made. Despite the increased offerings several new high levels were reached during the day. Nash Motors sold up to 430, a record high, while American Can established a new top for all time and International Paper was in urgent demand at the close ending the year. National Distillery also bettered its previous high before easing off on profit-taking. Oils maintained a generally firm tone, while rail shares as a group acted well, several of the high-priced investment issues moving forward in response to further accumulation.

Foreign Exchanges Quiet.

"Transactions were in small volume in the foreign exchange market and fluctuations were narrow. The general tone was a trifle easier. Weakening of French francs this week called attention to the general firmness of Belgian francs and the diminishing discount at which rates were quoted.

"Commodities were fairly quiet and generally steady. Cotton prices tended to rally, with active months advancing about $2 a bale. Grain prices were firmer at the start.

Weekly Bank Statement.

"Excess reserves of the Clearing House banks, revealed in the weekly statement issued today, amounted to $41,439,280. The surplus decreased $24,237,360. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $19,039,000.

Weekly Metal Review

NEW YORK, May 23.—The steel market has developed a little more stability during the past week and, while orders continued in sufficient volume to look for far into the future, they were more cautious and in a few cases were of somewhat larger volume. Prices were well maintained, which added confidence. Inquiries were in the market for rails and pipe from the Far East, but foreign competition was expected to be keen for this business.

Pig iron was in fair demand, although the buying was not spotted. Prices were steady.

Copper has remained quiet. No improvement has been reported in the demand for finished products, and buyers for domestic consumption are taking a little disposition to operate above the 13½-cent level for electrolytic delivered in Connecticut Valley points. Foreign markets have been quiet, also, with exporters holding off, but prices have been generally well maintained and sellers evidently influenced by the bullish view of recent statistics and the reports of curtailed production.

The latter is expected to make itself felt with the increasing demand and the market meanwhile is holding steady with occasional small sales at about the 13¾-c level.

Tin has made but feeble response to rising prices at London owing to the ingrained attitude of consumers and prospective good increase in visible supply. Talk of the possibility of limited buying by independent tin plate mills has been the source of considerable comment. May metal is scarce and offerings for June shipment are limited. Mexican ore is now but little above an import basis.

Zinc was a little more active and prices slightly higher, influenced by the firmer ruling abroad.

Antimony declined early but steadied up at the end of the week on the report that merchants wer purchasing in China.

HEBER NATIONS' CASE COMING UP TOMORROW

Former State Official Accused of Dry Law Conspiracy—Two Co-Defendants Confessed.

Trial of Heber Nations, formerly State Labor Commissioner, on charges of conspiracy to violate the Volstead law in "protecting" the beer output of the Griesedieck Brewery in 1923, is set for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning before Federal Judge Faris.

Charles S. Prather, formerly State Food and Drug Commissioner, and Raymond B. Griesedieck, secretary-treasurer of the brewery, are codefendants, but both have made confessions implicating themselves and Nations in the "protection" plot, and it is expected they will be Government witnesses. Griesedieck asserted he paid about $15,000 to Prather for "protection" at the rate of $1 for each case of beer sold. Prather is understood to have stated he acted in behalf of Nations, who received the greater share of the money.

Nations, who is publisher of a daily newspaper at Jefferson City, has charged that his present predicament is due to "persecution" by bootleggers, because he is a brother of Gus O. Nations, formerly chief prohibition enforcement agent here. Pamphlets circulated over the signature of Dr. A. H. Post, superintendent of the Missouri Antisaloon League, have made similar charges and have criticised John C. Dyott, special Assistant Attorney-General, who will be in charge of the prosecution.

The conspiracy charge is a felony, punishable by a maximum of two years' imprisonment, or $10,000 fine, or both.

SAYS FIGHT, NOT HEART TROUBLE, CAUSED DEATH

Brother-in-Law of August Hossenlopp Tells of Finding Him on Floor After Report of Row.

INVESTIGATION MAY RESULT IN INQUEST

Victim Was Living Alone in Former Club Near Glencoe When Supposed Encounter Occurred.

Facts which lead the family of August Hossenlopp, 33 years old, to believe that his death May 12 at city hospital was the result of a fight and not caused by heart trouble, as physicians reported, were related to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night by Hossenlopp's brother-in-law, F. J. Schmidt, grocer, at 4431 Gravois avenue.

Schmidt's report to the Detective Bureau and Deputy Sheriff Grupp of St. Louis County, has started an investigation toward opening of an inquest. Coroner Vitt is opposed to exhuming the body, which was buried at National Cemetery at Jefferson Barracks, since Hossenlopp was a veteran, unless concrete evidence of foul play is uncovered.

"Hossenlopp was living with his wife and baby in what used to be a club near Glencoe, on the Meramec River," Schmidt related. "A few weeks ago the wife and child went away for a while, and Hossenlopp was there alone.

Ax Handle Near Him.

"On May 5 I received a telephone call from Glencoe to the effect that there had been some trouble at my brother-in-law's club, and I would best come out to look after him. I found him lying on the floor. He was unable to speak and to all appearances was paralyzed. Near him lay an ax handle.

"Since the death of Hossenlopp I have hear more definite rumors in Glencoe of a fight at his place. I have turned the names of supposed witnesses over to the authorities and do not feel at liberty to divulge their names or other facts which might hamper the investigation."

Policeman Called.

Hossenlopp was removed from the Gravois street address on May 11 after a patrolman had been called. He appeared at that time to be suffering an apoplectic stroke. The next day he died. Dr. J. J. Burdick of 2196 East Grand avenue, who had been treating Hossenlopp, agreed with the hospital physicians that chronic heart trouble caused his death.

The investigation was the indirect cause of an automobile accident in which Deputy Sheriff Grupp was badly hurt Friday night. With Detective-Sergeant Egenreither driving the police machine, Grupp and Alyward were moving north on Kingshighway near Kansas avenue when they collided with a machine driven by Probationary Patrolman Stanley Wormack of 4147 Quincy avenue. Grupp suffered a fractured right arm, scalp wounds and injuries to the chest. He was removed to his home, 3809 Wise avenue, St. Louis County. Wormack and Egenreither each claimed the other was on the wrong side of the street and accused each other of responsibility for the accident.

The New SPECIAL SIX COACH

A COACH IN NAME ONLY

THE New Studebaker Special Six Coach is different from all other closed cars to which the name "Coach" is applied.

No other coach within several hundred dollars of its price equals it for roominess. It has abundant room for 5 passengers. And room to enter or leave without causing occupant of folding seat to get out.

Compare it with other coaches and you'll realize its superiority in materials and craftsmanship. Doors are broad, seats full-width, with genuine mohair-and-wool upholstery. No sacrifice of quality for the sake of price. In appearance and comfort, it suggests a fine 5-passenger coupe.

Come in and see this new different coach—ride in it—test its remarkable 65 horsepower performance. Note the price: $1595, f. o. b. factory—slightly higher, because the quality is so much finer.

HAINES DOES GOOD JOB OF RELIEF WORK

Centerfielder Puts Team in Front With Four-Bagger and Doubles a Runner at the Plate.

By Burt Whitman,
Sports Editor, Boston Herald.

BOSTON, May 23.—The Braves outhatted the Cards this afternoon but the Rickeymen outscored the Bancrofts, 9 to 5, which gives them the three-game series, two games to one.

Ed Dyer started for the Cards, but he seemed to have not too much magic on his southpaw delivery. He retired in the fourth and Jess Haines finished the game and finished it stylishly and effectively, quite deserving the honor of being the winning pitcher.

Jess Barnes, then "Rosy" Wilfred Ryan, followed by Kyle Graham, with the venerable Rube Marquard bringing up the rear guard, pitched and toiled in vain for the Braves.

Mueller Star of Game.

Heine Mueller ought to have particularly good treatment on the train to Brooklyn tonight. He played a whale of a game in center field. He contributed his daily gem of a catch, robbing Pinch-hitter Padgett in the seventh when he raced into short right center and caught the liner down close to the ground.

His home run to the flagpole corner in right center in the sixth with Bottomley on base broke the three-three tie then existing and let the Cards get out in front where they stayed for the balance of the afternoon.

Jimmy Cooney, as a result of the O'Farrell deal, was back at short and conducted himself well. His double to the score board in left center in the second sent over the first two Card runs.

Cooney Doubles in Pinch.

Bottomley started the second with a single to right and three Card runs were scored before the Missourians were retired. A Mueller single, Jim Cooney's double and Schmidt's single followed Botton-

'We Have a Chance,' Says Connie Mack

Athletics Sound in All Departments, Manager Declares

Pilot, Who Scrapped Championship Team in 1914, Discussed Changes in Baseball Play.

By J. Roy Stockton,

"PENNANT? No, I'm not predicting anything like that. But I have a good ball club. It is sound in every department. It is a fact. And it will be a contender in the present American League race. But baseball is an uncertain thing and I'm not excited over my team. I won't be disappointed if we don't win the pennant. But we have a chance."

It was Connie Mack speaking, the man who won four pennants in five years and then scrapped the Philadelphia Athletics because the city was tired of a winner and the players wanted million dollar salaries. When he scrapped that famous Athletic machine after it had lost four straight world series games, to the Boston Braves in 1914, Mack said he'd have another winner in a few years. And he set out to build a winner, another championship team.

"BUT baseball is an uncertain thing, Mack knows that today. And ten seasons have elapsed and still "another championship team" has not yet arrived. The baseball world feels that it is almost here. The men of Connie Mack are in first place. And as Connie says, the team is sound, and the baseball world thinks that Mack has a great chance this year of putting over another winner.

CONNIE MACK, 63, MANAGING HIS 25TH MAJOR LEAGUE TEAM

CORNELIUS McGILLICUDDY, or "Connie Mack," as he is known in the baseball world, was born at Brookfield, Mass., Dec. 23, 1862. He played with Meridian in 1884, Hartford in 1885 and 1886, Washington from 1886 to 1889, Buffalo in 1890, Pittsburg from 1891 to 1896, being manager from 1894 to 1896; was manager of the Milwaukee club from 1897 to 1900 and has been manager of the Philadelphia Athletics since 1901.

Thus Connie Mack, now 63 years old, is managing his twenty-fifth American League team this season. In his playing days he was a catcher.

"Nowadays, If You Devise a New Play on Monday, the Other Fellow Uses It on Tuesday."

"More Competition Now."

"BASEBALL has changed since the days of that Athletic team," said Mack reminiscently. "Competition is greater. It's a real fight to build a winner nowadays. The owners of every club are pressing their managers to build and win. Scouts are everywhere. Magnates are bidding high for players. That's why the major club has to buy as well as scout. Competition is keen.

"Oh I would have had a team in first place before this if it had not been for the Federal League and the war. I have found many fine ball players. Look over the roster of my teams for the last few years. I've found the players. But there has been unexpected competition.

"Another change is that your individual stuff is no longer your own individual property. In the old

SISLER KNOCKS HOME RUN OFF ROMMEL, ROBERTSON HITS ONE AGAINST GROVES

Bennett Leads in Batting Attack With Four Safeties — Local Pitcher Shows a Punch With Three-Base Swat and Single — 10,000 See Game.

By Herman Wecke.

Ernie Wingard returned to the ranks of pitchers who have started and finished games for the Browns, when he went the full distance against the Athletics yesterday and came through with a victory. The score was 8 to 5.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 persons saw Sisler's men gain their first 1925 victory over the American League pace-makers, who retained their first place margin of two games, since the Senators also lost.

Wingard was hit hard. He was found for 11 hits. But he managed to outlast Ed Rommel, Mack's knuckle-ball star, who went to the hill in spite of a badly swollen jaw, the result of an abscess on a tooth, and "Lefty" Groves, costly southpaw, who was in there for the last three rounds. Mack's two star hill men were found for a total of 14 safeties and these included two doubles, a triple by Wingard and home runs by Sisler and Robertson. The four bagger for Robbie was his eighth of the year. Sisler's came off Rommel and Robbie's off Groves.

The Browns put on a real attack in the fifth, when six hits drove Rommel to the showers. It incidentally added four runs to the Brownie total and that quartette would have proved enough to give the home boys a victory by a margin of one run.

Wingard Finishes Strong.

Although Wingard was hit freely, he had but one really bad round. That was the sixth, when he was found for five safeties. The Macks still had the sacks peopled when Lamar rolled to McManus to end the round. The Alabama southpaw was staggering about in this inning. He came back strong, the Athletics getting but two safeties in the remaining three frames. He finished by retiring seven successive batters. That finish was easily his best showing of the season.

Wingard gave evidence of being a real hitter, when he clubbed Sisler's men into the lead in the third inning. Gerber opened the round with a single and then the Alabama left-hander crossed the opposition by hitting at the sphere instead of sacrificing. The result was a line drive far over Simmons' head for three bases and Gerber got home. And then Wingard showed base-running ability. He stayed between third and home when Robertson rolled to Bishop, but when the secondsacker tossed to Poole, he set sail for home and arrived safely ahead of Poole's toss to Cochrane.

Row Athletics Scored.

In the enemy third, the League leaders picked up a single marker. With two out, Simmons doubled to left and crossed the plate when Robertson missed a hard smash from Miller's bat.

The count was knotted in the fifth. Galloway was safe on Robertson's second error, but was forced by Cochrane. Rommel then hit between Williams and Jacobson for two sacks and Cochrane tallied. Bishop walked, but Wingard settled down and retired the next two clubbers.

Sisler's men broke loose with a swat attack in their portion of the fifth, which included six safeties and drove Rommel to the showers. Gerber started it with a single. This time Wingard put down a sacrifice. Robertson went out and then came the fireworks. Bennett's third straight single sent Gerber home.

Sisler Swats a Homer.

Sisler then hit into the right field bleachers for a homer, scoring Bennett ahead of him. Williams started it all over with a double and got home on McManus' single. Jacobson doubled and Dixon walked and so did Rommel; Andrews going in to pitch. Gerber, up for the second time, forced Dixon to end the round.

There was an outburst of Athletic base hits in the sixth, but Wingard remained and weathered the storm. Simmons, Miller and Poole started with safeties and the bases were full. Hale, batting for Galloway, flied out and Simmons counted, while the other runners took an extra sack when Dixon missed the throw to the plate. Welch, up for Cochrane, singled Miller and Poole across. Perkins, swinging for Andrews, walked and after Bishop flied out, Dykes got an infield hit to fill the sacks. Wingard then got rid of Lamar, the ninth man to face him, on a roller to McManus, and the Mackmen stopped with three runs.

Wingard's single and Robertson's homer gave two off Groves in the eighth.

The final game of the series will be played today, with Bush and Walberg as the probable pitchers.

It Can Be Done.

Penn Oarsmen Win All Three Events of Child's Cup Regatta

Triple Victory a Personal Triumph for Jim Rice, Former Coach at Columbia—Princeton Second in Eight-Oared Varsity Race.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Twenty-four brilliant blades of red and blue, flashing under a hot sun, urged three shells to victory on the upper reaches of the Harlem today—for Pennsylvania and Jim Rice in the Child's cup regatta.

Pulling into the teeth of a south wind that swept the mile and one-half course, the Quakers sent their varsity 150-pound and freshman boats over the finish line far ahead of a strong Princeton and a struggling Columbia.

Pennsylvania's varsity led Princeton at the finish by a length and a half. Columbia was six lengths behind Princeton.

Three quick pulls at the start and Pennsylvania had settled down for the distance in perfect rhythm. Princeton was close by but at the quarter mile had slipped inches behind while Columbia, recreated during the week, faltered even at this early part of the race.

At the mile the race was over. Penn, a length ahead of Princeton, appeared to be rowing easily with the same steady stroke, but the Tigers rowed desperately, their last effort. Columbia, dropping back at every sweep of the oars, was five lengths behind the leaders. Penn's time was 8:23. Princeton's 8:29 and Columbia's 8:55.

The 150-pound event was a dual teat between Pennsylvania and Columbia, the Quaker lightweights winning by more than six lengths in 8:21. Columbia's time was 8:46.

Pennsylvania's freshmen, in the first event of the day, produced the fastest time of the regatta, negotiating the mile and one-half in 7:57. Princeton was second in 8:09 and Columbia third in 8:34.

King Nadi, perfectly ridden, saved ground on all turns and responded gamely to urging in the stretch and just got up. Captain Hal showed a good effort, but lost a lot of ground coming into stretch. This probably cost him the race. Princess Doreen got to the front 70 yards out, but was carried out by Captain Hal.

TWO-DOLLAR MUTUELS PAID: King Nadi, straight, $25.80; place, $11.40; show, $5.70. Captain Hal, place, $5; show, $3.50; Princess Doreen, show, $4.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, May 23.—Johnny Troxler's erratic performer, King Nadi, the strapping 3-year-old son of King James-Nadinette, often performs the unexpected. This afternoon at Churchill Downs, King Nadi ran like a "million dollar" thoroughbred, winning the Grainger Memorial Handicap, over a distance of a mile and a quarter.

In winning this event, King Nadi defeated some of the best route horses in training in this section of the country. Captain Hal, A. A. Kaisel's colt, which finished second in the Kentucky Derby last Saturday, again fell in the "two hole" this afternoon. Princess Doreen was third.

Other starters were Honor and Beau Butler, the Idle Hour Farm entry; Chacolet and Spic and Span. The time for the race was 2:04 1-5.

Big Price Paid for Mutuels.

King Nadi was an extreme outsider, paying $25.80 for each $2 win ticket in the pari-mutuel machines. He paid $11.40 a place and $7.70 to show.

With the clever little jockey, Johnny McCoy, astride the son of King James, the Troxler representative was given a perfect ride throughout the mile and a quarter journey. King Nadi was away from the webbing well with Honor on the front end and Captain Hal second. McCoy saved much ground with the colt making the turns and, when he was forced to give the colt a lacing in the stretch, his mount responded gamely and just got up in time to nip Captain Hal by a head.

This marked King Nadi's second victory of the week and on each occasion he was a rank outsider in the betting. His victory today netted his owner $10,750. The handicap had an added value of $10,000.

Lee O. Cotner Wakes Up.

The Watterson Hotel Handicap, for 3-year-olds and up, at a distance of six furlongs, was a secondary feature on the card and it fell to another Kentucky Derby starter, Lee O. Cotner. Cyclops was second and Lord Granite third.

Pete Coyne's Pindar Peel won his second race in as many starts at the present meeting, when he accounted for the opening dash, a six and one-half furlong sprint from S. N. Holman's Bradley's Toney and John McPherson Certain.

Hartnet of the Cubs Hammers Out Thirteenth Home Run of the Season.

BROOKLYN, May 23.—Brooklyn staged a ninth-inning rally which netted five runs and nosed out Chicago, 6 to 5, today. Giants Hit Yde Hard, Win 10-1

New York Rookie Holds Pirates Runless Until the Ninth.

NEW YORK, May 23.—The Giants took the third game of their series from the Pirates, this afternoon, 10 to 1, by batting Yde hard in the first three innings, and following up with a brisk attack on Culloton.

Greenfield, one of the New York yearlings, started his first game and escaped scoring till the ninth, when two singles and a sacrifice fly gave the Pirates their only counter. He was hit nearly as hard as the Pittsburg pitchers, but had fine support.

The attendance was 25,000.

Whetstone Surprises At Belmont

Beats Nellie Morse, Winner of 1924 Preakness, in Ladies' Handicap, After Hard Race.

By G. F. T. RYALL
Of the New York World Sports Staff.

BELMONT, N. Y., May 23.—Gwyn Tompkins, trainer of the Glen Riddle Farm Stable shot with both barrels of his big gun at Belmont Park this afternoon. He missed with the first as Friar Carse was beaten in the Juvenile stakes by Galetian but hit the mark with the second as Whetstone won the Ladies' Handicap, one of the oldest of the fixtures for mares.

Whetstone ran like a sweet little mare, for she picked up 120 pounds and, running the mile in 1:37 4-5, beat Nellie Morse, winner of the 1924 Preakness, by five lengths with Extra Dry third, four lengths back.

Seven mares went to the post for the Ladies' and Fly By, from the Log Cabin Stable, was first to show in front, while Whetstone was far back.

Then Nellie Morse, suddenly waking up, went to the front, and rounding the turn from the back stretch it looked as though she would win as she pleased, but Whetstone moved up fast on the lower half of the turn, and, catching Nellie at the three-sixteenth pole, came away easily. The others were beaten off. The Ladies' Handicap was worth $3400 to the winner.

Pompey Badly Beaten.

Pompey, the colt they called the Great, met defeat in the running of the Juvenile stakes, that, if anything, was the feature of the program, for he finished well back of Galetian, winner of the Sporting Plate, the first Juvenile stakes of the Metropolitan season. Friar Carse, Celidon and five others.

The Juvenile, like so many of the other races, was a mad scramble for the fifteen runners that went to the post. Friar's Carse bolted across the field at the break, forcing half a dozen, including Pompey and Briar Broom to pull up then went right on till he was challenged by Galetian, a furlong from home. Albert Johnson rode a strong finish on Friar's Carse but Tommy McTaggart was at his best on the Widener colt and he won going away at the end. The Juvenile was worth $14,250 to the winner. The time for the five furlongs was 58 2-5.

Three Out of Four for Galetian.

Although the season is still young it looks as though Galetian must be the best. He has started four times and won three races, his only defeat coming in the Colorado stakes at Jamaica when he bolted and was pulled up last. This much is certain, he has the first two-year-old to pick up his penalty and win.

The many attractions and improvements at Belmont Park already are bearing fruit. The largest Saturday crowd in ten years passed through the gates of the plant today. Every available inch of room in the enclosure was filled.

The steeple chase resulted in a stirring finish between Carbine and Al Fresco, the former winning by a length. The winner was owned by the late Julius Fleishman brought from France last year. Fourteen two-year-olds of the Fleischman estate were sold in the paddock before the races today for $52,450.

Earl Sande on King Solomon's Seal tried to beat his old running mate, L. Factor, who was riding Mad Play, but Mad Play was too much horse in the mile and a sixteenth handicap that was fifth of the card. King Solomon's Seal came from far back to be second, beating Catalan, which made the early running, by three lengths.

JACK QUINN PITCHES RED SOX TO VICTORY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Boston made it two out of three from the White Sox today, winning, 9 to 5, behind Jack Quinn's pitching. Thurston was knocked out in the first inning, five runs scoring. Magnuson also was walloped in the second when four runs scored. Quinn hurled shutout ball after the first.

Huskers Beat Ames.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AMES, Ia., May 23.—Even though the University of Nebraska team made only four hits off McCrackin, while the Cyclones gathered six off Lang, the Huskers won, 4 to 3, in the second of a two-game series here this afternoon. It was the last game of the season for Ames.

Jayhawker Sprinters Are Victors

Fisher and Rooney Divide Honors — Bransford of Tigers Is Winner Over Poor in the High Jump.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LAWRENCE, Kan., May 23. — Missouri ran true to form and took the thirty-third annual dual track meet from Kansas here this afternoon, 77 to 54. The Jayhawkers were minus the services of Marvin Graham, team captain and great allround athlete, who lay ill in a hospital with tonsilitis.

The biggest upset of the meet was the defeat of Tom Poor, Olympic team member, in the high jump by Bransford of Missouri, the winning height being 6 feet 3¼ inches. Poor, who is a senior, had never before been defeated in inter-collegiate competition.

No records were broken in the meet and aside from the time of 1 minute 57.6 seconds made by Perdew of Missouri in winning the half-mile run, the marks for the afternoon were not exceptional.

Missouri put the meet on ice by taking first and third in the javelin throw, bringing the score to 68 for Missouri and 46 for Kansas, with the broad jump and relay yet to be turned in.

11 Firsts for Missouri.

Missouri gathered in eleven firsts and the one-mile relay, while Kansas was scoring only three firsts. Kansas took ten seconds to four for Missouri; while in thirds the count was Kansas nine and Missouri five.

Kansas started the meet auspiciously by sweeping all three places in the hundred-yard dash. But Missouri turned right around and upset the dope when in the mile run Matthews of the Tigers won, beating out Pratt and Grady, the Jayhawker veteran distance stars. Pratt had a ten-yard lead in the field coming up to the last turn, but Matthews and Grady both sprinted around him in the stretch.

Poage Wins 2-Mile Run.

Poage of Missouri also upset form by beating Grady for first in the two-mile event, although Grady's effort in the mile was known to have weakened him considerably.

Walton of Missouri turned in a pretty victory in the quarter-mile, coming to the tape with a three-yard lead for the fast time of 49.8 seconds. Kansas also made a clean sweep in the 220-yard dash, while Missouri took all three places in the shot put.

The summaries:

WHITEHILL TOO GOOD FOR SENATORS, DETROIT WINS EASILY, 15-2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., May 23.—Earl Whitehill held Washington to two hits while the Tigers clambered over Zachary, Ogden and Kelly easily, to limit the Senators to 2, in the best exhibition of pitching by Detroit's ace this season.

Up until the sixth could Washington even the semblance of a fight and then two were made, which, combined with Haney's error, accounted for the only Senator runs.

Bingo and Tavener were the hitting stars of the game, the former getting a double, triple and single in his three times at bat. Tavener duplicated in four times at bat with his drove in runs.

Soldan Athletes Qualify in 23 of High School Events

West Enders Favored to Capture Point Cup—Roosevelt and Cleveland to Furnish Stiff Competition in Junior and Midget Divisions.

As a result of the preliminary events of the fifteenth annual track and field meet of the St. Louis high school league held at Francis Field yesterday morning Soldan High appears as the favorite to capture first honors in the finals next Friday. Coach Plag's athletes qualified in every event in the three divisions except the senior broad jump.

Roosevelt and Cleveland track stars are expected to give Soldan stiff opposition in the finals, particularly in the junior and midget events. Roosevelt's team has a number of good men in the field events which may help to offset the point total Soldan might gain in the dash events. There were no preliminaries necessary in the mile and 880-yard run events. These events, together with the relay races, will be run off next Friday afternoon. The senior division in the interscholastic meet consists of those who have passed the age of 16½ years. Juniors between the ages of 15 and 16½ qualify for that division. To qualify for the midget class boys must be under 15 years of age and not more than 62 inches in height.

The outstanding performances in the preliminaries yesterday were made by Lichty, Lacy, Washburn and Layman of Soldan; Rector and Frederick and Hutchinson of Roosevelt, Roosen of Central, Beson of Cleveland and Brodage of Yeatman.

Connie Mack Says His Team Has Chance for Flag

days we could perfect a few plays and use them over and over before they became common property. Now everybody has their eyes open, and if you devise a play and use it on Monday the other fellow will try to beat you with the same play on Tuesday. They throw your stuff right back at you.

"Hitting certainly has improved. No, I don't think it's the lively ball. Rather, the rules against freak pitching. It's a good thing for the game. In the old days the pitchers spent all their spare time trying to find a new kind of a freak curve. Outfielders neglected their fly chasing practice to stand on the sidelines with a catcher, trying to invent new curves. There was no telling where it would end.

"Now all the teams are on even terms. The batter knows about what can be expected and can stand up there with more confidence. It's better. The public likes it.

"Senators Team to Beat."

"As I said before, I don't like to predict anything about a pennant race. Our being in first place is pleasing, but it does not mean a great deal. Take your Browns here. They are sure to play better baseball than they have been playing. The same goes for Detroit. Chicago is a smart club. In fact, the entire league looks strong. It is going to be a close race. There isn't an easy mark in the circuit. Even the Boston Red Sox will be hard to beat.

"I've changed my mind about the Washington club. I thought last year that Bucky Harris had put a wonderful spirit into the men, but I did not give the team credit for having championship qualities. I thought that the team had lucked its way into a championship and that the Giants would win easily. But I've changed my mind. That team has the ability. It has shown that this year and my only prediction this season is that the club that is good enough to beat out the Washington Senators will win the pennant."

Three New Players.

Mack has added three new men to his 1924 machine. They are Pitcher Groves, First Baseman Poole and Catcher Cochrane. Otherwise the squad is the same that finished fifth last year, except that Mack has lost the services of First Baseman Joe Hauser, who suffered a fracture of the knee cap in a spring game.

"We're not counting on any help from Hauser," said Mack. "We will miss him, too. Of course, Poole is playing a fine game, but any team would miss a man like Hauser. Joe was just reaching the peak of his career. This should have been his greatest season. He always batted about .600 against left-handers. He was a powerful batter, a dangerous man up there, and that's what is needed nowadays, the punch. If Hauser had been a light, fast man, he would have a better chance of coming back. But he is big and heavy and it will be very remarkable if he ever comes back and plays major league baseball."

Connie said that while his right-handers had been carrying the team along thus far, he expected much help from his southpaws in a few weeks.

"Don't make a mistake about Baumgartner," he said. "There is a great left-hander. People say he hasn't much stuff. But he'll win many a game for us. And Grove is improving right along. He'll take a while to get acclimated and then he'll win. You'll notice by the recent box scores that he has improved steadily.

"Yes, we have a good ball club. We have a fine chance. But it will be a hot race this season. There are so many good teams."

WASHINGTON OARSMAN OF 1923 SIGNS TO ASSIST YALE COACH

Shaw resigned as assistant coach at Harvard last year to finish his college work here. He will replace Lynn C. Moore, resigned.

RUTH EXPECTS TO JOIN YANKS TUESDAY

NEW YORK, May 23.—Announcement was made tonight that Babe Ruth will be discharged from the hospital on Monday, unless his condition shows a change during the week-end. He motored to the Yankee Stadium daily for light batting practice this week and expects to join the New York club at its first home game with Boston on Tuesday.

No More Golf Trusts.

GOLF championships are harder to win each year and this season the outcome of tournaments in which district golfers will compete will be more uncertain than ever. Ten or 15 years ago it was a safe bet that the Country Club trust, the Stickneys and Potters, would battle for the championship. A few years back Manion, Bockenkamp and Wolff were safe bets to reach the semi-finals unless the luck of the draw brought them together in early rounds.

But in the last few years so many young players have been knocking on the door that there has not been much strength to the trust.

Last year Bill Medart, Cotton Whitbread and Walter Murray were the outstanding new arrivals in the championship field. Whitbread lacked experience. This year he may have to be reckoned with. He recently defeated Bill Medart at Sunset in the club tourney and will be one of the favorites in tournaments this summer.

The big four, of course, will be Jim Manion, Trans-Mississippi champion; Eddie Held, district titleholder, Don Anderson, the State champion and Dick Bockenkamp, who though not holding any titles, will be rated high. Add Medart and Whitbread from Sunset, Murray from St. Clair and the newly developed stars of the municipal links and you have an idea of how uncertain the outcome of tourneys will be this season.

First Tourney June 6.

NORTH HILLS will usher in the competitive season a week from next Saturday when the qualifying round of the district championship will be held. Then the golfers will jump to Kansas City for the State tourney, June 17 to 20. Two days later the Trans-Mississippi will start at Omaha, to run from June 22 to 27.

Forest Park, as usual, will be represented by a dozen golfers. The municipal links players will finish their qualifying competition today, the 12 turning in low scores for 36 holes gaining the right to play in the district tourney.

The course is one of the sportiest in the district and when a man masters the layout to the extent of turning in low 80's, he is fit to shoot in any man's tourney. Experience is what the public links players lack, but they are capable of putting out many a private club star.

Look Up the Rules.

WITH the tournament season about to start, it would be well for players and caddies to give a little heed to the rule book. There were many slips in tourneys here last year, and one man forfeited the right to play in the State tourney at Midland Valley through no fault of his own.

Jack Maginn, Glen Echo Club champion, stroked the course among the leaders. He was in the seventies, and in the cool of the evening he sauntered to the starting tent to see what the pairings had fixed up for the morrow.

But Maginn's name was not on the list of title flight players. He explained that he had turned in a low score, but no record of it could be found. His playing partner in the qualifying round had failed to turn in Jack's card. It was an unfortunate oversight, but the officials could do nothing about it and Jack was just out of luck. He'll see that his partner turns in his score this year, but his experience was costly.

Golfers frequently permit caddies to keep their score. This is against the Rules. Each player must keep the score of his playing partner and each must turn in his playing partner's score card, signed.

Some Rules Are Tough.

THERE have to be rules in every game. Golf rules frequently appear to be unfair. For instance, in a national tourney at Inverness a year or two ago, a leading professional landed in a bunker near a green. He was well up in the tourney and had a chance at first money. Waiting for his caddie, he leaned on his stick, the one he had used. Someone came up and spoke to him and as he shifted his weight to answer, the club, near the slope of the bunker, slipped from under him and went into the bunker. The pro, held tight to the club and recovered his balance without falling into the bunker. But he had soled his club in the bunker, in which his ball rested, and he had to take a penalty.

In the same tourney a branch of a tree fell into a bunker. It was a hefty branch and nobody thought to remove it. A player shot into the bunker and the ball lodged under the branch. It was unplayable. The Branch should not have been there. But nothing can be moved from a bunker while a ball is there, and the player again had to take a penalty.

Yeatman and Soldan Win By Big Scores

High School League Season Closed With Roosevelt the Pennant Winner—Cleveland and Central Lose.

The final games of the High School Baseball League, in which Soldan defeated Cleveland 10 to 3, and Yeatman nosed out Central, 10 to 6, were little better from a playing standpoint that the first game of the season. A ninth inning rally on part of Central was the only exciting happening during the afternoon.

Hemker turned in a creditable game, when he held Cleveland, last year's champions, to three bingles. Two of his four passes resulted in tallies, but these came after the West Enders had a safe lead. Levy was the slugger for the winners gathering two doubles out of five trips to the plate. Tobler got the only extra base hit, a homerun in the eighth frame, scoring two runners ahead of him.

Switch of Pitchers.

A switch of pitchers bewildered many of the fans in the Central-Yeatman fray. Wielandy started on the mound for Central, but weakened in the sixth, and was replaced by Hafercamp, who came in from right field, Wielandy taking Hafercamp's place. Hafercamp got wild in the eighth, walking three men, with only one out. Wielandy was recalled from the right meadow, to again assume mound duties. This is the first time this has happened in the High School games this season.

A homer with two runners on the paths by MacIntosh, in the sixth inning was the only extra base hit by the Central nine. Grant, the Yeatman slugging pitcher, came off with two triples to his credit.

The final standings are:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Roosevelt	6	1	.857
Soldan	6	2	.750
Central	4	3	.571
Yeatman	3	5	.375
Cleveland	1	7	.125

"BERLENBACH WILL BE CHAMPION, SATURDAY"---RICKARD

Kayo King's Wallop Will Beat McTigue

Irish Titleholder Lacks Power, Youth and Aggressiveness to Win From American.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A man who is worth listening to in matters fistic is Tex Rickard. Tex is the boy who took the game and all of its fighters out of the nickel and dime class and sent them on to fame and fortunes of six figures.

He has an eye for a fighter and can spot them where others see only ham and cheese displays. Although he is responsible for the million-dollar gate, Firpo and other atrocities; he also has fostered many wonderful fights and brought out many capable fighters.

Thus, when Tex deliberately picks a winner, it is up to the public to pay attention or be scooped. Tex is quoted as predicting that next Friday night one Paul Berlenbach, who is fewer than 24 months removed from the amateur stage of the fight game, will become world's champion in the light heavyweight class.

Good-by, Michael.

This means, therefore, that Mike McTigue, the title holder, will be knocked flat, never to rise again with his halo—or that Tex will enter Jim Corbett's class as a prognosticator.

The pair are on the Milk Fund program, May 29, as principals in the feature bout, and all true worshipers at the shrine of the wallop are hoping that Tex has called the turn right.

For Mike has not been a popular champion. In fact, he has not defended his title. Since he enticed the Senegalese black freak, called Battling Siki, into a match with him in Dublin and won the Irish verdict there, Michael has won no friends. He has not rushed in against all comers; and all comers, rushing in toward him, found the "nothing doing" sign staring them in the face. A few no-decision fights suited Mike.

But the larder became low and Mike saw his popularity going. They signed him at last, therefore, to risk his title.

McTigue Extremely Cautious.

Berlenbach is the antithesis of McTigue. Michael hides behind his gloves and blocks and pecks away with counter blows, wrapping his arms around his opponents when the going is strenuous, and playing the safety-first game for all it's worth.

But Berlenbach rather scorns the defensive part of the game. His best defense is his terrific hitting power, his glove is a KICK of Brobdingnagian proportions. His lands and the other fellow kisses the canvas. In his short ring history of less than two years, he has proved unmistakably that he is the best hitter in the ring today, if we except Jack Dempsey.

And that, of course, is the basis of Rickard's prediction. In other respects, Berlenbach has it on McTigue in youth, in native pugnacity, in speed and probably in recuperative powers.

Rickard apparently has considered all these things in reaching a conclusion that we will have a new champion next Saturday.

Berlenbach Likes the Game.

If we do, the crowd will not forget Berlenbach for want of seeing him in action. Unlike McTigue, he has been willing to meet anybody any time there was anything in it. And he has not been too particular about the size of the remuneration.

Berlenbach appeals to those who today want to see a FIGHT and not a sparring contest. The deft feinting and countering, the fine exhibitions of nice judgment of distance and timing, the slipping and sidestepping of the master of self-defense are wasted on the desert air of today.

The ringsider of today wants a finality, not an argument, at the close of ring engagements. Only a kayo can supply that.

Mat Title at Stake, May 30, in Two Cities?

Lewis and Zbyszko Meet Munn and Stecher

Here are the principals in the mooted "championship" matches of May 30 at St. Louis (Stecher and Zbyszko), and at Michigan City (Munn and Lewis.)

Bouts at St. Louis and Michigan City on Memorial Day Will Leave the Dispute as to Title Unsettled.

By Dent McSkimming.

On the same day, at two widely separated points, two "world's championship" heavyweight wrestling matches will be held.

Next Saturday afternoon, Decoration day, Stanislaus Zbyszko, who is generally recognized as the champion, will risk his title in a match with Joe Stecher, in St. Louis.

At Michigan City, Ind., at the same hour, Wayne "Big" Munn of Nebraska and Robert Fredericks (Ed "Strangler" Lewis) will engage in what promoters have advertised as the "struggle for the world's championship."

Zbyszko has applied to the courts for an injunction prohibiting the Michigan City promoters from advertising their match as a world's championship affair.

How Lewis Argues.

Lewis and his manager, Billy Sandow, insist that Lewis is the champion. They declare the match in which Munn defeated Lewis last January should have been stopped by the referee and the decision awarded to Lewis on a foul. Referee Walter Bates of Kansas City has been quoted as saying that Munn fouled Lewis in winning from the champion. Munn picked Lewis up and dropped him outside the ropes of the ring to win the first fall.

However, Munn was recognized as the champion when he wrestled and defeated Stanislaus Zbyszko at Kansas City one month after winning from Lewis. He was still regarded as the title-holder when he met Zbyszko for the second time at Philadelphia on April 15. This time Zbyszko tossed the giant Nebraskan twice in 19 minutes, winning the championship.

Negotiations for the return match between Lewis and Munn were opened before Munn lost to Zbyszko, and the promoter, Floyd Fitzsimmons, announced that Munn's defeat by Zbyszko had not changed the status of the bout. Subsequently Lewis was termed the champion instead of Munn.

All four of the contestants in the two "title" bouts Saturday are former holders of the world's championship.

Joe Stecher, who meets Zbyszko at St. Louis University Field, first won the title in a tournament conducted at Chicago in 1919. He lost his crown to Earl Craddock in a match at Wichita, Kan., late in 1919. Then on Jan. 30, 1920, Stecher defeated Craddock in a New York ring, regaining the championship.

On April 16, 1920, Stecher successfully defended his title against Lewis, winning a one-fall match after 3 hours and 4 minutes of wrestling.

In December of the same year, Lewis dethroned Stecher by defeating him in 1 hour and 41 minutes.

Except for a short interval late in 1921 and early in 1922, Lewis held the title until he was pinned to the mat by Wayne Munn in January, 1925. Stanislaus Zbyszko, the present champion, won the title from Lewis late in 1921 but lost to the headlock king at Wichita on March 3, 1922. Although he met Lewis many times thereafter, Zbyszko did not regain the title until he defeated Munn last month.

During the reign of Lewis, from December, 1920, until January, 1925, Stecher, from whom Lewis won the title, clamored for a return match. His request was never granted, for Lewis and his manager avoided the Nebraska "scissors" marvel at every turn. On one occasion Sandow "promised" Stecher a match provided he defeated Stanislaus Zbyszko. Stecher paid to Zbyszko $10,000 for such a match and defeated the venerable Pole at the Coliseum in St. Louis on Jan. 23, 1924. Then, when he asked Lewis and Sandow to fulfill their agreement, the champion and his manager again refused.

Lewis Barred by St. Louis Promoter.

Because of this refusal to fulfill a promise, Lewis and Sandow were barred from appearing in a St. Louis ring by Promoter Tom Packs and they have not since shown here.

In view of the fact that in their only previous meeting Stecher defeated Zbyszko, it is generally expected that the exponent of the scissors hold will regain the championship in the Decoration day bout. Zbyszko is over 45 years of age and is hardly fit for a long, gruelling match such as Stecher may resort to with the title within grasp. In their 1924 match Zbyszko won the first fall but he had so tired himself that he fell quickly in the second and third falls, both from body scissors holds.

At Michigan City, Lewis meets a man who has perfected but one hold, the crotch and half nelson, with which he endeavors to pick his opponent off the floor and slam him down heavily. Lewis, in spite of the fact that he will concede a 26-pound handicap, should win easily if he makes full use of his knowledge of holds and brings into play his punishing headlock.

Judged by past performances, Stecher and Lewis should win next Saturday. Whether Stecher, if he wins the title, will consent to meet Lewis, who dodged the Nebraskan for five years, is questionable.

Triple A and Forest Hills Net Teams Winners

Defeat Ferris and Country Club in Opening Inter-Club Matches.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

The second annual interclub tennis tournament opened yesterday afternoon when two matches in the private club division were played on the courts of the St. Louis Country Club and the Forest Hills Tennis Club. Play in the municipal divisions will start next Sunday.

Forest Hills defeated the Ferris Tennis Club, 5 to 0, yesterday, while Triple A won from the Country Club players, 5 to 0.

The match between Triple A and the Country Club was hard fought. Almost every set went to deuce. Joe Werner, captain of the Country Club and donor of the Werner Interclub Trophy, was forced to default to Charlie Barnes in the third set of a singles match. Werner, showing an improved game over last season, won the first set, 8-6. Barnes won the second, 7-5. The heat bothered Werner and he defaulted the match at the end of the set.

Arthur Reppert, former city champion, was forced to play three sets to eliminate Ethan Shepley, of Country Club. Ed Serrano of Triple A found a worthy opponent in Walter Crunden and was forced to two deuce sets before winning.

Forest Hills won its match from the Ferris Club juniors without the loss of a set. Herbert Bryant, former St. Louis County champion, played his first match for Forest Hills and defeated Richard Dietrich of Ferris, 6-2, 6-4.

Clark Smith surprised by forcing Karl Kammann to two close sets. Fred Josties had no trouble in winning from Jake Lynn, while the Schwarz brothers defeated the Ferris team of Lynn and Smith.

Wills' First Big Purse Received $10,000 for Beating Fulton

Negro Challenger Had to Turn Down First Offer of $5,000 but Knew Promoter Had to Have Him on Card.

The first "big" purse he ever received is told of in this chapter of Harry Wills' life story, as related through a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

It was not until 1920 that I got my first chance to make some real money. The International Sporting Club of New York was running a big show over in Jersey and they wanted me to head the card with Fred Fulton, who had won several fights and was a big attraction just then.

One day Mr. Gavin, who was the president of the club, called me in.

Gavin Offered Me $5000.

"Mr. Gavin," I said, "I'm glad to see that you like me so much. You say that I have been held back because of my color and that it is time I had a chnace to make some real money. I think so, too, and that is why I am not going to fight Fulton for $5000."

I had knocked Fulton out in one round some years back and I knew that Gavin was giving men $10,000 to box in the preliminaries of his big show and that he had to have me. If a preliminary fighter was worth $10,000, I figured I was worth at least as much for appearing in the main event.

$10,000 Agreed On.

A few days later he called me on the phone again and said that my manager was willing to take the match for $5000.

"Well," I said, "if Paddy Mullins is willing to stake the five grand, let him fight Fulton, because my price is $10,000."

It did not take him long to accept. He probably would have gone much higher if I had held out longer, for the match looked like a big thing then. It drew over $160,000 and the club cleaned up.

Immediately after the match was announced, rumors that it was not going to be on the up and up began to fly around. It was whispered in Harlem that I had agreed to lay down. Because I had been sidetracked by the white promoters so long, my people were suspicious. They found it hard to believe that Fulton would fight unless my hands were tied.

I believe that Fulton's backers must have told him that it was all fixed for me to lay down.

Plastered the Plasterer.

At any rate, he showed far more confidence than I expected when the gong started us off that night.

In the first round I felt him out, just fooling around, without getting loose with anything.

The second round went much like the first until the gong sounded. Just as I turned to my corner Fulton let go a wallop that nailed me on the jaw. That made me good and sore.

"Look out, Harry! he swung you a bit that time," Paddy Mullins said to me as he tried to put the smelling salts under my nose.

"Get out of my way!" I said, brushing the bottle to one side. "This fight's over right now. He can't hit me a sneak punch and get away with it. He's going to get his quick."

I went out fighting and in a moment or two had him going. He had a good left hook that was his best blow. I watched for it to start and then stepped in and shooting a right under the heart.

He began to hold then. I was stronger than he, I pulled the left arm free and landed a short right punch under the heart that broke two of his ribs. He still hung on, so I wrenched clear of him and shot a right uppercut to the jaw, putting him down and out.

DE PALMA'S NEPHEW TO DRIVE A RACER IN INDIANAPOLIS EVENT

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 23.—A newcomer in the automobile racing world threatens the popularity of the stars of years' standing.

He is Pete De Paolo, nephew of Ralph De Palma. De Paolo is considered the bright light of the quartet which will drive Indianapolis-made speedsters in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway a week from today.

In practice the youngster who has been behind the wheel of a race car less than three years, drove a lap at 111 miles an hour—the fastest time for the distance ever made at the speedway. The timing was unofficial.

Paolo finished sixth in the 1924 race here. He is topped this year only by Tommy Milton in the contest for the driving champion. De Paolo's most notable performance this spring was a victory in a 150-mile dash over the mile track at Fresno, Cal.

These two are tied for second place and meet in another Independent game.

In the City League, prospects are that the St. Casimirs and the Lischko Indians will still be tied after today's contests. They play the Beacon A. C. and the Mallinckrodt nine, respectively, who are tied for last. The games will be played at O'Fallon Park.

Donnelly Stars in Lead.

The Yankees led up to the seventh inning when Tris Speaker put the Tribe in the lead with a home run over the right field wall, scoring Charlie Jamieson.

The Yankees chased Ben Karr from the box in the third inning, but Miller, who followed him, pitched creditable ball.

The Yankees were forced to use three pitchers, Jones doing the best work. In the eighth inning, Tris Speaker and Joe Klugman were put out of the game by Umpire Rowland when they protested the arbiter's decision at the plate.

SCHOOL NINES START ELIMINATIONS THIS WEEK

Eight Teams Still in Race For the Title

Ties in Three Groups Will Necessitate Play-Offs — Post-Dispatch Trophy to Be Awarded Next Week.

The eight group winners in the public school race for the Post-Dispatch baseball trophy will meet this week in the first round of the final elimination matches. Next week the semifinal and final rounds will be played and the silver trophy awarded. Harrison School was last year's champion.

Ties in three of the groups will necessitate playoff games before the contestants can enter the elimination contests. Rock Springs and Stix in Group D, and Madison and Peabody in Group C, are tied and will decide their ties when they meet Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively. A similar deadlock in Group H between Benton and Lacede will be played off Tuesday.

Elimination Games.

In the eliminations, Baden of Group G will meet Lyon, winner in Group A, at Fairgrounds, Wednesday, and Cupples, winner in Group F, and Bates, first in Group E, will play at Fairgrounds Friday. The winner of the Benton-Lacede contest for the lead in Group H will meet Shaw, winner in Group B and the victor in the Madison-Peabody contest for the lead in Group C will meet the winner in the Rock Spring-Stix game for first in Group D, both dates to be set later.

In the colored school battle for the St. Louis Argus trophy, Lincoln School was returned the winner by virtue of a 31-4 victory over L'Ouverture Friday at the Stars' Park. The winners made a total of 36 hits and but two errors. They also hit four home runs. Lincoln's pitcher, Robert McClintock, was in good form, striking out 12 men. Two successive championships must be won for permanent possession of the trophy.

TIPS ON INSIDE BASE-BALL

THERE is a runner on third base. The catcher notes that he is taking a big lead. He calls for a pitchout and by a snap throw to the third baseman catches the runner napping.

There is a run up on this play in which practically the entire infield takes part.

On this particular play where should the first baseman, who is farthest removed from the play, station himself?

Diagram of Play.

The first baseman is merely a spectator if he remains in his position at first base.

Being of no use in his regular position he should immediately hasten from first base to the plate and assume a position there which protects the catcher, who is certain to be forced to leave the plate unguarded during the runup.

This play is often overlooked by the first baseman, who remains in his regular position. Covering the plate is always his duty in a situation as described above.

Speedboat Races Here June 28

Edwin C. Koenig Says Boats Worth $100,000 Will Be Seen in Events.

Motorboats with a total valuation of more than $100,000 will compete in races on the Mississippi River here June 28, according to an announcement yesterday by Edwin C. Koenig, who is aranging the speedboat tournament.

There will be competition among runabouts and hydroplanes and in tests on the local harbor the boats in the championship class are said to have made as much as 65 miles an hour.

"In motorboat races in the local harbor in the past the boats never made better than 20 miles an hour," said Koenig, "and spectators at the tournament June 28 will see something new in motorboat speeding. The runabouts have made as much as 50 and some of the hydroplanes as much as 65 miles an hour."

There is keen rivalry between the hydroplane "Miss St. Louis," owned by Walter Kastrup and R. Huellinghorst and the Baby Panhard, owned by C. D. and O. E. Knight. After seeing the Miss St. Louis do 65 miles an hour the Knights tore out there engine and installed a new one, capable of 320 horsepower.

The races will be run between the Free Bridge and Eads Bridge and will be at 20 miles. Entries will close June 20, Koenig announced.

The following owners have entered boats thus far:

W. D. Crowell, P. R. Schreiber, C. N. Stein, Dr. Kastrup, Walter Kastrup, R. Huellinghorst, M. P. Goodman, C. D. and O. E. Knight, M. A. Butler, J. L. Meyers, J. P. Dorris, T. J. S. W. and P. V. Wightman, Dr. G. A. Mellies and Gus Kron.

Millikin, Illinois Wesleyan, Eureka, Augustana, Monmouth, Illinois College and Knox are members. Fred Muhl of Illinois Wesleyan was elected president. It was decided that the new conference, whose members will not withdraw from the Little Nineteen, will begin to function Dec. 1, 1925.

Competitive Spirit Makes Richards Great, Says Tilden

Only Defects in Youngster's Tennis Play Are His Form and Failure to Develop a Top-Spin Drive.

By William T. Tilden,

(Copyright, 1925.)

In this article, the second in a series by William T. Tilden, on the best 10 tennis players, the world's champion discusses the game of Vincent Richards.

VINCENT RICHARDS will go down in tennis history as "The Schoolboy Wonder," "The Junior Champion," "The Infant Prodigy" and other appellations of this order. I expect to see Richards referred to by these titles long after he is an old man with a beard or some other equally distinctive sign of age, for when the press has once christened a player by such a name, the label adheres for life.

RICHARDS.

Richards is 21, of medium height, slight and attractive. There is a peculiar combination of the charm of youth and the sophistication of age in the manner of Richards.

His tennis game is interesting yet not superlative. Ever since I first met Richards, who was then 15, I have urged him vainly to learn a sound ground game. He will not learn a top spin drive, preferring to slice his shots. His volleying is beyond criticism. He is the finest volleyer the world has ever known, greater in technique that Norman Brookes or Holcombe Ward, although not a subtle a thinker as either of them.

The strength of Richards' game lies in his net attack and a spirit of competition that refuses to recognize defeat. There has never been a boy in his teens who approached the record made by Vincent Richards. He stands out like a lighthouse above the sea of junior stars.

Notwithstanding this fact, I believe that such youngsters as Sandy Wiener and Donald Strachan, of Philadelphia; Arnold W. Jones as a junior; Emmett Pare of Chicago, and Howard Langlie of Seattle, show greater promise of future development, greater possibilities as Davis Cup stars and world's champions than Vincent Richards.

Form is essential in youth. Sound foundation must be laid to build upon. Richards triumphed in spite of his game, not because of it, owing to his gift of competitive spirit. Place the game of Wiener, Jones or Langlie on Richards' temperament and it would become far greater than Richards ever will.

Yet do not mistake my attitude. I consider Richards one of the great players of the world. I only regret the defects that stunt his development and hold him back from the full heights he might achieve. His attractive court manner and splendid sportsmanship have won him an enviable place in the public eye.

Carterville to Get Cambria Team

Associated Nines Will Make Strong Contender in Hard Roads League.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CARTERVILLE, Ill., May 23.—Due to the failure to get games, the Cambria baseball team, champions for the past two years of a territory from Duquoin south to Cairo, has disbanded under the name of Cambria and joined with the Carterville Lions in the Southern Illinois Hard Roads League.

This move is the end of a small baseball war which started at the organization of the Hard Roads League. Duquoin, Cambria and Valier refused to join along with several other towns. As the season went on the Hard Road League became stronger and the regular schedule of two games a week began drawing the players. Duquoin asked to join the league and then Cambria disbanded and joined with Carterville, the entire team coming in.

On Cambria's staff are players who have been together for three and four years. They are the strongest team in this section, and, added to Carterville, will fill virtually every place and give relief to the few men that Carterville will retain.

Justice, pitcher for Cambria, is one of the best pitchers outside of the smaller leagues in this section while Harvel, center fielder, 18 years old, is the sensation of the section. His batting average is high and offers have come to him from the smaller leagues.

This team gives Carterville Lions two pitchers and catchers to relieve each other and will place Carterville, now near the last in averages, in a position to win every game. The first game in which they play will be today.

FUNDS TO HOLD 1928 OLYMPIC GAMES IN HOLLAND GUARANTEED

By the Associated Press.

AMSTERDAM, May 23. — The Dutch Olympic Committee now can go to Prague for the International Olympic Committee congress and report that funds for holding the Olympic games at Amsterdam in 1928 are guaranteed.

This is possible because the Burgomaster of Amsterdam and his assistants control the majority of the Municipal Council and will persuade the councillors to favor their proposed 5,000,000 guilder loan (about $2,000,000), of which 500,000 guilders would be devoted to the Olympic expenses. In addition, a message from Batavia, Dutch East Indies, announces that the Olympic Committee for the Dutch East Indies guarantees to subscribe 150,000 guilders, making a grand total close to the million guilder mark necessary for financing the games in 1928.

The Amsterdam Municipal Council obtained the help of a group of bankers who are guaranteeing the loan on the strength of the manner in which subscriptions have been flowing in from persons in all parts of Holland desirous of having Amsterdam get the games.

HORNSBY'S ANSWERS To Baseball Queries

"Batter hits a grounder. There is a force out at third. Runner slides into third carrying bag away from peg. Ball is thrown to third baseman who puts his foot on the peg and claims a force-out. Umpire agrees and rules an out. Is he right? H. R. P., Dexter, Mo.

No, the runner is safe.

(1) If the shortstop, in fielding a legitimate "infield fly," muffs it, who gets credit for the putout? (2) Man on third. Batter hits along first base line and, fearing a collision with the first baseman who is fielding the hit, stops. The first baseman throws home to catch the runner from third and the umpire rules the batter out for stopping. Does anyone get credit for this putout? CARROW.

(1) The shortstop.
(2)The batter is not out for stopping.

Runner on third. Batter hits long fly to right field. Fielder throws home but catcher misses the ball and it hits an automobile. Ball is recovered in time to catch the runner at home. Is he out? CLYDE TAYLOR, Kirkwood, Mo.

Depends on your ground rules.

Runner on first. Pitcher delivers ball. Catcher runs in front of batter, catches the ball and picks the runner off first base. Is that fair?—Jack Slein.

No, the batter gets his base and the runner is not out.

(1) What was Sisler's batting average for 1922? (2) Who holds the record?

(1) .420.
(2) Hugh Duffy batted .438 in 1894.

Catcher misses third strike but recovers in time to retire runner at first. Is this a strikeout for the pitcher? Is it an error for the catcher?—G. D. C.

Catcher gets an assist and first baseman a putout. Pitcher is credited with a strikeout in the summary.

Chance Play Not the Only Good Colt In 1925 Juvenile Field

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 23.—When Chance Play made his first appearance more than a week ago he ran so impressively that many thought that he would be everything that the late August Belmont said about him last fall.

However, in his second race he did not show so well and now there are a number of good judges who are wondering if he can give weight to any of half a dozen colts and beat them.

One of the most promising is Pompey, a colt by Sun Briar-Cleopatra and another is Briar Broom, a son of Broomstick and Panoply, she by Peter Pan-Inaugural. They say Festival, a stablemate of Chance Play, will train on to be as good if not a better one, while the Rancocas Stable has a good one in Celadon, if he can learn to get away from the barrier with his field.

There are several of the H. P. Whitney string that are highly thought of but none has been seen under colors so far.

John Spends Summer in th... State of Maine

This fiasco, however, had at least one good result. John had at last discovered that his free-and-easy life had made him heavy and sluggish, and he therefore spent part of the summer of 1885 in Maine. For Maine, then under the proud distinction of being the only dry State in the Union, saved him from an excess of temptation. But Maine also won renown as the first State to invent the art of bootlegging, and so John occasionally fell from grace. During the next year he had several unimportant encounters, but none of them was particularly distinguished. He merely won—that was all.

Still unsatisfied and unconvinced, Paddy Ryan yet clamored for "just one more chance." In November, 1886, Sullivan magnanimously allowed Paddy to totter around for three unbelievably dull rounds. Perhaps, however, John was in a good humor merely because there was at least one man in America who still cherished foolish dreams, for he was hard put to it to find anybody at all, even asthmatic ex-champions, to face him. THE LIFE OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN — By R. F. DIBBLE — The Draw With Mitchell

England and Ireland Honor the Champion When He Goes Abroad

Lack of Fighting Men Willing to Meet Him—Always Excepting the Negro, Jackson—Sends John L. Across the Atlantic.

In the previous chapter the presentation of the famous diamond belt to Sullivan, in Boston, was told of by the author, and several of his minor battles in 1885 were described. The chapter concluded with the fight between the champion and Alf Greenfield, in New York, which was stopped by the police and resulted in the arrest of both contestants, although nothing was ever done to them in the courts.

Chaper IV.

SULLIVAN and Greenfield renewed their interrupted hostilities in Boston on Jan. 12, 1885. Bostonian culture was so far ahead of that which dominated New York that there was not the least danger of any official interference; yet, for some reason or other, their second skirmish was much tamer than the first. For four rounds they toddled amiably about the ring and in the final round "they stopped before time was called and talked awhile," which caused the crowd to hiss. John was so thunderstruck at such impolite behavior on the part of his fellow countrymen—for nothing like this had ever occurred in Boston before—that, when the decision was awarded to him, he made an unusually sincere speech, "Gentlemen," he solemnly uttered, "all I have to say is I've treated Mr. Greenfield with respect, and if the police allowed us to go on I'd have done more serious work." At this point shouts of "Police! Hell, they ain't no police!" arose, but John paid no attention to them and plunged steadily on. "I ask the press to give me a fair show. There's been lots of charges against me lately, some of which ain't true. Mr. Greenfield is a good man. I give him credit for what he's done. He's my friend and always will be." Nevertheless, no one was satisfied, for everyone felt that Sullivan was getting too smart—he had discovered, so it was charged, that he could use "police interference as a device to enable him to win without extending himself.

Paddy Ryan Again.

Paddy Ryan, obsessed with the peculiar optimism that characterizes defeated presidents, nations, and dogs as well as defeated pugilists, insisted that, if he could have only one more chance at Sullivan, he would win back his lost laurels. On Jan. 19 his opportunity came, and he took advantage of it by losing the decision in 30 seconds. Bluecoats were everywhere—scattered through the audience, lolling at the exits, and sprawling around the edge of the ring. Both contestants were sternly cautioned that the engagement was to be nothing more than a boxing match, and that it would be stopped the instant one or the other showed signs of undue temper or activity. John was very fat, but Paddy was even fatter. They waddled around good-naturedly for about 20 seconds, when each launched a simultaneous blow that hurt. Then they sprang furiously at each other, and John was just about to deliver what would probably have been the coup de grace when the police took a hand. The wretched spectators, who were just beginning to hope that they might, after all, get their money's worth, groaned, catcalled, and hissed, but all to no avail.

John Spends Summer in the Dry State of Maine to Get in Shape

This fiasco, however, had at least one good result. John had at last discovered that his free-and-easy life had made him heavy and sluggish, and he therefore spent part of the summer of 1885 in Maine. For Maine, then under the proud distinction of being the only dry State in the Union, saved him from an excess of temptation. But Maine also won renown as the first State to invent the art of bootlegging, and so John occasionally fell from grace. During the next year he had several unimportant encounters, but none of them was particularly distinguished. He merely won—that was all.

Still unsatisfied and unconvinced, Paddy Ryan yet clamored for "just one more chance." In November, 1886, Sullivan magnanimously allowed Paddy to totter around for three unbelievably dull rounds. Perhaps, however, John was in a good humor merely because there was at least one man in America who still cherished foolish dreams, for he was hard put to it to find anybody at all, even asthmatic ex-champions, to face him. Indeed, John was beginning to feel like the princesses in fairy tales who are unable to find husbands, because the terms of matrimony are made so arduous that few suitors appear.

It was probably because he had not of late had sufficient exercise in the ring that John broke his right arm against the massive jaw of Patsy Cardiff, and not even the fact that Patsy's whole body was in almost as bad a condition as John's broken arm gave him much consolation. This contest took place in Minneapolis in January, 1887; the admission price was $2 and over 10,000 persons were present. Cardiff had trained faithfully, in order to take the best advantage of the greatest opportunity of his life, but Sullivan, who weighed about 220 pounds, was at first very clumsy and heavy of foot. The accident happened in the third round. John, maddened at his opponent's cleverness, had come to life at the end of the second round and had pummeled Cardiff most unmercifully, but he still remained staggering and tottering, on his feet. When the third round opened, John crashed his right fist with such terrific force against the point of Patsy's chin that one bone in the arm was broken—and, even worse than that, Patsy still refused to fall. Crippled as he was, John fought on with his left arm until, at the end of the sixth round, a draw was declared amid a scene of tremendous excitement. Since the bone failed to re-knit properly, it had to be rebroken and reset; and not until late in the summer of 1887 was Sullivan once more ready for action.

Champion Goes Abroad.

John had now seen America as a whole, and nearly 200 Americans in particular, at his feet. Accordingly, he thought it was high time to look for other worlds to conquer; and on October 27, 1887, he sailed for England—with the purpose of winning "money, glory, and revenge," as he told his friends. Those same friends flooded his palatial cabin with floral pieces and presents, and no president, sailing to lay down laws for the peace of Europe and the salvation of all mankind, could have been treated in a more regal manner than Sullivan, who was merely sailing to fight Europeans. At Liverpool and London such dense crowds jammed the streets in his honor that traffic was utterly disrupted and a bodyguard was necessary in order to enable him to make any progress at all. But John refused to get excited, for he felt that he was only receiving his due. One Englishman was roused from his habitual stolidity by Sullivan's utter ease and unconcern to inquire, "I say, don't all this knockin' about affect you a bit?" John cast an appraising eye at the questioner and replied briefly, "Why should I get excited? The same thing happens to me every day at home."

One crowd was so impenetrable that he was unable to reach the coach, drawn by four white horses, that had been especially equipped for him, and he was forced to be pell-mell into a hearse near by. But even there he was not safe from molestation, for so many enthusiasts jumped in after him that the bottom fell out and all the intruders were tumbled to the ground in an almost inextricable mass. At length John's brawny shoulders emerged from the twisted pile of churning arms and legs. Sweeping his arms like flai's around him, he partially cleared a path and leaped to freedom with such agility that one onlooker gleefully chortled, "Just see 'im! Ain't 'e a cat and a locomotive combined?" John was then hoisted on the shoulders of two strong men and carried in triumph to the coach. Only one really unpleasant episode marred his arrival: the custom officers at Liverpool insisted that he must pay $600 duty on his diamond belt. But he absolutely refused to do, and the trophy was accordingly shipped back to Boston. John was very sad about this, for, deprived of his belt, he was almost as helpless as Samson after his domestic haircut.

Makes 51 Public Appearances And Clears Over $25,000

The English papers battled with each other in a friendly contest to see which one could pay the finest compliments to the distinguished guest. After hundreds of encomiums had been showered on him, honors finally went to the paper which produced this specimen: "At last America has sent us a great entertainer of the male variety. We have had Booth, and all the men of the American drama but none have shone. Sullivan, however, comes to us as a sunbeam to shed his lustrous light upon sportsmen and others." The lustrous sunbeam radiated his effulgent glory 51 times in various English cities. He cleared over $25,000 from these engagements, which was, as some one felt impelled to remark, "an extraordinary sum, considering the condition of the kingdom and the small wages paid workingmen."

Reception in Ireland.

Ireland, of course, gave him the most tumultuous reception of all. In Dublin two brass bands tried to drown each other out by a simultaneous rendition of "See, the Conquering Hero Comes." Mike Sullivan had carefully coached his son as to the sort of remarks he should make on the soil of his fatherland; and so, after the two bands had nearly murdered each other John slowly and painstakingly spoke the words his father had prepared for him: "I thank you for your kindness to me this evening. As a descendant of Erin's isle, I will endeavor always to prove myself worthy of your attention and to uphold the honor of my father's native land." So generously did his kinsmen patronize him that he took in more money in one week than six weeks in England had netted him.

"Money, glory, and revenge"—by this time John was rolling in wealth, and had come to accept adulation as his by divine right; but • • • The ghost of the undefeated Charlie Mitchell haunted him in his dreams, day and night. Even his frequently repeated self-defense—that he had failed to overthrow Mitchell because the elusive Englishman was a "bombastic sprinter"—failed to lay the ghost. John was champion of America, to be sure; but Mitchell had twice blocked his path toward the goal of world's champion. He had come to Europe, in fact, chiefly to fight Mitchell, and it was with a smile unusually grim and ferocious, even for him, that John finally signed articles to meet the Englishman on Baron Rothschild's estate at Chantilly, on March 10, 1888.

These articles were signed in London in November, 1887. At first it seemed that no fight could be arranged, for both Sullivan and Mitchell continued to raise objections to various articles. The size of the proposed ring caused more trouble than anything else. John sternly insisted that it must be only 16 feet square, for he intended it to be small enough so that his foe would not be able to cavort around as he had done during their previous battles. But Mitchell refused to agree; he had no desire to get in quarters so tight that he would be unable to prance away if things should get too hot for him. "Jolly Chollie" eventually made a remark so pointedly personal that Sullivan leaped up and prepared to settle the contest on the spot, without any preliminary negotiations whatever; but he finally cooled off and a contract that was moderately satisfactory to both was signed.

On the day of the battle John dressed himself in an unusually gay fashion. In addition to his conventional fighting togs, he had wreathed himself in an immense Stars and Stripes silk handkerchief that had an Irish harp embroidered in one corner. His manner, too, was far more arrogant and cocksure than usual. Upon entering the ring he pulled out and flourished a $500 note, and dared Mitchell again and again, in a most insulting fashion, to cover it. No sooner had the battle started than Mitchell began his usual Marathon Twisting, gliding, dodging, and forever retreating, he completely baffled Sullivan. To add to John's discomfort, rain fell from the tenth round on, and he was seized with a chill and shook as with ague while he splashed around on the muddy turf. Once in a while, to be sure, he would succeed in cornering his ghostly antagonist and would then knock him down. After the first of these knockdowns, Mitchell's father-in-law (who had bet his last guinea on the fight) breathed the sign, "There goes my boy!" When the same action was repeated, he groaned, "There goes my house!" And when, for the third time, Mitchell's body splashed mud in all directions, he shrieked in uncontrollable anguish, "There goes my estate and everything!" But, like Antaeus of old, after every fall to the ground Mitchell rose stronger, or at least fleeter, than ever. When the combat had lasted for about three hours, and it appeared that Sullivan might eventually catch his rival and deliver a finishing stroke, Charlie's second thrust his dripping head through the ropes and yelled, "Think of your wife, Charlie; think of your little babies at home crying for bread!" This touching appeal to his paternal instincts so aroused the wilting pugilist that he tore around with renewed strength; and ten minutes later a draw was declared.

Champion Heartbroken.

Then broken-hearted John completely crumpled up and cried like a baby. How could he endure this disgrace! What consternation there would be among his friends in America when the news of his unbelievable failure was cabled home! Never, during the rest of his life, did he recover from the shock of this, his worst defeat. John was generally very magnanimous toward all the men whom he had whipped; for such poor fellows he entertained almost a fatherly affection. But he never mentioned Peter Jackson—the negro whom he steadfastly refused to fight, on the ground that he was a negro—without snarls of rage and mortified pride; and the mere sound of Mitchell's name always roused him to a frenzy of delightfully abusive language. Time after time, in his autobiography, he makes bitter reference to Mitchell and his methods; the Englishman is repeated called the "bombastic sprinter" who "spiked me so severely that my shoes were full of blood, and there are large scars on my shins yet." But for some reason or other—could it have been modesty?—he always refused to show those scars when his friends requested him to do so.

But just now he had no time to repine or even to weep much; for almost at the instant when the fight ended, French gendarmes arrested both contestants and confined them over night in jail. Next day Sullivan was only too glad to deposit $1600 for bail, and no sooner had the prison doors closed behind him than he took French leave by fleeing to England on the first boat that sailed from Calais. Europe had lost all its charm for him—even Irish girls and girls failed to attract him any longer—and so in April he returned to America.

In order to revive his drooping spirits, John now joined a traveling circus; but, after two months had passed, he was attacked by a serious and curiously complicated illness. "Due to several causes," so he cryptically remarked, he contracted "typhoid fever; the atmosphere of the circus wasn't the best in the world, and I'd been drinking some besides." Apparently he must have been doing other things than drinking, for in a later statement he averred that he had "typhoid fever, gastritic fever, inflammation of the bowels, heart trouble, circus itch, and liver complaint all combined. That was all. Aside from that, I was a well man." For nine weeks he lay in bed, attended by six doctors who served him in a fairly definite rotation: one physician treated him for typhoid fever, another for gastric fever, and so on. But in spite of everything, he was still alive at the end of the ninth week, though he had been given up twice—"the doctors gave up my case as hopeless, but I told 'em that I couldn't stand that kind of a decision, and that I'd beat 'em yet." When the ninth week ended, he informed the sixth physician that he was going to his father's house. "You're mad; the trip'll kill you!" sparled the liver complaint specialist. "I can't help that," groaned John. "I've been stretched out here ready to die for two months, and now I'm going to beat it"—and he did. "I got up out of that bed, hired a carriage, and after propping myself up in pillows, I set out for my father's home 10 miles away." Safely arrived at his destination, he slowly recovered; but for some months he was much troubled with what was euphemistically called "incipient paralysis of the legs," and was therefore obliged to hobble around on crutches. Oil massages and mild electric shocks apparently contributed to his recovery; at all events, by the close of 1888 he was once more approximately well.

He needed to be, for the severest test of all was imminent. Though John had become older, fatter, slower, and more sodden, his greatest fight was still to come. The stanch, battle-scarred lino, slowly retreating toward his lair, was destined to make one final glorious stand against the enemy before his final defeat.

AGREEMENT AVERTS ELECTRICIANS' STRIKE

"Shift Work" Clause Affecting Men in Bell Co. Excavation Is Interpreted.

The satisfactory interpretation of the "shift work" clause of their working agreement averted a threatened strike of members of Electrical Workers Local Union No. 1, employed on the new Bell Telephone Building at Eleventh and Pine street, where shift work is necessary in the foundation construction, and on three other major building projects here.

The agreement was reached at a conference of arbitration committees representing employers and the union Friday night. When the shift work became necessary on the Bell Telephone project, a program of 14 "straight time" and seven "double time" shifts per week was placed in effect, resulting in a weekly wage of $112 for each of the three electricians performing maintenance work at the excavation. Last week officers of the Westlake Construction Co., general contractors, and the E. A. Koenneman Electrical Co., doing the electrical work, notified the union that the maintenance electricians would not be required between Saturday midnight and 8 a. m. Monday, reducing the program to 14 straight and three double time shifts.

The Westlake and Koenneman concerns were then notified by the union that, unless a more satisfactory program was arranged, all electricians on their other projects here, including the St. Louis Theater, Beaumont High School, and new Nugent building, would be withdrawn yesterday. The arbitration conference followed and an agreement under which the three maintenance electricians will work 12 double and six straight time shifts reached. Under this program each of the three electrical workers employed at the Bell Co. excavation will receive $104 weekly.

Unless the Glasses you get are exactly suited to your eyes—specially made for you after a careful vision test—even a dollar is far too great a price to pay for Glasses that may eventually mean your sight.

On the other hand, the proper Glasses to correct your particular vision defect if secured in time, may mean many increased years of usefulness to yourself—and you would doubtless regard these added years as of a priceless value to you.

ACROSS THE ... Life of Stirri...

Unusual Incidents in the Tasks of Men Who Fly the Postoffice Aerial Carriers—What Has Already Been Accomplished in Quick Delivery and the Outlook When Enlarged Service Begins in a Few Weeks.

By BURT M. McCONNELL.

IN a very few weeks the Air Mail Service, for the first time in history, will be carrying mail at night over the Alleghany Mountains, conceded by pilots to be the most hazardous stretch on the entire transcontinental route. By reducing the delivery time of mail between New York and Chicago to nine hours, the air mail will save an entire business day. The importance of this new development can be realized when it is known that 90 per cent of the banking business of the country, so far as mail is concerned, is conducted between New York and Chicago.

The present plan of the Postoffice Department is to make this "leg" a model for other routes, linking up every important city in the United States, and as soon as it becomes practicable, to turn over operation of these air mail routes to private aerial transport companies. Nowhere else in the world has such a determined and successful effort been made as in the United States to carry the mails by airplane.

The transportation of mail, day after day, in winter and summer, between the Goddess of Liberty and the Golden Gate, marks the first real development of aviation in the United States. The gain is relatively as great as that which the United States and Great Britain achieved when steamships took the place of sailing vessels as mail carriers. A mail plane now flies farther in an hour than the pony express traveled in an entire day 50 years ago. New York newspapers, instead of being delivered the month following publication, can now be had in San Francisco the day after they are printed. Thus the Pacific Coast, in terms of transportation, is no farther from New York today than Philadelphia was a hundred years ago.

Across the Country in 33 Hours

Let us follow the Air Mail across the country. As Little Johnny Jones, who lives, let us say, in Joplin, slips into his seat at school, the westbound Air Mail leaves the Pennsylvania Station at New York City for New Brunswick, N. J., the new Eastern terminus of the transcontinental route. An airplane carrying from 300 to 500 pounds of this cargo climbs into the air at 10 o'clock. By the time Johnny has bolted his lunch, the Air Mail pilot has reached Bellefonte, Pa., 220 miles away. When school is abandoned for the day, the Air Mail pilot is over Ohio. Johnny probably is tinkering with his radio as the pilot flies northward along the shore of Lake Michigan and lands in the outskirts of Chicago; and as father sternly announces: "It's time to go to bed, Johnny," the pilot comes within sight of the dazzling beacons at Iowa City. Midnight finds him in Omaha, and as the sun comes up over the horizon, and Johnny, at Joplin, pulls the covers a little closer about his ears, the mail plane drops lightly down upon the field at Cheyenne, Wyo. Johnny is tucking his books under his arm, preparatory to a last-minute dash for school, when the Air Mail pilot, 24 hours after leaving New York, skims over the snow-covered Wasatch Mountains to find himself above Salt Lake City. He has traveled 2000 miles over valley, rivers, mountains and plains. Before him lies the Great Salt Desert, our vast inland sea, and the Sierra Nevada Mountains—500 miles of dangerous flying. But before nightfall, after stops in Nevada, he is within sight of the Golden Gate.

The return trip is made in about 32 hours. The service west to east is almost 3 hours shorter because of prevailing westerly winds; but the westbound Air Mail pilot has the advantage of three hours more of daylight, since he is flying with the sun.

The following landmarks in the history of the United States transcontinental mail delivery are illuminating:

1858—24 days; 3 by rail and 21 by stage coach.

1869—10½ days; 2½ days by rail from New York to St. Joseph, Mo., and 8 days by pony express.

1923—96-120 hours by ordinary mail train, depending on connections.

1924—Air Mail; average elapsed time, 33 hours from New York to San Francisco.

Approximately 85 per cent of the mail carried during the first 10 and a half months of the day-and-night service, ending May 15, —some 8,000,000 letters—were delivered per schedule. The revenue which the Air Mail Service received above the regular

Life of Stirring Adventure and Service for Pilots

Unusual Incidents in the Tasks of Men Who Fly the Postoffice Aerial Carriers — What Has Already Been Accomplished in Quick Delivery and the Outlook When Enlarged Service Begins in a Few Weeks.

1860—24 days; 3 by rail and 21 by stage coach.

1915—10½ days; 2½ days by rail from New York to St. Joseph, Mo., and 8 days by pony express.

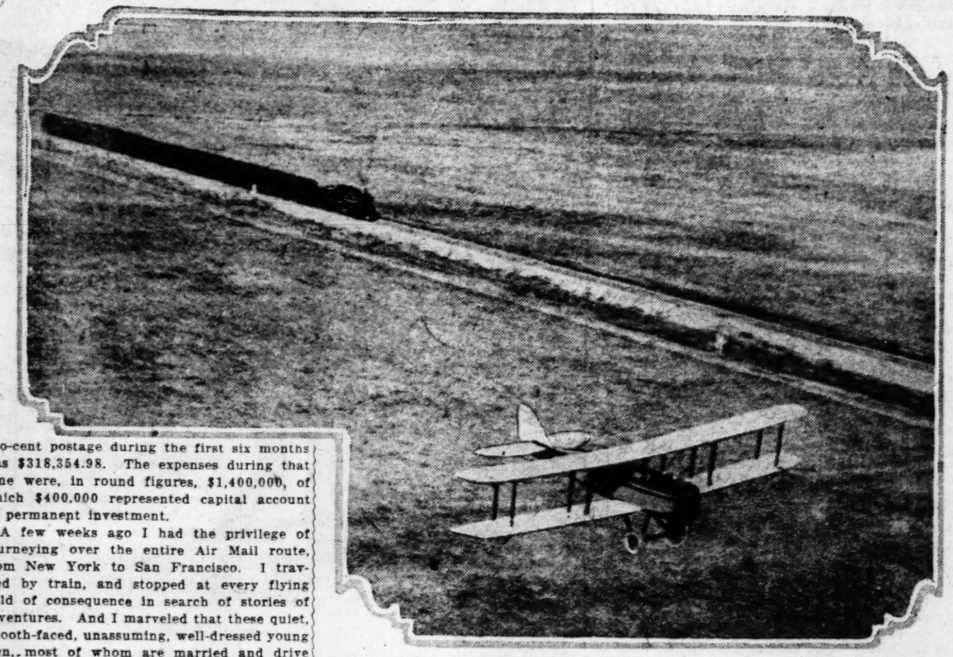
1925—Air Mail; average elapsed time, 33 hours from New York to San Francisco.

Approximately 85 per cent of the mail handled during the first 10 and a half months of day-and-night service, ending May 15, — some 8,000,000 letters—were delivered on schedule. The revenue which the Air Mail Service received above the regular two-cent postage during the first six months was $318,354.98. The expenses during that time were, in round figures, $1,400,000, of which $400,000 represented capital account or permanent investment.

A few weeks ago I had the privilege of journeying over the entire Air Mail route, from New York to San Francisco. I traveled by train, and stopped at every flying field of consequence in search of stories of adventure. And I marveled that these quiet, smooth-faced, unassuming, well-dressed young men, most of whom are married and drive their own cars, could have passed safely through some of their thrilling experiences.



A Postoffice plane, making nearly two miles a minute, overtaking and passing the Overland Limited on the Western plains.

Real Adventures

That part of the transcontinental Air Mail route lying between Cheyenne and the California-Nevada line has had more than its share of mishaps and adventures. It was between Cheyenne and Rock Springs that Pilot Boonstra swooped down to a boulder-strewn spot one morning to pick up Chandler, whose machine had been put out of business by a broken connecting rod. It was near the top of White Mountain, 12 miles from the Rock Springs Air Mail field, that Pilot Ellis and his sturdy plane were hurled by a "downdraft" into the steep, snow-covered side, like an arrow shot into a tree. Between Salt Lake City and Rock Springs have occurred half a dozen "forced landings" which came near resulting in disasters. It was in the Sierra Nevada Mountains that Pilot Huking, flying in a thick fog, crashed into the top of a tree and fell with his machine a hundred feet to the ground. Huking spent the next 10 days in bed, but at the end of that time was back on the job.

It was near the California-Nevada line, 60 miles from the nearest town, that Pilot Vance was forced down by a blizzard at nightfall, and unceremoniously dumped out on his head when his machine tipped over on its nose. He had landed in a patch of manzanita brush, higher than he could reach, and there he was forced to stay until daylight came. Another pilot, Blanchfield, found the "bumps" in the atmosphere above the crest of the Sierras more dangerous than those caused by bursting shells during the war. This pilot was caught by a "twister" peculiar to the Nevada desert on one occasion, and he also had a narrow escape from death when his plane broke out in flames as he landed at the Elko Air Mail Field. Once, with the thermometer at 60 degrees below zero, he made a flight of 235 miles through blinding sheets of snow and delivered the mail. When Blanchfield finally landed at Reno, looking more like a huge snow-man than a human being, the cockpit of his machine was almost full of snow and the pilot himself seemed to be frozen to his seat. On still another occasion, while flying in a blizzard, Blanchfield was forced to land on the snow-covered desert. After a five-hour search, the pilot came upon the shack of a wrinkled old Indian, who shoved a rifle in this "sky-devil's" face and refused point-blank to help him crank the motor of his machine.

A Coal Mine Explosion

In the Utah-Wyoming Bad Lands, between Salt Lake City and Rock Springs, occurred the forced landing of Pilot Bishop, which would have terminated fatally had it not been for the exceptional bravery and good flying judgment of Pilot Ellis. It was in this section of the country that Pilot Boonstra fell into the deadly tail-spin while three and one-half miles in the air, and came hurtling to earth. It isn't often that an aviator goes into a tail-spin and lives to tell the tale. Yet Boonstra not only was alive, but was stationed at Rock Springs. To Rock Springs, therefore, I hastened.

The wireless equipment at the air mail flying field buzzed and sputtered as our flivver came to an abrupt halt outside the little shack.

"What's up?" I inquired innocently, "westbound pilot late?"

"Worse than that," replied the youthful field manager; "there's been a big explosion in the coal mine at Kemmerer, 80 miles from here, and they want us to send a doctor and a gas expert by airplane right away. They're making up a special train at Rock Springs, with doctors and nurses, but that can't get there in less than four hours; Boonstra could fly there in less than an hour. I'm trying to get permission from Washington now for him to make the trip."

An Oil Well Emergency

This is not the first time, nor the twentieth, that the Air Mail Service has been called upon for aid in an emergency. Nor is it the first time that Pilot Boonstra has volunteered his services. One cold January day a year ago, a Wyoming physician received a telephone message that a lone sheep herder was dying of blood poisoning in the foothills of the Wind River Mountains, 20 miles from his office and 100 miles in an air line from Rock Springs. The doctor was unable to travel through the deep snow on foot, on horseback, or by automobile. Then someone thought of the air mail, with its powerful De Havilland airplanes. Within half an hour an appeal was received by telephone, the field manager had obtained by wireless the general superintendent's permission to send a plane to the relief of the stricken man, and Boonstra was off with nothing to guide him but the Green River. Landing in two feet of snow, after a flight of 80 miles, the pilot picked up the surgeon, wrapped him warmly in furs, bundled him into the mail cockpit of the machine, and flew the additional 20 miles over the snow-clad hills.

The Air Mail Service was called upon in another emergency last August when a giant gusher near Wellington, Colo., broke with a roar and began to spout green gas—the forerunner of all the oil strikes. They worked desperately to control the flow, and were succeeding, it seemed. Then something happened; in an instant the well became a spouting inferno, tossing a searing tongue of flame a hundred and fifty feet into the air.

Now, oil-well fires are neither uncommon nor impossible to control. But this gas-well fire was absolutely unmanageable. They tried dynamite. They tried steam. But it was impossible for the fire fighters to approach near enough; human flesh could not endure the blistering breath of those flames.

They must have fireproof clothing. The nearest source of asbestos was a thousand miles distant—twenty-six hours by train. No one knew at what moment the flow of oil would supplant the roar of escaping gas. Then one of them slapped his thigh. "I have it; the Air Mail!"

A telegram was dispatched to an asbestos manufacturer in Chicago; a finished suit was rushed to Maywood Field, on the outskirts of the city, and loaded onto the plane that covers the Chicago-Cheyenne run daily between twilight and dawn. The postage was $35.20, but the fireproof clothing was worth its weight in gold. At Cheyenne the next morning the suit was transferred to a waiting automobile, and rushed to the scene of the fire—at a saving of fourteen precious hours.

Each of the next three days brought an asbestos outfit by Air Mail. After a stubborn battle which is still talked about wherever drillers congregate, steam, dynamite and the asbestos suits won out.

These are episodes in the daily experience of the Air Mail Service. Dozens of others could be cited, but they would not support the claim made by the title of this article. Nor could any incident illustrate quite as vividly as the gas-well victory the fact that the Air Mail is no longer a fad; that it is a quick and dependable service.

Between July 1, 1924, and May 15, 1925, Air Mail pilots flew approximately 2,398,000 miles over mountains, valleys, plains, rivers; through lightning, cyclones, "twisters," sandstorms, snow, hail, rain, sleet, and fog. Of this total, some 627,000 miles were flown at night. Not a single serious accident was recorded against a pilot on active duty until late in December. This record of the Air Mail is much better than that of the Army Air Service, which records the loss of a pilot for every 500,000 miles flown during the last year.

Overnight Air Mail Service From New York to Chicago, July 1

Special to the Post-Dispatch. WASHINGTON, May 23.

"NOTHING can stop the overnight schedules between New York and Chicago from starting on July 1," Postmaster General Harry S. New said today.

"Lights have been delivered all along the route between the two cities and will be installed by that date," he continued. "Two-thirds of the way, from Chicago to Cleveland, and from New York to Bellefonte, Pa., are ready for use, and we'll be able to finish the stretch between Cleveland and Bellefonte during June.

"Our fliers will make their trials within the next ten days or two weeks. We don't see how anything can stop us."

Air mail transportation has aroused unexpected public interest within the last month, the Postmaster General said. "I can't account for it," he declared, "unless the explanation is that we've been watching this pot and waiting for it to boil, and now it blows off the lid."

Heavy traffic is expected on the overnight routes. During the past year, planes have been leaving New York in the morning, loaded almost entirely with Pacific Coast mail because business men could make as good Chicago connections by using ordinary mails. Under the new schedules, which are supplementary to the transcontinental service, mail can be posted in New York in the evening and catch the first morning delivery in Chicago.

Congress No Longer Representative

Rural Sections Have More Members, Though Most Voters Live in Cities

Citizens of Chicago, St. Louis or Los Angeles Have One-Fourth the Representation Given to Country Dweller —Revision of Districts Needed to Equalize Matters, Though Missouri Would Suffer Loss as to Total Number of Congressmen.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON.

THE framers of the Constitution intended that each person in the United States, whatever his station in life or his habitat, should have approximately the same voice in the making of laws by the House of Representatives. As the right of the States to equal representation, regardless of their relative size, was recognized in the creation of the Senate, so the right of the individual to a fair share in the conduct of his Government was safeguarded—or so the fathers thought—by the establishment of the House of Representatives, the people's branch of the Congress.

At the very outset, in Article 1, the Constitution provides for the apportionment of representatives among the States according to population. The same section of the same article requires an enumeration of the people to be made every ten years. It is clear from the context that the purpose of this enumeration, or census, is to furnish a basis for equitable reapportionment, as the growth or shifting of population may demand.

In obedience to the Constitutional mandate, reapportionment legislation was enacted within two years after each decennial census from the first, that of 1790, down to and including the thirteenth, that of 1910. Only the last, the fourteenth, census, taken in 1920, has gone unheeded. More than five years have elapsed, virtually six years will have elapsed by the opening of the next session of Congress—and still there is no law which takes account of the marked population changes in the decade from 1910 to 1920. Representation in Congress remains on the basis fixed 15 years ago.

If reapportionment is passed over by the session which begins next December, it is highly probable that nothing will be done to cure existing inequalities until after the census of 1930. In that event rural United States will continue for several more years to hold the legislative whiphand over the cities.

Population Shifts to Cities

With the growth of industrialism, the urban population has steadily increased at a more rapid rate than the rural. In 1890, the dwellers in cities and towns of more than 2500 population (the territory classified by the Census Bureau as urban) numbered but 35.4 per cent of the whole population. By 1900 the percentage had risen to 40 and by 1910 to 45.8. The census of 1920 showed that in the preceding decade the urban population had overtaken and passed the rural, the respective percentages being, at the time of the enumeration, 51.4 and 48.6. The same forces that shifted the weight of numbers from one side to the other are operating to give the cities and towns an increasing preponderance from year to year.

If the Constitutional theory of representation held good in practice, the urban population would today have a greater voting power in the House than the rural. Quite the contrary is true. The tail is wagging the dog in Congress. In the proportion that the urban districts continue to gain population faster than the rest of the country, the tail grows shorter as the dog waxes larger. The city man shrinks in legislative power as his country brother grows. On a mounting scale, the equality of representation designed by the Constitution is defeated. This condition, in constantly aggravated form, will persist until there is a radical realignment of the present representation in the House. A duty rests upon both Congress and the States; upon Congress to pass a just reapportionment act and upon the States to lay out congressional districts composed of contiguous territory and equal population, as directed by every apportionment act since 1872.

There are 435 members of the House, representing a population, according to the 1920 census, of about 105,000,000. The ratio is one Congressman to each group of approximately 243,000. By so much as a district exceed this figure, it is under-represented in the House, and by so much as it falls short it is over-represented.

Great Cities the Losers

A study of the census statistics reveals some glaring discrepancies. A citizen of the Seventh Illinois District (Chicago), or of the First Michigan (Detroit), or of the Tenth Missouri (St. Louis), or of the Tenth California (Los Angeles), has, in effect, less than half a Congressman, for each of these districts contains more than half a million people, or more than double the populations of the average district. But if a man has the good fortune, legislatively speaking, to live in the Second California, or the Third South Dakota, or the Eighth Missouri, or the Sixth Missouri, none of which has as much as 104,000 population, he has, for practical purposes, more than a Congressman and a half.

This inequality of representation between the four city districts and the four rural districts becomes clearer when the actual population figures are compared. Here are the totals for the former, which rank as the largest districts in the United States:

Seventh Illinois	560,434
First Michigan	535,353
Tenth Missouri	521,008
Tenth California	516,283

Excluding Nevada (population 7,407) from the comparison, because of the constitutional provision that each State shall have at least one representative, the four smallest districts are as follows:

Second California	129,357
Third South Dakota	128,021
Eighth Missouri	128,80
Sixth Missouri	128,921

In proportion to population, these rural districts have four times the voting power of the big-city districts. In other words, 545,126 people have exactly the same representation in Congress as 2,133,078.

A General Condition

The foregoing comparison is an extreme one, but it does not greatly exaggerate a condition that runs throughout the representation in Congress. Add a sufficient number of districts to bring the total at each end of the scale to 20, and again you have a graphic illustration of the disproportionate power conferred on the rural districts by the failure of Congress to give the cities the representation of which they are entitled under the last census.

In order of population, here are the 16 largest districts after the four already named:

Thirteenth Michigan (Detroit)	458,414
Sixth Illinois (Chicago)	458,175
Sixth Michigan (Highland Park, Lansing)	442,797
Fourteenth Ohio (Lorain, Ashtabula)	429,613
Ninth California (Los Angeles)	420,172
Tenth Illinois (Chicago)	408,470
Fifth North Carolina	408,139
Second Illinois (Chicago)	401,585
Twenty-third New York (Bronx)	391,950
Twelfth Pennsylvania (Luzerne County)	390,991
Fifth Missouri (Jackson County)	367,846
Sixth Pennsylvania (Philadephia)	359,601
Twenty-second Ohio (Cleveland)	364,959
Third Illinois (Chicago)	359,018
Twenty-fourth New York (Westchester, Bronx)	355,754
Second New York (Queens)	355,737

All of these are districts with a wholly or preponderantly urban population. The smallest of the lot contains more than 100,000 people in excess of the theoretical ratio. Compare the 20 top districts with the 20 at the bottom, bearing in mind that each group has the same number of Congressmen, and a fair idea is gained of the relative potency of the city and the country in national politics.

Small Country Districts

The list of the 20 least populated districts is completed by the following, in most of which the rural element predominates:

Fourth Colorado	146,532
Fifth Tennessee	145,403
Twelfth Missouri	142,189
Fifteenth Pennsylvania	150,554
Third Missouri	151,884
Fourth Kansas	152,378
Sixteenth Missouri	155,249
First Iowa	156,594
Fifth Illinois	158,092
Second Oregon	160,502
Thirteenth Missouri	160,692
First Missouri	161,935
Thirteenth New York	163,292
Twelfth New York	165,123
Second Missouri	165,266
Twenty-first Pennsylvania	166,611

"Oppressive Laws Invite Offense."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE following might well be mistaken for an extract from a Post-Dispatch editorial of recent date:

"Laws should be as few and simple as may be; for an extension and obscure code multiplies occasions for offense and brings the citizens unnecessarily into collision with the state. Above all, let the laws bear broadly on their front the impress of justice and humanity, so that the moral sense of the community may become their sanction. Arbitrary and oppresive laws invite offense, and take from disobedience the consciousness of guilt. It is even wise to abstain from laws which, however wise and good in themselves, have the semblance of inequality, and so find no response in the heart of the citizen and will be evaded with little remorse."

As a matter of fact, however, this is a quotation from an address on "Spiritual Freedom," delivered by that eminent New Englander, William Ellery Channing, a century ago. The thoughts expressed are those of a superb representative of the highest type of American citizenship, whose spiritually exalted character and winning eloquence made him one of the greatest personal influences for moral good this country has produced—so great, indeed, that Theodore Parker said of him that "no man since Washington had done so much to elevate his country."

But what cares your mischievously officious "reformer" of today for what Channing, or any other great and honored American of the past, thought or said? It is all negligible bunk to him, just as history was declared to be by the individual whom Senator Reed sarcastically classified as the Alexander Hamilton of the present-day America. The marshaled wisdom of all the ages—probably even an apocalyptic pronouncement from some new Patmos—would not suffice to convince a certain type of too prevalent mentality that there never has and never can exist a system of man-made laws constituting some sort of "legislative alchemy by which leaden instincts can be transmuted into golden conduct," and that a modern democracy cannot be temporarily converted into an astynomocracy—to make use of the formidable polysyllable coined by Huxley to designate police government—and survive the experiment. Possibly the real danger of the situation—the actual menace of those who insist on the perilous experiment—lies in the fact that these dangerous busy-bodies are not at all interested in the survival of American democracy.

Protection of Wild Life.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

FOR ready reference there is attached a copy of your editorial, May 11, 1925, "Too High a Price for Birds." This organization, believing that the wild life of the nation is of intrinsic value to all mankind, that it is in trust with man and the responsibility of its preservation rests equally upon the shoulders of mankind. We further believe that this Government has no prototype in history that our Constitution did not grow up like Topsy, that somebody fought for it, that we plucked it from the crimson rivers of revolution and that it is our duty through inheritance to defend its sacred mandate.

We therefore as an organization beg to advise our hearty appreciation of the sentiment made manifest in the attached editorial of your great publication.

Another Camp Jackson Version.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. CHARLES E. BOYDEN'S interesting communication concerning Camp Jackson day reminded me of the version I sang:

"Twas on the tenth of May,
When Kelley was away,
The Dutch surrounded Camp Jackson;
Lyon was there, and Boernstien and Blair,
To drive us from the happy land of Canaan.

The people gave three cheers
For Davis and the volunteers,
Which raised the Heesians' indignation.
They fired on our brothers,
Killing wives, sisters and mothers,
But we'll be avenged
In the happy land of Canaan.
Ho, boys, ho! Won't you hear me now?
They say dissolution is acoming,
So, never mind the weather,
Just get over double trouble;
We are bound for the happy land of Canaan."

M. C. L.

HONESTY STILL WINS.

During a talk at the luncheon of the Pilgrims' Society of the United States the other day Chauncey M. Depew observed, "If you understand psychology you can run the world." Elsewhere he referred to the commission headed by Stanley Baldwin which came to Washington in January, 1923, to arrange terms for paying the British debt, "as the greatest ever sent to the United States from across the sea."

Whether one agrees with the superlative or not, there can be no question of the psychological effect of that commission's work. By psychological effect we mean, of course, the effect on public opinion. The burden England assumed in that agreement appealed to our sporting instincts. Her sheer gameness challenged our admiration. Nor did American public opinion fail to observe the contrast between England's gritty determination to pay her score and the evasive, shuffling deportment of our other debtors, especially France.

The results of England's gameness have already taken tangible form. The pound sterling is about back to par. England's credit is A-1. She can borrow money here in hundreds of millions, at a low interest rate. France cannot do that. If France wanted a loan today she would have to pay a premium interest rate. That is psychology in the harsh, but just, language of money.

We used to hear a lot about psychology during the war. Germany in its propaganda was singularly inept. Since the war Germany has shown little progress in this delicate art of cultivating the confidence and good will of other nations. But in the matter of ineptness Germany must yield first place to France.

It is fair to say, we believe, that France would have repudiated her debt to the United States if she had dared to do it. Certainly that is the impression of the average American citizen. The consequence is that American sympathy for France, which at the close of the war was a magnificent account on which France might have drawn heavily, is now, pretty well dried up. The United States—not the Government at Washington, but the American people—is fed up with France's evasions, preposterous counter-claims and tenacious illusion as to cancellation. To put it bluntly, France has forfeited America's good opinion. Our inclination toward leniency is getting chilled. We may not be in the mood to exact the pound of flesh, but we do resent further imposition by France. The American taxpayer is weary of paying taxes for loans made to France. He thinks the French taxpayer ought to pay as much on these loans as he is well able to pay. The American citizen not only thinks that, but is prepared to insist upon it. He is prepared to support any efforts the Government may make in this direction and if necessary to spur the Government into action.

That is what French bungling has done for France in the United States. It has soured the American people's good will.

"If you understand psychology you can run the world." But the word psychology, despite its appearance in every-day usage, is still a somewhat mysterious stranger. It walks on stilts. It has an esoteric cast of countenance. Mr. Depew's aphorism can be translated by a homely old copy-book maxim: "Honesty is the best policy."

A HOPELESS WASTE OF MONEY.

In 1918 the United States received from liquor taxation $443,839,544. Prohibition not only cut off this revenue, but promises to gradually but surely change this huge income into an intolerable load of useless taxation in the attempt to put an end to the industry which formerly helped in so large a measure to pay the cost of government.

The appropriation bill passed last December provided $11,000,000 for general prohibition enforcement, and $20,000,000 for coast guard service to patrol the 12-mile limit. On the Atlantic coast alone there is now in active service a $20,000,000 dry fleet, seeking to disperse and put out of business a rum fleet representing a combine of $1,000,000,000. What will be the cost of maintaining this armada, which must keep watch and ward day and night on every approaching vessel along a coast hundreds of miles in length, and offering all sorts of opportunities for rum runners to get through the blockade, remains to be seen.

Estimates of the cost of prohibition enforcement for the next two years, made last September by Washington authorities, placed it at $50,000,000. Later developments seem to show that this estimate is far too low.

The United States has a boundary line, including coast lines and land boundaries between Canada and Mexico, of 10,758 miles. It is evident that, if the so-called rum fleet off the New England coast line is dispersed, the prohibition unit will have only begun its hopeless task of imposing the habits of the Puritanic minority upon a nation which plainly shows its contempt for such tyranny.

A pedestrian authorized by ordinance to stop a car at a crossing by raising his hand could die at least with the satisfaction of knowing that the law was on his side.

THE RAILROADS AND THE BUS LINES.

Regulation of motor truck and bus lines by the same bodies which supervise the railways is urged by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Self-preservation is back of the resolution, for the inroads of motorized transportation have cost many railroad men their jobs, as the older carriers have curtailed service and even abandoned branch lines in face of the new competition.

Railroads in many sections have seen a decline in passenger business in the past year, as a result of the busses. They have seen express revenue wane, as trucks provided better service or lower rates over a limited radius. Even the short-haul freight business has yielded something to gasoline. The railroads will be one with their employes in this demand.

But the problem reaches beyond the railroads. New bus and truck lines are launched and licensed nearly every day. A few of these aid inland towns, lacking railway service, but a vast majority parallel and compete with the railroads. The number will increase as states, counties and the nation add to the mileage of hard-surfaced highways. The service will improve, too, as better roads are built. Greater speed and greater independence of weather conditions are gained by the busses as the roads are paved.

People want the most serviceable transportation. Railroads still are a necessity, but if the motor-driven vehicle is superior for short hauls, or offers comparable service cheaper, the people want that. But there will be further regulation, and higher taxation. In most states, there should be. As railway earnings feel this competition, the taxable value of railways may decline. Whether it does or not, these carriers that use the highways for profit should pay a fairer share of the cost of construction and upkeep. A new and gigantic transportation business is being built rapidly. This is public service, and it is time now to begin to shape it in a manner to serve the public to best advantage.

PROMOTING CONTEMPT OF COURT.

Dr. Post and the supporters of the Antisaloon League who are attacking the Federal Court and the law officers in St. Louis, charging conspiracy to railroad Heber Nations to the penitentiary and appealing to the people to petition President Coolidge to halt the trial and investigate the Federal officials who handled the case, are certainly guilty of contempt of court and are promoting general contempt of court by circulating their charge and appeal throughout the State.

If they made any such charges and reflections on the honor and honesty of the Federal Court and the officers of the law, within the precincts of the court, undoubtedly they would be arraigned for contempt.

There are laws governing this sort of lawless conduct. Whether the attempt to foster disrespect, contempt and trial by mob is punishable under the Federal statutes is a question for judicial decision. Judge Faris is an upright Judge, who has striven faithfully to uphold the laws and administer justice. The protection of his court and the law officers who are serving it from vicious charges and reflections on their honesty and fidelity rests with his conscience and judgment.

WHEN A "MAMMY" DIED.

That was a pretty ceremony in Macon, Ga., when the body of Anna Jordan, an aged negro "mammy," was placed in an exclusive white cemetery, next to the bodies of children she had nursed. It was preceded by an elaborate funeral from the mansion of the Smith family, which she had served for nearly 40 years. No one who knows the South can doubt that this honor to Mammy was dictated by the deepest love for her. She was much more than a servant. By her long devotion, she had become a definite part of the family.

Such a ceremony in the North would be sheer affectation, if it could take place at all. Such a relationship as existed between Anna Jordan and the Smith family is simply unknown above the Mason-Dixon line.

No doubt many Northerners will be totally unable to understand why Anna Jordan was given such honor. But Anna Jordan's case is not uncommon. For negro servants to be given places of honor at white weddings and funerals in the South is something so customary among people of gentility that it is scarcely remarked. The news of a negro lynching in the South spreads far and wide, but for every negro who is lynched or persecuted a thousand enjoy tender associations with white families.

The Anna Jordan incident is valuable in illustrating to the North something of the attitude of the South toward colored people. That attitude has been grossly misunderstood and misinterpreted, and that a Southern family should be so affectionate toward a servant as the Smiths were to Anna Jordan will help to dispel many illusions.

ANDREW JACKSON, WARTS AND ALL

Few figures in American history have been more greatly admired than Andrew Jackson, that vigorous son of Tennessee, every inch a man, every inch a soldier, every inch a patriot. So that when Nashville gets excited over an article by Meade Minnegerode in a current magazine which pictures him as a ruffian and as a man without culture, it is expending useless energy. A hundred such articles could not dim Old Hickory's glory, or lessen the affection that we feel toward him, or the admiration that he evokes.

But in holding Jackson to our hearts, we do so with a full knowledge of his personality. His crudities, his backwoods flavor, his ignorance of bookish things, were all part of him, even though they were outweighed by such vastly more important characteristics as honesty, simplicity and courage. Why, then, should Nashville hold mass meetings to proclaim that the Andrew Jacksons sustained their high place in American society by "refined attainments?"

This is loyalty and love speaking, and not the tempered judgment of history. Mr. Minnegerode wrote as a scholar and a historian, and if he calls Jackson a rough man, he is supported by a wealth of evidence. Even the Americana, which certainly speaks dispassionately, says of Jackson: "He was the idol of the mass of the people—of the common man. To the more cultured portions of American society he was an uncouth, illiterate backwoodsman."

But the Americana does not fail to pay him the highest compliments for his mind of "great natural power," his "original" ideas, his energy, persistency, loyalty to friends and the like. Jackson himself would probably be amused at being called a ruffian. Certainly he had no pretensions at being an elegant decoration in a drawing room, a lounge-lizard as it were. Jackson would be touched at the indignation of his Nashville friends, but he would recognize the truth of Mr. Minnegerode's characterization.

Can't we have the truth about Andrew Jackson or any other character in American history without arousing ill feeling? Surely to have Cromwell, warts and all, is better than to have Cromwell bedizened to look like Apollo Belvidere.

PIPE DREAMS.

When twilight shadows deepen, then I fill my pipe and dream:
A pipe, a book, an easy chair, a candle's friendly gleam;
When all my cares go up in smoke, how light my troubles seem!

Who learns to love may learn to rue when love is spent and dead;
Who loves a lass can hate as well when all her charms have fled;
But when my pipe gets dry and hot, I've other pipes instead!

Who trusts to friends is left alone when friendly hearts are still;
For friends must pass—on those we love fierce death must work his will;
When I go out, my pipe goes out, so trustingly I fill!

Who thirsts for wealth and slaves for gold
may not enjoy his greed;
We live but once and all I ask is that I know not need:
For as the smoke curls slowly up, from all my cares I'm freed!

A home to some is heaven, and they ask for nothing more;
A wife can be a nuisance, and the children,
too, might bore;
So let me have my freedom, with the ashes
on the floor!

They took my liquor from me—gone the wine that I esteem:
But reading Omar's helpful all this dryness to redeem:
And I can stand their nonsense if they'll let me smoke—and dream!

Sir: Signs are not lacking that a recrudescence of the age of faith is at hand. Prophecy has been rife that the world would end on several recent dates. (The mere fact that it did not only makes the faith more impressive—faith and fact vary always in inverse proportion). A celebrated lady harpist on her deathbed in New York ordered her four cats to be killed so that their souls might accompany hers to heaven. A preacher in Los Angeles about to die assured his flock that he would rise again in the classical three-day period. They waited five days ready with a suit of clothes for him freshly cleaned and pressed, but the dollar was wasted. (Or do the Los Angeles cleaners charge more than a dollar for a man's suit?)

To be sure, all these are individual phenomena. More representative, in a large sense, is the action of a State like Tennessee in forbidding the teaching of evolution. What a glorious defending of the faith that was, my hearties!

But all the above are as nought beside that overwhelming Republican majority for Coolidge. As an act of simple faith it simply takes the cake. SPECTATOR.

IVAN THE PEASANT, MASTER OF RUSSIA.

From the Irish Statesman.

IT is announced from Moscow that, as a result of discussions with representatives of the peasants, Stalin, on behalf of the soviet Government, has promised measures which will mean legal recognition of the agriculturist's claim to ownership of holding, and the removal of the restrictions which prevent him from holding political offices except on provincial committees. Should these reforms be carried out, they will mean in practice little more than official recognition of an accomplished fact. While, according to the Agrarian policy which supplemented Lenin's new economic policy, property rights in land do not exist, the Bolsheviks have long since lost the power to meddle with the right of the peasant to possession of the soil was to prove a strength as compared with which the vaunted power of white armies or the threats of embittered Europe were the gentlest of summer breezes. Though the leaders of the Russian revolution borrowed their philosophy from Marx, it is now clear that the driving power behind which made possible "the dictatorship of the proletariat" was essentially the peasant revolt, and that at every crisis since 1917 the peasant has retained an effective political veto by the power of the last resort to apply irresistible economic pressure. His refusal to cultivate more than was necessary for his own needs broke down the scheme to socialize agriculture, and later by declining to exchange goods with the towns at the famine prices that resulted from the soviet's efforts to control industry, he forced Lenin to reverse his economic policy. The Russian revolution came to an end when the peasant had firmly consolidated his position. What Russia it has developed beyond this point, but, if anything is certain, it is that the last word in the Russian revolution will rest not with Marxian theorists but with the man with the spade.

BLACKBIRDS AND BLACKBIRDS

From the Ohio State Journal.

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS, in an article in Scribner's Magazine, expresses some surprise that the European blackbird sings so beautifully, while our own blackbirds produce so poor a variety of music. After hearing our blackbirds, grackles and redwings, when Prof. Phelps heard in Europe "a strain of the most beautiful music in the world" he could hardly believe it when they told him it was a blackbird singing. The English or European blackbird is not a blackbird at all, according to the American understanding of the designation. The English blackbird belongs to the thrush family, of which our wood thrush, wood thrush and robin are prominent members. They all sing well. In musical ability runs in the thrush family wherever its representatives are found. The English blackbird is really our robin, except that he differs somewhat in appearance, the variations being due perhaps to climatic conditions. No wonder he can sing! The bird known in England as the robin is really a warbler, not related at all to our robin except that both are birds.

VISCOUNT GREY IMAGINES BISMARCK'S IRE AT GERMAN BLUNDERS IN DIPLOMACY

Noted British Statesman, in Memoirs, Deals With Agadir Crisis of 1911 and Later Events Leading Up to War.

In the Memoirs of Lord Grey, noted English statesman, which have been published recently, an interesting chapter deals with the Agadir affair in 1911, and its effect on the war to follow three years later. The political results of the affair are history but Lord Grey takes occasion to tell what he supposes Bismarck might have said to the rulers of Germany, had he been alive at that time. Lord Grey writes:

"If the Agadir crisis was intended to end either in the diplomatic humiliation of France or in war, why was it allowed to end without effecting either object? The answer would be that in 1911 the German fleet was not so strong in 1914, nor the German army on the same height of equipment to which it was subsequently brought by her capital levy. Germany had, therefore, decided not to risk war with Britain, and when it became apparent that there was no risk she switched, difficult as it then was to do so, on to a policy of certain peace.

"Before the crisis she may have been encouraged to think the risk of war with Britain negligible or even remote. My own conduct of Foreign Affairs had become very unpopular with part of the Liberal Press, and was the subject of open criticism. The writer of these attacks made the mistake, as is so often done, of attributing all that is disliked to the influence of one man, not realizing that all-important telegrams to and from the Foreign Office were circulated every day to the Cabinet and that it was impossible for any Secretary for Foreign Affairs to continue in his post unless he had the general approval of the Cabinet. How much the impression made in Germany by these Liberal critics was increased by sources with which the agents of the German Embassy in London were bound to be in touch I never knew or inquired. The surmise is that Germany thought, for one reason or another, that we should be less firm in 1911 in a Morocco crisis than we were in 1906. If so, the speech of Lloyd George must have overthrown the whole of their calculations.

We were told at the time, with what truth I do not know, that when it seemed possible that war might come, the great financial interests in Germany were strongly opposed to it, urging that they had not been warned in time to make suitable arrangements. If this be true, the fact that the German Government had not warned their financiers can only be accounted for in one of two ways: either they had overlooked the necessity for warning them, or else this theory that the German Government had contemplated and deliberately provoked the contingency of war is not correct. Some day perhaps the Germans will tell us—if they really know or have still the means of finding out—the truth.

Almost a Fiasco.

The end was almost a fiasco for Germany; out of this mountain of a German-made crisis had come a mouse of colonial territory in tropical Africa. France was left with her prestige intact and free of the Moroccо thumbscrews. Happily, there was sufficient criticism of what France had ceded to prevent the end being regarded in France as a triumph. Colonial parties in France as in Britain and elsewhere are apt to estimate portions of tropical Africa by the number of square miles and not by their real value. Lloyd George, of course, made no speech about having been a brilliant second in shining armor. But the consequences of such a foreign crisis do not end with it. They seem to end, but they only go underground and reappear later on. The militarists in Germany were bitterly disappointed over Agadir and when the next crisis came we found them with the reins in their hands at Berlin.

So also with the consequences of the Bosnia-Herzegovina crisis; in 1914 Germany and Austria found a Russia that would not collapse to order a second time.

Since 1906 I had made no inquiry whether the British and French military authorities were remaining in close touch, though I had assumed that they were doing so. Agadir made it certain that their preparations would be kept up to date. This reflection suggested to me in later years a train of thought, that took shape in imagining the indictment, that Bismarck, could he have been a spectator of it all, might have brought against his successors, particularly in their dealings with Britain.

"It may be that the Franco-Russian Alliance could not be prevented; the very strength of the Triple Alliance was almost bound to call that counter-Alliance into being. But when it was made there was no chance of England joining it; indeed, the Alliance seemed directed more against England than against Germany, so bad were the relations of England with both France and Russia. At length England in her discomfort publicly through Chamberlain offered us an alliance. You rejected it and added to English discomfort by starting a naval program, which everybody, considered a challenge to the British fleet. At last England and France tired of their quarrels, perceived that these were a danger to themselves and an advantage to Germany, and English statesmen, weary of the discomfort of their isolation and apprehensive for the future, found French statesmen ready to make up their quarrels in the Anglo-French Agreement of 1904. Thereupon you threatened France; she gave up Delcasse; you saved that point, but in doing so you turned the Anglo-French Agreement into an Entente. Meanwhile you made no attempt to check the hatred of England that was felt in Germany, not understanding that to indulge hatred is sure to spoil wise policy and sound statecraft. And those speeches of the Emperor, who thought even while I lived that he could do better without than with me; those shining armour and mailed fist speeches, those rattlings of the sword which he personally never seriously desired to draw in great conflict—what else could they have done than make other nations look nervously to the state of their own weapons? You increased the naval competition and rejected, sometimes even resented, English overtures for a naval agreement. As if England could possibly give up the naval competition!—the navy being to her all that the army was to Germany.

"Crisis of Agadir."

"Meanwhile, as if to make sure that English and French military as well as naval authorities kept their arrangements up to the mark, you caused the crisis of Agadir. What purpose did that business serve, except to bring England and France closer together?

"And finally, you let your military staffs prepare a war plan, of which the unprovoked invasion of Belgium was a cardinal point, and you think to this day that the invasion of Belgium had nothing to do with England's entry into war against you! I will tell you what I would have done. After the Franco-Russian Alliance was made, I should have foreseen that in spite of an English Minister's boast about 'Splendid Isolation,' the discomfort of England's position must bring her to Germany, and when the offer came, as come it did to you, I would have made sure that it did not come to nothing. There would then have been no agreement with France, or if there had been, it would have been conditioned by the Alliance or previous agreement with Germany. I should have had my hand in it and known all about it; and the same as regards relations between England and Russia, just as you knew when Austria and Russia joined in a mutual arrangement as in the Murzsteg program about the Balkans. Then when the Russian fleet had been destroyed by the Japanese, I should have made the German fleet strong enough to overmatch the French, telling England my object and stopping naval expenditure there. Had you followed this policy, England would have been no obstacle to German commercial expansion; even as it was, she practically came to agreement with you about the Bagdad railway.

"Then if I thought the time had come for war I should have remembered how in 1870 the British Government required me, as a condition of neutrality to sign an agreement to respect Belgium, and what English statesmen said about it at the time. I should have made sure whether English feeling was still the same, and have told the General Staff that they must have a plan that did not involve Belgium, or else they must have no war. With England neutral I should have been sure of Italy; with France and Russia unable to maintain supplies of munitions or even to purchase them from abroad, the war would not have been long, and victory would have been certain. Then easy terms for France and Russia as for Austria in 1866, and Germany would have been supreme on the Continent. England would meanwhile by the development of modern weapons and aircraft have lost much of the safety she once had, as an island; she would have had no friend but Germany, and Germany could have made that friendship what she pleased."

Germans can judge whether such a policy as is here suggested for Bismarck was possible for them. Had such a policy been pursued by Germany I think it not only possible but almost certain that British Ministers and British opinion would have reacted to it as described. The result would have been German predominance and British dependence, but this would not have been foreseen in London till too late.

Congress Still Controlled By the Rural Districts

population overwhelmingly urban, are compared with the 30 smallest, which with few exceptions, cover a territory essentially rural, it is seen that approximately 11,900,000 people have the same number of Congressmen to look out for their interests as approximately 4,580,000 people. To put the contracts in another way, less than one-twentieth of the population can offset the strength of more than one-tenth of the population in any test that arises in the House of Representatives; or, in still other words, each individual of the smaller group is two and a half times as powerful in the national legislative field as each individual of the larger.

Under a fair system of apportionment, as contemplated by the first article of the Constitution, the 11,900,000 people would have, on the basis of the 1920 census, 48 Congressmen instead of 30, and the 4,580,000 people would have 19 instead of 30. If the apportionment were made with regard to the increase in population since 1920, there would be a still wider gap in favor of the urban group.

Prohibition a By-Product.

Considering that 29 votes would be changed from the country to the city side in the 60 districts used in the example, it is certainly well within the bounds of conservatism to say that reapportionment affecting the whole of Congress would produce a change of 50 votes.

That such a material upset would have had its effect on the legislation of the last few years cannot be doubted. For conspicuous single example, take the item of prohibition. Prohibition was fastened upon the country by the Anti-Saloon League, and the strength of the league is derived in great measure from the rural districts. It is a warrantable assumption, from the figures which have been adduced, that if the dry forces in Congress had not possessed a disproportionate strength, the Eighteenth Amendment would not have been submitted to the states for ratification.

Advantage in Close Votes.

The vote on the amendment was taken in the House on Dec. 17, 1917. By that date, only two years before the end of the decade, the movement to the cities revealed by the census of 1920 had reached an advanced stage. To a degree only slightly less than at present, the cities were underrepresented and the country was overrepresented.

The House agreed to the amendment by a vote of 282 to 128. A change of nine votes would have kept it from receiving the two-thirds majority required.

The Volstead act was passed over President Wilson's veto, Oct. 27, 1919, by a vote of 175 to 55. Again a two-thirds majority was necessary. A shift of 22 votes would have changed the result.

Affects Presidential Choice.

Since the representation of the various states in the national political conventions and the Electoral College is determined by the congressional apportionment, the advantage enjoyed by the rural districts in Congress is reflected in the nomination of candidates for President, in the making of party platforms, and finally in the choice of the President. There can be no question that if the cities had had their fair share of delegates in the Democratic convention at New York, the resolution denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name, instead of being defeated by the margin of one vote, would have received a majority. All the subsequent proceedings of the convention would have been affected, and the whole course of the campaign might have been altered.

Because of the failure of Congress to make a new apportionment of representatives after the 1920 census, 19 States had more or fewer than their just quota of votes in the last Electoral College. California, which made an exceptionally heavy population gain in the 1910-20 decade, was the chief sufferer from this misrepresentation, while Missouri, a laggard in the population race, was the chief beneficiary. California was three votes short of its fair allotment; Michigan and Ohio were underrepresented by two votes each, and Connecticut, New Jersey, North Carolina, Texas and Washington by one vote each. Missouri had two more votes than its 1920 population warranted, and Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Nebraska, Rhode Island and Vermont had each one vote too many.

System Profits Missouri.

Missouri, by virtue of its small population gain from 1910 to 1920 (a gain of only 3.4 per cent as compared with a national average of 14.9 per cent), furnishes the most striking examples of inequalities in the present system of Congressional apportionment. Missouri has 16 Congressmen for a 1920 population of 3,404,055; California has only 11 Congressmen for a population of 3,426,861. With fewer people, Missouri is nearly 50 per cent stronger than California in the House of Representatives, in national conventions and in the Electoral College.

The following table of congressional districts in the two States shows the advantage enjoyed by Missouri over California, and shows also how rural Missouri is over-represented in Congress at the expense of the cities:

District	Missouri	California
First	161,085	220,795
Second	165,266	129,367
Third	151,884	303,208
Fourth	176,591	269,372
Fifth	367,846	237,203
Sixth	138,931	244,177
Seventh	217,713	345,023
Eighth	138,907	292,415
Ninth	177,668	420,172
Tenth	521,008	516,283
Eleventh	210,437	348,765
Twelfth	142,189	....
Thirteenth	160,692	....
Fourteenth	512,540	....
Fifteenth	206,149	....
Sixteenth	155,249	....

St. Louis and Kansas City Lose.

The Missouri figures reflect not only the scant population gain made by the State as a whole from 1910 to 1920, but the decadence of the rural districts (except Southeast Missouri), which was evidenced by their actual population loss of 4.4 per cent during the decade.

If St. Louis and Kansas City, which gained respectively 12.5 per cent and 20.6 per cent from 1910 to 1920, finishing the decade with a combined population of about 1,100,000, had their fair proportion of Missouri's 16 Congressmen, they would have at least five devoted exclusively to their interests. At present they are represented by four, and two of these are shared by territory outside of the cities. If the total representation of the State were reduced to accord with the present population, the two cities, under an equitable redistricting of the State, would have at least four and perhaps five Congressmen, as against 10 or nine for the rest of the State.

Many Scanty Districts.

Under the present lopsided system the Missouri districts range in size from the Tenth (part of St. Louis and all of St. Louis County), the third largest in the United States, with a population of 521,008, down to the Eighth Missouri (center of the State, the third smallest in the United States, population 138,807. Thirteen of the 16 districts fall below the national average of 243,000 established by the last census. Eight of the 16 districts are included in the list of the 20 smallest in the United States.

Obviously, though state pride may cry out against reduction of Missouri's representation in Congress, the condition illustrated by these figures needs to be cured. Fairness to the nation at large demands a reapportionment by Congress; and fairness to the cities of Missouri demands that the State Legislature, after that reapportionment has been voted, shall redistrict the State with proper regard to the great shifting of population that has taken place in the last 15 years. Certainly it ought not to be possible for the residents of the Tenth District to be outvoted nearly four to one in the national legislature by a group which happens to live in some other portion of the State.

Would Cut Missouri's Seats.

Missourians might as well become reconciled to the fact that reapportionment, whenever voted by Congress, will diminish that State's representation. Only in the event that Congress decides to increase the size of the House to 482, or more members will the State escape an actual reduction, and in that case it will suffer a proportionate loss through the additional members given other states. If the House is held to its present membership of 435, Missouri will lose two members, and if the roster is increased to 460, as proposed in a bill reported by the House Census Committee in 1923 but never voted upon, Missouri will lose one member.

Retention of the 435 standard, adjusted to the 1920 population figures, would give a ratio of one Congressman to every 242,415 people, instead of one to every 211,877 shown by the 1910 census. This readjustment would take 12 seats from states which fell behind the average population gain from 1910 to 1920, and give them to states which forged ahead.

Maine Also Affected.

Missouri is the only State that would lose more than one seat. Manifestly, as the average population requirement per district is decreased, the number of representatives increases, and fewer and fewer states appear in the table of those that would lose by reapportionment. When the requirement is placed at 228,882 residents to each congressional district, the number of Congressmen reaches 460 and Missouri's prospective loss dwindles to one member, with only one other State—Maine—in the same boat. Not until 482 becomes the standard does Missouri retain her present quota of Congressmen, and still another must be added to the total before Maine is saved from loss.

Enlarging Congress Difficult.

Addition of 48 members to the House would be a heavy price to pay for the doubtful benefit of keeping Missouri and Maine at their present representation. The salary increase alone would be $480,000, while the items of clerk hire, mileage and other perquisites would run the total annual cost to close to $750,000. A further heavy outlay, probably in the millions, would be required to provide additional space in the already crowded House office building.

Heretofore Congress has generally taken care of population increases by the simple method of raising the size of the House to a point where no sitting member would be dislodged, and since the census of 1880 this has been the invariable practice. The membership of the House after that enumeration was fixed at 332; 10 years later it was increased to 357; then it went to 391 and after the 1910 census to the present total of 435.

Efficiency and Size.

Reapportionment on the basis of the 1920 census has been held back by the conflict between those who want the old practice continued and those who feel that the time for a halt has come. On the one side it is argued, especially by the Representatives of states facing a cut, that the size of the House should be increased because of the growing burden of business thrown upon each Congressman by his constituency. On the other side, some of the most thoughtful members of Congress maintain that the House, through constant increases of membership, is in danger of degenerating into a mob.

This argument was stressed by Representative Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland at a hearing before the House Census Committee.

"The larger you make the body," he said, "the less efficient it is for legislative purposes. I frankly say that a House of 300 members would perform the duties of what we call the lower house much more efficiently. And Champ Clark said it ought to be limited to 300 members.

Action Must Come.

"There was a distinguished senator who exerted an influence in the framing of one of the apportionment bills. I think his great aim was to increase the so-called domination of the Senate, and he bluntly stated that he desired the size of the House to be increased because it would put the control of legislation under the Committee on Rules.

"To increase the size of the House would diminish the prestige of the individual member, diminish his opportunity, and would increase the domination by a few. That is the great argument against increasing the size of the House."

Reapportionment, with or without an increase in the size of the House, must eventually come, for it is not conceivable that Congress will remain permanently deaf to a plain constitutional mandate. The result will not be soothing to Missouri State pride, but it is hard to see how the interests of the State can suffer from a measure of simple justice. Missouri, like every other State, is entitled to equal representation in Congress, and no more. But whatever the effect may be on the State as a whole, St. Louis, with her sister cities, stands to profit by a readjustment that will give the urban population a fairer representation in Congress.

Across the Continent With the Airplane Mail

During the past three years the Air Mail Service has transported more than 4,000,000 pounds of mail along the transcontinental route between New York and San Francisco with a loss of only .005 of one per cent. This may be compared with the percentage of registered packages lost in the United States during 1922, namely, .007½ of one per cent. Thus the Air Mail establishes itself as Uncle Sam's safest medium for carrying the mails.

Co-Ordination with Railway Mail.

The "ships" used by the Air Mail Service are chiefly De Havilands, of which the Army Air Service had a large surplus after the war. Knowing this, and having but $1,000,000 on which to establish an experimental route, the Air Mail put its pride in its pocket and "borrowed" several. These were rebuilt, at a cost of approximately $1000 per machine, to carry 600 pounds of mail. The Washington-New York run was thus inaugurated, which led to the transcontinental day route and finally to the day-and-night schedule now in effect.

The Air Mail is divided into three zones—New York to Chicago; Chicago to Cheyenne; and Cheyenne to San Francisco. Charges for mail carried by air are as follows: 8 cents per ounce per zone or fraction thereof. That is, a letter from New York to Cleveland or Chicago one ounce or less, requires 8 cents postage. But a letter sent from New York to Omaha would require 16 cents postage, since it traverses one whole zone and part of another. The same letter could be sent to Cheyenne for 16 cents. A letter from Cleveland to Chicago would cost 8 cents; to Omaha 16 cents. Through a co-ordination with the railway mail service, it is possible for users of the mails to take advantage of the Air Mail Service even though they are not on the transcontinental route. In such cases the only amount of postage needed is the Air Mail postage. For example, a letter from New York to Los Angeles, if sent by Air Mail, is carried by airplane to San Francisco, and then by train without extra charge to Los Angeles, the postage being 24 cents.

The best customers of the Air Mail, after bankers, are motion-picture interests, salesmen and branch houses which wish to keep in close touch with the home office. It is also used to catch steamers sailing from Atlantic and Pacific ports, thus speeding up foreign mails. Insurance agents in the field and branch houses send in their reports, ask for instructions, and forward the material of special risks by Air Mail. Jewelry, flowers and even dresses have been sent by airplane. Manufacturers find it a good way to improve their contact with agents and distributors, speeding up orders through quicker correspondence. Merchants along the transcontinental route send in emergency orders by Air Mail. This results in improved service to customers.

Printers and publishers also find the Air Mail Service of use. By utilizing it, they can rush proof sheets, illustrations, copy and orders. I recall, for instance, seeing in the Omaha Post Office a package of blank check books from a New York engraving firm, that was covered with $54 in stamps.

The rate is considered reasonably low by mail patrons who want speed in delivery, and if all planes carried capacity loads on each trip the Air Mail Service would yield a profit. The present lack of patronage is due, first, to lack of popular knowledge in regard to the value of the service; second, the fact that there are at present no branch lines radiating from the main transcontinental route to such cities as Atlanta, Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Dallas, Dayton, Denver, Des Moines, Duluth, Erie, Fort Worth, Grand Rapids, Houston, Indianapolis, Jacksonville, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Louisville, Memphis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Nashville, New Haven, New Orleans, Norfolk, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Portland, Providence, Reading, Richmond, Rochester, St. Louis, St. Paul, San Antonio, Spokane, Tacoma, Toledo, Trenton and Wilmington.

At present the revenue from this new branch of the Postoffice Department is approximately $2000 a day; expenses are about $4000 a day. The income is consistent and regular. Col. Henderson assured me in Washington last month, and is steadily increasing. Will the service pay—next year or five years from now? It doesn't matter. The postoffice is organized for service, not profit.

ROBBERY SUSPECT IDENTIFIED

Five of the six girls, who were held up in the offices of the Blue Valley Creamery Co., 2722 Pine boulevard, by two robbers who escaped with $250 collections May 15, Friday night identified as the leader of the highwaymen a suspect who had been released for lack of identification.

Two of the young women went to Capt. Schwartz at the Laclede Station and told him they had failed to identify the suspect at the Page Boulevard Station a few days ago on account of timidity, but in talking it over decided they should come forward to prevent defeat of justice. The suspect was rearrested at his home.

WOOD OPPOSES REFERENDUM ON NEW COMPENSATION LAW

Head of State Federation of Labor Urges Mass Meeting Not to Sign Petitions.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—An appeal to union labor to block the proposed referendum on the workmen's compensation act was made by R. T. Wood of Springfield, president of the State Federation of Labor, in an address here last night before a mass meeting called by the Jefferson City Central Trades and Labor Union.

Wood charged that opposition to the compensation act passed by the last Legislature was being aroused by "ambulance chasing lawyers," and "traitors within the labor movement."

He repeated previous declarations that both employers and labor were satisfied with the law, as a starting point for workmen's compensation in Missouri and expressed an opinion that the law would be approved in an election. The law, if not referred, will go into effect on July 9. Operation of the law would be delayed for a year and a half, Wood pointed out, if enough signatures are obtained to place the referendum proposal on the ballot of the November, 1926, election.

"I want you to get into your minds the type of men opposing this present compensation law," Wood said. "They are working for their own selfish interests and would destroy the State Federation of Labor if necessary to gain their ends."

COOLIDGE TO MAKE SWAMPSCOTT REAL SUMMER CAPITAL

Will Transact Almost as Much Business on 'Vacation' as He Does at White House.

WAR DEBT QUESTION TO BE CONSIDERED

Place to Be Mecca for Official Callers, Including Cabinet Members With Whom He Will Confer.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1925.)

WASHINGTON, May 22.—President Coolidge will actually transfer the seat of executive power from Washington to Swampscott, Mass., in a few weeks. It is going to be a "vacation" only with quotation marks around the word.

Preparations being made indicate that Coolidge will transact almost as much public business, if not more, at the summer capital than he does here.

The President has been in office not quite two years, but the only recreation he has developed is work and more work. He is at his desk early in the morning and late at night—not always continuously, of course, but he is at the executive offices in and out of hours and sometimes on Sundays, too.

Coolidge is a glutton for work and for detail. Members of the executive staff do not recall a President who kept in as close touch with detail as does Calvin Coolidge and it seems to agree with him physically, for he admittedly looks better and seems to feel better than when he first came to the White House. It is not unusual for Mr. Coolidge to drop into the clerical offices long after the attaches have gone, looking over their desks, examining the files and pending business and generally overseeing the machinery of his office. Even on Sunday mornings he has dropped in and opened mail. Sometimes on week days he has opened letters before the regular mail could be sorted.

No Economy in Work.

Mr. Coolidge may economize on words in his conferences with callers, but he doesn't economize on time given to public business. Under the circumstances, therefore, if it be assumed that he is going to Swampscott to motor, play golf, fish or cruise, the assumption must be declared erroneous now. Coolidge may take a trip on the Mayflower now and then at week-end as in the past, but the general expectation now is that he will keep regular hours at the summer capital and that he will beat the mailman down to the office nearly every week-day.

Arrangements are being made to carry the White House mail in special pouches on the over-night trains, and, of course, in a short time after Coolidge has been at Swampscott the general mail will be going there direct. While many of the Cabinet officers will be away for short vacations, the work of the departments will proceed as usual and at the end of the day many important matters will be sent to Swampscott for approval.

Mr. Coolidge is fully expected to tire of the "rest" cure and tackle his work at Swampscott with the same zeal that he does here.

Ten Weeks at Swampscott.

Thus the summer capital will be important as a mecca for official as well as unofficial callers who have urgent business to transact and from time to time members of the Cabinet will come to confer with Coolidge at Swampscott. Altogether the President will be away about 10 weeks, during which time the White House will be repaired and necessary redecoration carried out as planned for more than a year.

Before Mr. Coolidge returns in the autumn it is expected that he will have conferred with Secretary Mellon on a program of tax reform to be launched before Congress meets. Also the delicate negotiations with respect to war debts will be laid before the President almost daily for his guidance. Back in Washington the program is to be one of business—as usual, with, however, added responsibilities of decision given to the Cabinet members remaining.

"WHITE COURT" READY TO HOUSE PRESIDENT

By the Associated Press.

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., May 23.—"White Court," which will be the summer home of President Coolidge here, has passed through the hands of decorators and now is ready for occupancy. The 26-room porticoed mansion, reconditioned, is spick and span and cheery, in readiness for the President's first real vacation in two years.

The dining room and various others have been entirely renovated, according to a general scheme. The rooms in which "official calls" will be received now hold a different aspect from those in which the President and Mrs. Coolidge will meet personal friends and live during the vacation. Hangings, upholstery and wall paper have been done over in obtaining the new effects.

DEADLOCK OVER BAN ON POISON GAS TRAFFIC

Legal Committee at Geneva Conference Unable to Agree on U. S. Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, May 23.—The American proposal that traffic in poison gas be prohibited struck a stumbling block today in the legal committee of the International Conference for the Control of the Traffic in Arms, the committee reporting itself unable to reach an agreement. It asked the full conference to decide the question for itself. This action was due to the apprehensions of the non-manufacturing States, which felt they would be at a terrific disadvantage if they did not possess gases.

The suggestion of Representative Theodore E. Burton of the American delegation that the signatories should be free to denounce the convention at the end of three years, instead of ten as the draft provides and that it could be revised at the end of three years instead of five, was favorably received.

Burton said he hoped some agreement for peace more far-reaching than the convention would be arrived at, the decision of the proposed treaty thus being necessitated.

Moreover, he thought it possible that the invention of new engines of destruction and the development of air forces would require an early revamping of the convention.

Rumania and Poland presented a joint statement to the conference today protesting against the current impression that their refusal to subscribe to the arms convention, unless Russia adheres to it, implies any hostility to Russia.

The statement insisted that these countries wished to remain friendly to Russia, but were obliged to take precautions at Geneva because Russia unfortunately had refused to participate in a conference the aim of which is conciliation and peace.

Outbreak in Turkish Prison.

By the Associated Press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 23.—A number of inmates of the Central prison attempted to break jail late yesterday, making a concerted attack on the wardens with knives and pistols. Furious fighting followed with many casualties among prisoners and wardens. Reinforcements of gendarmes finally enabled the wardens to overpower the prisoners, and calm was restored.

Town's Soviet Officials Fired.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 23.—Dispatches received here today announced that at Khotan, a town of about 100,000 population near the Turkestan border, the entire soviet city administration had been dismissed for inefficiency in office and new elections ordered.

PAYMASTER IS ROBBED OF $2000 AND AUTOMOBILE

Employe of the Boaz-Kiel Construction Co., Kidnaped and Ejected From His Machine.

$710 PAYROLL TAKEN AT PLUMBING SHOP

Father and Son Held Up by Two Men at South Grand Boulevard Establishment.

John S. Babcock, 32, of 6812 Hancock avenue, paymaster of the Boaz-Kiel Construction Co., in which former Mayor Kiel is a partner, was held up at 11:30 a. m. yesterday by a robber, who, after forcing him to drive from the company offices at Chouteau and Vandeventer avenues to a deserted spot, robbed him of $2000 payroll money.

When Babcock got into his automobile, in front of the Chouteau Avenue Trust Co. Building, he was joined by the robber. The hold-up man thrust a revolver against his ribs and, slipping into the front seat beside him, said: "You turn here and drive west."

Under compulsion, Babcock drove west to Sarah street, then north to Dunean avenue and across to Boyle avenue, where he was instructed to turn south to a point near the Wabash tracks. Here the robber took the payroll and Babcock's Studebaker Special Six touring car. Ordering Babcock but he drove off in the direction of Forest Park. Babcock went to the Newstead avenue station and reported the robbery.

Father and Son Robbed of $710 in Plumbing Shop.

Two armed men robbed William Hunt and his son, Robert, in their plumbing shop at 1127 South Grand boulevard, of $710 in payroll money and escaped in an automobile, yesterday. The younger Hunt had just brought the money from a bank and was placing it in envelopes preparatory to paying off his father's employes on various jobs in the city.

About 9:30 a. m., while engaged in this work, he was interrupted by entry of the two robbers. They held revolvers in threatening fashion, ordered both the Hunts to hold up their hands and grabbed the pay envelopes. It is believed that they drove south on Grand boulevard after backing from the place.

Holdup Men Get $150 From Bar Proprietor.

Two robbers in an automobile followed Tony Nelson, proprietor of a soft drink bar at Third and Barry streets, as he left a Broadway car at Barry, at 12:30 p. m. yesterday, halted him with a revolver and forced him to give up $150 he carried in his inside coat pocket. Nelson had just previously left the Lafayette South Side Bank with the money, which he had obtained for cashing checks. The robbers escaped.

'FULL DRESS' PRIZE FIGHTS IN WASHINGTON UNDER BAN

Prosecutor's Threat to Enforce Law Causes Sporting Club to Call Off Scheduled Match.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The recent revival of professional boxing exhibitions in the national capital received a blow last night, when District Attorney Gordon declared such affairs are a violation of the local anti-prize fight law.

The District Attorney's announcement that he would prosecute promoters of such matches caused the National Capital Sporting Club to call off the match it had carded last night between Edouard Mascart, European featherweight champion, and Mickey Travers of New Haven, after many of the club members had assembled for the event.

The club, whose somewhat exclusive membership has been reflected in the evening dress worn by members and even the ring officials, has staged a number of matches since its organization several months ago, and until last night things apparently were going on without a ripple.

Admission has been restricted to club members and the police had seemed satisfied when participants in the matches questioned as to whether they were receiving any "money or anything of value" for engaging in them, responded in the negative.

BRITISH SHIP IN DISTRESS

Steamer Loses Propeller in Bay of Biscay.

By the Associated Press.

MARSEILLES, France, May 23.—The British steamer City of Valentia is reported by wireless as in distress in the Bay of Biscay, having lost her propeller and asking for immediate assistance.

Wireless messages received in New York last night said the British steamer Clemendeau had lost her port propellor while returning to Havre from an African village. First reports gave the name as Clemendeau and the possibility of a confusion in names through garbled radio transmission is indicated. The City of Valencia, a vessel of 4539 tons, was last reported as arriving at Calcutta, India, on April 4, from Liverpool.

STALIN VIRTUALLY HOLDS DICTATORSHIP OVER SOVIET

His Political Enemies Attack Power by Economic Swing to Conservatism.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, May 23.—J. V. Stalin, one of the soviet "big three," has emerged as virtually a one-man dictator in Moscow—at least for the present. The policy of Leon Trotzky has been vindicated in that the economic swing to conservatism recently predicted in a cable to the New York World and Post-Dispatch has been adopted by his political enemies.

In view of attack upon Trotzky, it was not view expedient at the moment, however, to give him a new post in the Government immediately. Gregory Zinovieff has faded from the scene and Alexis Rykoff remains as much of a figurehead as M. J. Kalin. M. Stalin, therefore, who was feared by Lenin as a stubborn dictator, now wields power in the communist party and therefore in Russia.

Trotzky, back in Moscow, is content to wait. He is going through a period of probation—a period during which he is on trial before the communist party. If, in his struggle for power and attainment of his policies he does not again explode in an effort to shake up the communist machine, he will slowly wedge his way to the front.

His experience has humbled him and made him foxy. What he could not attempt by sensational means he now plans to achieve by attrition and peaceful penetration. In any case, he has taken Zinovieff's scalp as his first victory. The interparty strife in Russia is intricate and slow in its evolutions. The balance of power may change, but Stalin will remain near the top of the heap; while Zinovieff is close to the bottom. This much apparently is settled. What Trotzky may do is the problem of the future.

HONOR FOR RAMSAY M'DONALD

Ex-British Premier Guest at Dinner Given by T. P. O'Connor.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—Former Premier Ramsay MacDonald last night was the recipient of a somewhat unusual honor—a dinner given him by the "Father of the House," T. P. O'Connor, "In recognition of the former Premier's high personal and political character, and his great gifts as a writer and speaker."

The dinner, which was entirely nonpolitical, was a notable event. The guests included Sir James M. Barrie, William Marconi, the Rev. William R. Inge, dean of St. Paul's; Viscount Chel Melford, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Baron Thomson, who was Air Minister in the MacDonald Cabinet. Politicians representatives of all parties attended.

INDIAN PRINCE ILL IN PARIS

PARIS, May 23.—King George's physician, Lord Dawson of Penn, flew across the Channel from London to Paris yesterday to perform an operation on the Maharajah of Gwalior, who is ill at his hotel in the Bois de Boulogne.

The Maharajah, who is the richest Prince in all India, has been ill for several weeks, suffering from violent pains in his head. His condition was getting worse when it was decided to call Dawson. The operation was successful and the patient is said to be out of danger. *zETAOIN ar ah ar ah ar ah art

SECOND ROYAL COURT SCENE OF BRILLIANT ASSEMBLAGE

Large Crowds Gather at Buckingham Palace to Catch Glimpse of Arriving Guests.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—Another brilliant assemblage gathered at Buckingham Palace tonight for the second Royal Court of the season. The weather, like that of Thursday night, when the first Royal Court was held, was ideal, and again large crowds of the pageant-loving gathered in the environs of the Palace to catch glimpses of the guests as they arrived.

In its main feature last night's court was the same as that of Thursday night. The number of guests was approximately 1000, but the official circle was smaller than that attending the first court, and the general circle was correspondingly larger.

King George, attired in the uniform of a Colonel of the Scots Guards, which regiment supplied the bands and guard of honor, and the Queen, gowned in a pale gold lame dress, embroidered with crystals and diamonds, led the royal procession into the throne room. Then the Duke and Duchess of York and Princess Mary and other members of the royal family and royal court grouped themselves behind the King and Queen and the presentation began. Many Americans were among those presented to their majesties.

Catholic Orphans' July 4th Outing.

Plans for the annual Fourth of July outing for Catholic orphans will be discussed at meetings next Wednesday evening at Cathedral Hall and at St. Pius Hall, Grand boulevard and Utah street. Archbishop Glennon, in a letter to Catholic pastors, expresses the wish that there be a good attendance at the outing.

The Perry Alumni Association had their fifteenth annual luncheon on Saturday, May 16, at the Coronado Hotel. Covers were laid for 38. The tables were decorated with pink and white peonies, and the hand-painted place-cards were prepared by Miss Josephine Hickman, a member of the alumni. Miss Viola Morris of Troy, Ill., of the last graduating class of the Perry School, was introduced and welcomed into the association. Mrs. C. H. Rodehaver gave a tribute to the memory of Professor Perry.

There were reminiscences of former presidents: Mrs. M. Faure, Miss Elizabeth Cueny, Miss Cornelia Culbertson, Mrs. Cora M. Femmer, Mrs. Eugene Taylor and Mrs. R. Monroe Frederking. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. Olivia Weidmann of Belleville. Mrs. E. E. Haverstick closed the program with a literary feature, "Saint Joan," by George Bernard Shaw.

At the annual luncheon of the St. Louis Lindenwood College Club at the Missouri Athletic Association, last Tuesday, Mrs. W. C. Hamill as toast-mistress introduced speakers who represent flowers and plants for "the Centennial garden of Lindenwood campus." This centennial, which will occur in 1927, was anticipated in all the speeches. One of the ideas was that of the "Calceolaria," a flower commonly called the "pocketbook plant," which was represented with a real blossom presented by Mrs. Arthur Krueger, treasurer.

Dr. John L. Roemer, Lindenwood's president, toasted the "King of the Campus," the linden tree for which the college is named. He had found, he said, that the linden is a tree of which "the bees are fond." He thought the simile held good for Lindenwood, in training girls in studies and accomplishments which are "sweet and sane." Also at the speakers' table were Mrs. John L. Roemer, dean of students, and Dr. Alice E. Gipson, dean of the college. To Mrs. Roemer was presented a calla lily, and to Miss Gipson, daisies. The "daisy" idea was carried out later in the dessert, which consisted of individual, great flower pots, with paper containers inside, filled with ice cream, in the center of which was a fresh Shasta daisy.

Mrs. Joseph W. White, president of the club, presented "Rosemary" and said that all members are much interested in the centennial scholarship fund which is being raised. A "rosebud" represented the 25 absent associate members, St. Louis girls who were at their studies in the college. Mrs. D. M. Hardy, of Waterloo, Ill., an alumna of 1876, presented different leaders from Lindenwood's beginning in 1827 as the "ivy," Mrs. J. B. Brouster was a guest who graduated exactly 50 years ago, and formerly taught in the St. Louis public schools.

Miss Alice A. Linneman, of the college faculty, brought a bunch of "four-leafed clover" from the campus; Miss Lillian Zacher spoke on the "pansy;" Mrs. H. A. Kotkis on "sweet peas," the favorite flower of the late Col. James Gay Butler, who endowed Lindenwood; and Leslie A. Burritt of New York, on "The Peony; Symbol of Sturdiness." The St. Louis Lindenwood club has now 72 members.

Don't Merely "Store" Your Furs—Let Sonnenfeld's "Protect" Them

By Shirley Dean

With Summer Here

—you should not delay to protect your furs. So, phone at once to Central 6440, or drop us a card, telling us the number of garments you wish protected.

The Very Next Day

—our delivery man will call for your garments. And from that moment on, we assume responsibility for their safekeeping.

Once Arrived at the Store

—your garments are carefully tagged with your name, address and your valuation—which determines the rate you are asked to pay.

An Expert Fur Man

—next goes over your garments inch by inch, inspecting them to see whether or not they are in need of his attention.

If Repairs Seem Necessary

—you are notified by mail, and furnished with an estimate of what the repairs will cost. A word from you, and the work you authorize is done.

Then to the Cleaning

—which we do without any extra charge. A compressed air process so thorough that not a trace of dust or moth eggs can possibly survive it.

The Storage Doors Open

—and your furs are placed in the great Sonnenfeld dry cold air vault, where a low temperature keeps them absolutely safe throughout the Summer.

When Fall Comes Again

—you have only to notify us when you wish your garments returned. We then carefully reclean each fur without any extra charge.

And Finally

Friday by the explosion of an ammonia tank at the plant of the National Grocers' Sundries Co., 424 South Second street, of which he is proprietor. He was burned about the eyes, face and arms, and surgeons said his sight might be impaired. Police reported that Kaplan had opened the tank to fill some bottles when the explosion occurred.

WOULD BOOST PAY OF CONDEMNATION STAFF

Miller Tells Aldermen Ordinance Also Provides for Increase in Number.

Mayor Miller, in a letter to the Board of Aldermen yesterday, announced that City Counsellor Senti had prepared an ordinance to be introduced in the board to increase the salaries paid attorneys in the condemnation section of the city law department and to increase the number of these attorneys.

The condemnation section has important task of directing the condemnation of land for public improvements, and has large and important projects of this nature to handle in the near future, under the bond issue, besides some already under way. A similar bill to increase pay in this section, including that of William Sern, chief condemnation attorney, died with the last session of the Board of Aldermen, along with one favored by some Aldermen to increase pay of the whole Law Department staff. Mayor Miller has said that he favors increasing the pay throughout the department.

"I have investigated," said the Mayor in his letter, "and believe if this bill is passed that hundreds of thousands, and possibly millions of dollars will be saved to the taxpayers and property owners in the city. In addition to this, the construction of public works will be greatly facilitated. I earnestly request immediate and favorable action on this bill, and believe its passage will reflect great credit on the desire of this administration to render an economic and efficient administration of public affairs."

Jolly Young Widow Was Inspiration of "Night in Venice"

Johann Strauss Composed Rollicking Score During Romance With Beauty Whom He Saw at Concert and Led to the Altar.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

ONCE more, at the Municipal Theater this week, we shall pour libations—figurative, alas! and unworthy—to the manes of Johann Strauss. Peace to the shade of the "Waltz King!" May his blithe ghost have tuned the harps of heaven to new rhythms, and set holy toes a-twinkle on the Golden Streets! But in the midst of our devotions, we should let fall a few drops from the wine-cup in honor of the woman whose spirit graced "A Night in Venice" with much of its jocund radiance.

The composition of this comic opera—the ninth in a series of 16—coincided with the tenderest and, it must be confessed, the third of the matrimonial romances in the Viennese composer's life. One of his intimate friends and counselors was Albert Strauss, who was not a relative, though bearing the same name. The son of the latter, Anton Strauss, married a young girl famed for her beauty, Miss Adele Deutsch. The couple became frequent visitors at the home of Strauss and his first wife, and the composer learned to prize not only the amiable traits, but the musical gifts of the young bride.

Anton Strauss died only three years later, and his widow, with a small daughter, retired from the world to heal her grief. Years passed. The composer's wife also died, and he was married a second time to an opera singer named Angelika Dittrich. "This beautiful and joyous woman," relates Ludwig Eisenberg, "was not what he needed at his side—a helpmeet completely absorbed in his desires, strivings, thoughts and deeds; although, thanks to her profession and musical training, she brought a keen understanding to his works."

Saw Widow as He Conducted.

AFTER five years, the union was dissolved. It chanced, one day, that Strauss was directing his brother Eduard's orchestra in the Musikvereinssaale in Vienna. In the midst of a masterful measure, the conductor's glance fell upon a beautiful woman seated in a box adjacent to the stage. It is to be feared that thereafter his genius did not receive undivided attention. He soon recognized the beauty as that of his old friend, the widow of Anton Strauss, who had at last conquered her aversion to life and had come forth from her retreat to renew the diversions of society and art.

At the home of her stepfather, the acquaintance was revived. Common memories created an instant sympathy, which developed into mutual friendship and soon into true love. The outcome was the composer's third and last visit to the nuptial altar. Visitors marveled at the revolution which Frau Anna had quickly wrought in the disposition of the nervous and irascible composer. They found him beaming with geniality and the joy of life.

Sought Italian Theme.

OUT of this mood was born the sparkling jollity of "A Night in Venice," a work for which the composer, more than in any other, took an active hand at the libretto. The stage-work immediately preceding it was "The Merry War," which many connoisseurs still consider his masterpiece. Its vast popularity fired Strauss with an ambition to treat an Italian subject. He applied to his most trusted librettists, Franz Zell and Richard Genee, for a book treating a theme of old Venice. He stipulated that a few plain figures from the people should be conspicuous, and that the play should lash the vices of the nobility.

In addition, it was the composer who suggested the trio of comic Senators, members of the Council of Ten, who traversty one of the harshest and most sinister tribunals in the history of the world. Moreover, Strauss directed that the third act should be set in the market place of Venice, on a night of carnival.

Imitated Croaks and Yowls.

TWO anecdotes, preserved from this period, illustrate the composer's singular predilection for taking his melodies from the cries of animals. One evening, in the garden of his estate at Schoenau, he was pondering over the airs with which he would equip the score of "A Night in Venice." From a lake nearby rose the croaking of frogs

Garden Theater To Share Profits With Staff

A PROFIT-SHARING feature for employes of the new Garden Theater in University City is embodied in the charter of the Garden Theater Co., application for the incorporation of which has been made to the Secretary of State. According to this clause, after dividends of $7 per share have been paid on the preferred stock and of $6 on the common stock, 25 per cent of the profits will be distributed among those engaged in the actual operation of the theater.

Several names on the list of incorporators are evidence of the continuity of the development of outdoor entertainment in St. Louis, as they hark back to the Pageant and Mask of several years ago. John H. Gundlach was chairman of the Pageant Drama Association, Frank P. Crunden was on the advisory board, Charles H. Diehl was vice chairman of the Cast Committee, Luther Ely Smith was secretary of the Pageant Association, and Oscar Leonard was a member of the Productions Committee and had charge of the foreign group section. Joseph Solari, director of the Garden Theater, was associated with Thomas Woods Stevens in the production of the Pageant as assistant stage director.

Some Active in Fashion Show.

FLINT GARRISON was active on the publicity committee of the Pageant and Mask, and he was also prime mover in the development of the St. Louis Fashion Pageant. Aaron Rauh is chairman of the Finance Committee of the Fashion show, Marguerite Breen is costume designer for that enterprise, and Solari is its stage director.

Besides those already mentioned, the subscribing incorporators of the Garden Theater are as follows: J. Lionberger Davis, Michael Levy, Irvin Bettman, George M. Wagner, Clarence L. Fisher, F. H. Littlefield, James H. Hewitt Jr., William A. Parson, Harry Bortin, Maj. Levy, Mills Wellsford and Henry Wright.

Paderewski to Revisit New York.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Paderewski's only orchestral appearance in New York and probably in America next season will be with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Word that the pianist would play at Carnegie Hall on Dec. 17 and 18 has been received by cable from the society's manager, George Engles, who is visiting him at his chateau in Morges, Switzerland.

Belasco to Manage Sothern.

NEW YORK, May 23.—E. H. Sothern will return to the stage next season under the management of David Belasco. An agreement to that effect was concluded this week through an arrangement with Lee Shubert. No details as to plans are made public, but it is expected that the tragedian and his wife, Julia Marlowe, will discontinue, at least temporarily, their long association in the theater.

The Theatrical Calendar

Actors No Longer Glow As Fixed Stars, But Twinkle Only Variably

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, May 23.

THE present theatrical season has proved conclusively that practically no player possesses an individual following of any great consequence. At least there used to be sufficient loyalty to the star to swing a considerable segment of the public to the theater, even if the play happened to be mediocre. In the old days New York went to see John Drew without taking much thought about the nature of the comedy in which he happened to be appearing. The good plays ran a little longer than the poorer ones, but Drew and half a dozen other stars were sure of eight or ten weeks on Broadway, regardless of their endowment at the hands of the dramatist.

The days of star worship are gone. Lionel Barrymore has appeared in plays which ran longer than any venture in which his distinguished uncle was engaged, but Lionel also has participated in complete failures unknown in the years when a John Drew season was almost as much assured of a regular tenure as an opera program. Once it was believed that Ethel Barrymore could attract the passersby no matter what press and public said about her play. That is no longer true. When Miss Barrymore played Juliet a season or so ago she failed as quickly and as completely as if she had been an unknown actress who had ventured upon Broadway. And, again, her personal popularity carried little weight when she undertook a revival of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

Lionel Barrymore and Jane Cowl.

HER brother Lionel has gone through a year failing consistently from the financial point of view, in spite of the fact that his is among the most famous of names in the American theater. Possibly John Barrymore can lure patrons into his show-shop without regard to the commodity which he offers. That remains to be proved. He has ventured here only rarely of late, and never with a play which was wholly displeasing in itself.

After her terrific success as Juliet, a success following hard on the heels of Ethel Barrymore's failure, Jane Cowl may well have felt that she had won an established position as the leading actress of the American theater. She would have been justified, I think, in entertaining that notion. Although she played much trash through several years, her Shakspearian experiment was flood-tide mark in the theater. But New York would not have Miss Cowl as Cleopatra, and was equally indifferent when she fled into one of those supposedly surefire ventures concerning sex and sin. In some respects she must begin all over again to collect what is known as a New York public.

Like Six-Day Bicycle Race.

THE playgoer's memory is of the vaguest sort. It is almost impossible for any actor to build up a reputation bit by bit. On the contrary, the usual pattern is for him to leap into acclaim and adulation with some one performance. And after that, he can be forgotten just as quickly if he does not happen to have the luck to hit upon another success for his next season.

Generally speaking, these conditions are bad for the art of acting. It is a profession just about as precarious as riding in a six-day bicycle race. Tumble once, and the other competitors have gone on be-

New Season Of Outdoor Opera Begins

Repertory of Best Grade in Seven Seasons Will Be Launched Tomorrow Night at Municipal Theater With "A Night in Venice" by Johann Strauss.

TOMORROW night the paths and motor roads of Forest Park will again be populous with throngs converging from every point of the compass, afoot or a-wheel, upon St. Louis' famous outdoor auditorium, the Municipal Theater. It will reopen, after nine months of idleness, for the seventh season of summer entertainment offered by the Municipal Theater Association.

As if giving support to the old superstition that seven is a lucky number, the new season begins under what officials of the organization regard as the brightest omens of its career. This year's repertory, by general agreement, marks the highest point in respect to quality as yet reached by the Municipal Theater Association; the lighter selections represent many distinguished works, including two Gilbert and Sullivan operas; and, for the first time, a sortie is to be made into grand opera, with performances in English of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Martha." Not a single work on the list has ever before been presented at the Municipal Theater.

A Distinguished Comic Opera.

WITH a few exceptions, tomorrow night's audience will find itself confronted by new faces in the cast, and the same is true of a considerable proportion of the chorus of 96 St. Louis singers. The newcomers will make their local debuts under favorable auspices, for the initial work is a celebrated comic opera, "A Night in Venice" ("Eine Nacht in Venedig"), by Johann Strauss, Viennese monarch of light opera and the waltz.

Six members of the chorus will be advanced to roles of more or less importance for this production, and one of them, Mr. Leonard Berry, has been entrusted with a relatively important part, that of Enrico, a young gallant. The complete cast follows:

Ricardo	Leo de Hierapolis
Caramello	Forrest Huff
Pappacoda	John E. Young
Enrico	Leonard Berry
Delaqua	Detmar Poppen
Testaccio	Roland Woodruff
Barbarruccio	William J. McCarthy
Antonio	Louis Leo
Annina	Yvonne d'Arle
Barbara	Fritzi von Busing
Ciboletta	Bernice Mershon
Agricola	Dollye Hyams
Constantia	Ida Moerschell

Story of the Opera.

THE action of "A Night in Venice" takes place in that city on carnival day. The principal male character is Ricardo, Duke of Urbino, who as an amorist is a rival of Don Juan. We are informed that his escapades have enlivened each of the 149 canals of Venice, that he has had a romantic adventure on each of the 170 bridges of the city, and that he has left victims on every one of the 170 islands of Venice.

The first act occurs in a public square.—After a delightful overture, the play begins with a chorus in march time, upon which vendors of flowers, fish, oysters and cheese break with cries of their wares. Pappacoda, a cook from Naples, chants that Venice may boast its Pizzetta, Rialto and Palace of the Doges, but that the only thing the city has lacked until now was a genuine virtuoso in the catering of macaroni. Annina, a fishermaiden, foster-sister of Barbara, ward of Senator Delaqua, appears to a salutation from the chorus, and sings the charms of her oysters, mussels and other "fruits of the sea."

Comedy Duet of Cooks.

WE learn that Enrico is planning, with the aid of Pappacoda, to elope with Barbara; but that Duke Ricardo has heard of the young girl's charms and is planning to attend the carnival in order to woo her. Pappacoda attempts to enlist the aid of Ciboletta, who is also a cook, in the service of Delaqua, by asking her to marry him, and his courtship and her refusal are related in a diverting duettino.

Caramello, Ricardo's advance courier—a combination of Leporello and Figaro—appears with the announcement that his master is about to arrive. He admits that he is not, indeed, quite the Duke of Urbino, but sings that he occupies a position of lofty honor as the Duke's barber. The gay wielder of the razor was formerly Annina's sweetheart, and they have a charming duet, with the refrain, "Pellegrino Rondinella," in which she repulses him because of his long neglect of her.

Happy Stage Effect.

DELAQUA has been warned against the Duke's machinations, and plans to send Barbara away, during the carnival, to safety on the Island of Murano. Barbara pretends to agree, and then arranges for Annina to take her place in the gondola bound for Murano. Caramello bribes the gondolier to surrender his oar to himself. There is a festive quartet, "Alle Maskirt" ("Masking So Gay"), sung by Annina, Ciboletta, Caramello and Pappacoda. Then, after a brief orchestral melodrama, comes the finale, considered one of Strauss' happiest stage effects.

It takes the form of a serenade to Senator Delaqua, and here the composer with great technical skill has combined a gondolier's song and a choral waltz, half sentimental and half burlesque. The two themes, echoing pianissimo, close the act. As is related in another column, Strauss discovered in the chanting of a chorus of frogs on his estate the rhythm and intervals for this serenade.

The second act presents a banquet at Duke Ricardo's palace, to which he has invited the Senators and their wives. It begins with a chorus of women, led by Agricola, wife of Senator Barbaruccio. They have heard of the Duke's reputation as a roue, but sing that they are not at all frightened—no, no, no! Delaqua, fearing the Duke's anger, brings his cook, Ciboletta, to pose as the absent Barbara. However, Annina insists upon masquerading as Barbara. She is so presented and accepts the Duke's attentions. In a song she promises to punish her recreant lover, Caramello, by letting him see the Duke at her feet.

"Ninana, Ninana."

THERE is a beautiful duet in which the Duke sues to the fisher-maiden as Barbara, while she receives his pleas with coquetry. Caramello and Pappacoda have comedy couplets, with chorus; and then comes the famous quartet, "Ninana, Ninana," sung by Annina, Ciboletta, the Duke and Delaqua. After various complications of plot, the act closes with a sonorous choral march, for which Strauss wrote an accompaniment to be played by a band on the stage.

The final act depicts carnival night in Venice. After the orchestral introduction, there is a marching chorus, and then Caramello's "Lagoon Waltzes," the theme of which was suggested to the composer by the nocturnal outcries of impassioned cats. There is a merry chorus of women, deriding the Duke for his ill-success in love—for the real Barbara enters with Enrico, to whom she has just been married, and all the deceptions practiced on the noble philanderer are exposed. He takes it in good part, and persuades Delaqua to forgive his ward.

All the lovers are restored to their rightful embraces, but not before there has been a chorus of women, typifying the doves of St. Mark's. The finale is a reprise of the waltz quartet, "Masking So Gay."

Newcomers in the Cast.

THE new singers who will make their initial appearances at the Forest Park auditorium in this opera are Miss Yvonne d'Arle, prima donna, of the metropolitan Opera Company; Leo de Hierapolis, baritone; Forrest Huff, tenor; John E. Young, principal comedian; Fritzi von Busing, soprano; and Bernice Mershon, contralto. Survivors from previous casts are Detmar Poppen, Roland Woodruff and William J. McCarthy. The chorus members entrusted with roles are Leonard Berry, Louis Leo, Deliye Hyams, Ida Moerschell, Marie Lenhardt and Cecelia Schwartz.

The Municipal Theater Association is a quasi civic organization of which H. G. Pettingill is president. Other officers are Morton May, first vice president; F. W. A. Vierper, second vice president; Carl F. C. Meyer, third vice president; Walter B. Welsenberger, treasurer; and Mona B. Crutcher, secretary.

Max Koenigsberg is serving his first year as chairman of the Executive Productions Committee, and associated with him are M. E. Holderness, Mrs. Crutcher, Nelson Cunliff, Edward Hidden, Henry W. Kiel, Thomas H. Lovelace, Fred W. Pape, H. J. Pettengill, Otto E. Rugg, Arthur Siegel and Walter B. Weisenberger. The general manager is David E. Russell, and the stage and music executives are Frank A. Rainger and Charles Previn. There will be an orchestra of 50, recruited mostly from the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Improvements at the Theater.

AMONG improvements this summer at the theater are a new comfort station and seats of a permanent type in the free and 25-cent sections. The latter section for the first time is reserved. The sound amplifying system has been worked over, and betterments are promised in the stage lighting equipment. The advance seat sale for the season is said to approximate $100,000.

The Municipal Theater may be reached by Union, Market, Taylor and Olive-University cars. Bus service to the theater will be provided at all the park entrances. The People's Motorbus Co. has made arrangements to route eight of its lines from all parts of the city direct to the auditorium.

The repertory of the season, with the works listed in the order of their production, are: "A Night in Venice," Johann Strauss; "Mlle. Modiste," Victor Herbert; "Ruddigore," Gilbert and Sullivan; "Her Regiment," Herbert; "Rob Roy," De Koven; "Dolly Varden," Julian Edwards; "Erminie," Edward Jakobowski; a double bill consisting of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," by Gilbert and Sullivan; "The Count of Luxembourg," Franz Lehar; and "Martha," Friedrich von Flotow.

New Cooling Plant at Grand.

A new cooling plant, designed to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees, has been installed at the Grand Opera House and will be put in operation today. It is expected to send 53,000 cubic feet of washed and cooled air through the theater each minute.

PRETTY YOUNG WIDOW WAS INSPIRATION OF "A NIGHT IN VENICE"

—thousands of reptile voices chanting in chorus. Straightway the rhythm and intervals of this amphibian ensemble suggested to him the melody for the serenade to Senator Delaqua which forms the finale of the first act.

Similarly, Caramello's waltz song in the third act, "Ach, wie so herrlich zu schauen," was strangely enough inspired by the amorous yowling of cats. Indeed, this air, for the Berlin premiere, was supplied with verses in which feline miauwings were imitated—an effect which excited much derision in the Northern capital. Later, the librettists introduced a new set of stanzas. Still another adoption from the animal kingdom is that of the chorus of doves of San Marco, sung by women's voices in the last act.

Idiom of Viennese Waltzes.

ALTHOUGH the scene occurs in Venice, the composer's sound instinct led him to make little effort to employ the Italian idiom. He dallied for a moment with a tarantelle, or a barcarolle, and then rushed away to the entrancing waltzes which constituted his native musical tongue.

"A Night in Venice" was the first opera of Johann Strauss which did not have its initial production in Vienna. The premiere occurred in Berlin, at the Friedrich-Wilhelm Folk-Theater, and an inhospitable reception had been brewed for the unlucky visitor.

This unfriendly attitude had its origin in the resentment felt by the press and literary public on account of unamiable accounts which Viennese reviewers had written only a week or so before regarding the opening of the new "German Theater" in Berlin. Strauss was punished for the severity of his journalistic fellow-townsmen, but enjoyed his recompense soon afterward, when "A Night in Venice" was presented, on Oct. 9, 1883, at the Theater-an-der-Wien in Vienna. Two-thirds of the musical numbers were encored, and Caramello's waltz, which the Berlin critics had lampooned as an imitation of "the tender miauwing of tabbies," was repeated three times. The composer, who directed, was embellished at the end of the performance with a wreath.

Four Operas at Municipal Theater.

THE stage pieces by Strauss which preceded "A Night in Venice," with the dates of their production, were as follows: "Indigo, or the Forty Thieves," 1871; "Carnival in Rome," 1873; "The Bat," 1874; "Cagliostro in Vienna," 1875; Prince Methuselah," 1877; "Blind Cow," 1878; "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," 1880, and "The Merry War," 1881. The succeeding works were "The Gypsy Baron," 1885; "Simplicissimus," 1887; "Ritter Pasman," a grand opera, 1892; "Princess Ninetta," 1893; "Jakuba," 1894; "The Forest Master," 1895, and "The Goddess of Reason," 1897.

Of these works, four appear in the repertory of the Municipal Theater Association—"The Queen's Lace Handkerchief," presented in 1922; "The Gypsy Baron," given in 1923; "The Bat" ("Die Fledermaus"), produced last summer, and "A Night in Venice," which opens the association's seventh season tomorrow night.

SUMMARY OF NEW GERMAN TARIFF SCHEDULES ISSUED

Rates on Autos Practically Prohibitive at First, but Will Be Reduced After July 1, 1926.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—New German tariff proposals are being put out with the informal but official statement of that Government that the provisional rates are all subject to alteration by international bargaining. Commerce Department officials yesterday gave out a summary of changes proposed, which indicate that in several respects the difficulties anticipated for American producers may be less than has been supposed.

In one particular, as to automotive vehicles, the rates are being laid out with the intent of reducing them materially each six months after July 1, 1926. They indicate that the duty on automobiles would be practically prohibitive in its inception.

The new rates on foodstuffs would be practically equivalent to those maintained by the old German empire prior to 1914. Increases on raw silk and artificial silk would be particularly heavy. Rates would be higher when the material is more completely manufactured.

As an argument justifying the increases, the German Government has emphasized its unfavorable trade balance in recent months.

SYMPHONY TO BROADCAST WITH SYNCOPATION BAND

Gene Rodemich to Be Among Guest Conductors at Philadelphia Orchestra Experiment.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—An experiment in modern American music will take place on the evening of June 5 at the Wanamaker store, when a concert illustrating the national idiom of musical expression will be given by 80 members of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra and a syncopation band.

On this occasion a full-length symphony, based on syncopated rhythms and melodies, will have its premiere. It is the work of Eric Delamarter, assistant conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. The first movement is based on two popular melodies of some years ago, "Grizzly Bear" and "The Honeysuckle and the Bee." The second employs several "lonesome tunes" from the Kentucky mountains, and the third uses fox-trot rhythms and melodies by Jerome Kern and other writers of popular tunes.

Groups of popular music will be directed by Hugo Riesenfeld and Ben Bernie of New York and Gene Rodemick of St. Louis, who have been invited to act as guest conductors.

PARTS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY STILL REMAIN UNEXPLORED

By the Associated Press.

BELLINGHAM, Wash., May 23. One of the last unexplored frontiers of the United States lies in Whatcom county, 50 miles east of Bellingham.

The district, which embraces approximately 200 square miles, lies between Sourdough Mountain and Moun's Baker and Shuksen. It contains an almost impenetrable forest and a number of unnamed mountains whose elevations reach to 8,000 feet. The county is a great game sanctuary, there being seen around the edges of the district large black, brown and silver-tip bears, deer, and other wild animals. One of the mountains contains big glaciers.

Forestry rangers, who have a lookout station north of Sourdough Mountain, declare that hikers can work into the heart of the district along the high levels of Sourdough Mountain and along arms of other peaks of the range. They doubt whether pack horses can be taken into the center of the district.

Two-thirds of Whatcom County is in a forest reserve. Less than a third has been surveyed.

Percy Grainger To Play Cowboy's Breakdown

It is announced that the program which Percy Grainger has chosen for his Webster Groves recital, on the evening of June 2 will include the Bach-Listz Fantasia and Fugue in G Minor, and four works by a modern English composer, Balfour Gardiner. They are "A Sailor's Piece," "Shenandoah," "Michaelchurch" and the second (Adagio non troppo) of his "Five Pieces for Pianoforte."

After Chopin's Sonata in B Minor will come two works by American composers. One is a cowboy's breakdown, "Sheep and Goat Walkin' to the Pasture," by David Guion, a native of Ballinger, Tex. The other is a Prelude in D, for left hand, written by Marion Bauer, who was born in Walla Walla, Wash.

The pianist will have two compositions of his own, "Colonial Song" and "Spoon River." The latter is based on a tune played on the fiddle, at a rural dance held in 1857 at Bradford, Ill., by Capt. Charles H. Robinson, who communicated it to Edgar Lee Masters, author of "The Spoon River Anthology."

Mme. Marie Larlache, soprano, will be soloist at a musicale and reception to be held at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Paul Friess will be the accompanist. The Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will hold its annual outdoor meeting and dinner tomorrow evening on the lawn of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church, in Webster Groves. Milton McGrew, recently elected dean of the chapter, will preside.

Mrs. Lee Schweiger of St. Louis addressed the thirtieth annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians, last week at Niagara Falls, on the aims of the Musicians' Fund, of which she is president.

ACTORS SHINE NOT AS FIXED STARS, BUT AS VARIABLE ONES

yond you, generally bumping over the prostrate body as they pass.

Of course, not everything in the forgetfulness of the playgoers works against the actor's weal. There are some advantages. Failures fade out of memory just as quickly as successes. Miss Pauline Lord, after much brilliant work in Broadway hits, was presented in a piece called "Launzi," in which she was badly miscast. It was her misfortune to be asked to play an insane girl some 17 or 18 years old. The public disliked the insanity and found it hard to accept Miss Lord as truly of the age required by the part. The play collapsed disastrously.

Now, in "They Knew What They Wanted," Pauline Lord is giving the most applauded performance of her career. Probably not 1 per cent of those who flock to see her has any recollection whatsoever of the disastrous adventure in "Launzi." An actor or actress does attract patrons by what she has to offer in the particular piece in which she is playing, but this popularity can hardly ever be carried over into another role. Each new play is a new test, each first night a start from scratch.

Hinterland Offers Refuge.

BEYOND the borders of Broadway the stars shine brighter in their own right. The fact that Henry Miller is opening in a new play in New York causes practically no palpitation whatsoever. His long years and many successes matter almost not at all.

But when New York has been cruel, Mr. Miller can travel to the Pacific Coast and find in Los Angeles and San Francisco a huge and cordial public which turns out to welcome him simply as Miller. If the play is liked, so much the better, but the sight of the star himself is sufficient reward. And many another famous player can avail himself or herself of the trade mark value of his name upon the road.

No Fatted Calves for Prodigals.

AND yet few take to the road with enthusiasm. It is generally the resort of those with whom things are not going very well. This diffidence is only partially to be explained on the ground of the discomforts of travel. The actor who leaves New York realizes that out of sight is out of mind as far as the metropolitan public goes. If he stays away a single season, he will return to discover that during his absence "the greatest actor in the American theater" has been discovered six times during the year and the "greatest actress" at least 20 times. Critics apparently find greatness in actresses far more often than in actors.

For the returned prodigal there is no feast of fatted calf. He must beat the drum and blow his horn to let the public know that he is in town again, and in this process of re-establishing himself he is very likely to make the horrifying discovery that very many members of the dear public never knew that he had gone away.

Hyde Heads College Trustees.

TRENTON, Mo., May 23.—Arthur M. Hyde, former Governor of Missouri, has been elected president of the board of trustees of the new Trenton Junior College, which will open next fall. An enrollment of approximately 400 students is expected.

AFRICA IN NEED OF SIMPLE EDUCATION

Phelps-Stokes Fund Commission Urges Instruction in Trades, Sanitation and Agriculture.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The natives of Africa are at present on the sidelines, watching European and Asiatic settlers play football with the future of a continent rich in natural resources and the great question-mark in international peace and prosperity, says the official report of the Educational Commission to East Africa, issued today by the Phelps-Stokes Fund.

The Commission spent six months in the field, travelling from French Somaliland to Cape Town, and supplemented the work of a similar group which studied West, South and Equatorial Africa in 1920. The chairman of both Commissions was Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, educational director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund which was founded in 1908 to promote Negro education in the South and in Africa. In the African studies the American and British Governments and the missionary societies of Great Britain and North America cooperated by lending experts to serve on the Commissions, and the British Government tendered Dr. Jones an official dinner at Lancaster House, London, on his way back from Africa.

Co-operative Instruction.

Dr. Jones, who writes the report, calls for the inclusion of the native in a plan of co-operation which will include governmental officials, missionaries, settlers and traders. He looks to the European nations, which control all of Africa, except Liberia on the West Coast and Abyssinia in the east, to take the leadership in working out a definite plan and not leave it to the individual and unco-ordinated efforts of the governors of the various colonies.

Richly endowed by nature, Africa has been losing ground in the manpower essential for unlocking this great physical wealth, says the report. The heritage of the slave raids, the ravages of disease and an ignorance which permits malnutrition in a land of plenty are all given as causes for the sparse population. The African problem is essentially a population problem, Dr. Jones writes.

The solution he recommends is stated in terms of education intelligently adapted to the needs of native life. Simplicity rather than complexity is urged, and Dr. Jones gives as his basic "simples" of education: (1) health and sanitation for a land where the infant death rate ranges from 300 to upwards of 600 per thousand; (2) training in crop production, animal husbandry, food preservation and the farm trades for a people who are often decimated by famine in a land of plenty; (3) proper understanding of the "decencies and safeties of the home," including preparation of food, provision of proper clothing and care of the ill; and (4) healthful recreation and amusements for a people notorious for the physical and sexual excesses of their primitive games. He pays high tribute to the character-building influence of the Christian religion; at the same time he would salvage as much as possible of native traditions and customs, modifying them and directing them into the proper channels.

Training of Leaders.

The report also recommends that a director of education be included in every territorial administration, and that the pioneer and continuing importance of the missionary schools be recognized by grants-in-aid. However degraded her status in any tribe, the African woman wields great power over the health and the home life of her family, and education is therefore every bit as important for the girls as it is for the boys. Hand in hand with such development of education of the masses should go adequate provision for the thorough training of a native leadership which is becoming increasingly essential to a peaceful working out of European responsibilities in Africa.

SAFE FLYING RECORD BY ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE

No Fatal Accident in 3340 Hours of Work Carrying Mail or on Patrol.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, May 23.—Aviators in the Royal Canadian Air Force set a new record for safe flying last year by making up 3340 hours of actual flying time without a fatal accident in carrying air mail, patroling forests and fisheries and performing other Government service, said a report from the Department of the Interior.

More than 3000 acres of forest in Alberta were covered twice a day by air patrols during the season of fire hazard and in Manitoba, 40,000,000 acres were under observation. The forces photographed 40,000 square miles of terrain for the topographical survey.

INCREASE IN DEMAND FOR WILD ANIMALS FOR ZOOS

Russia, Latvia, Germany and England in the Market for Beasts and Birds of the Forest.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 6.—The demand for wild animals of various parts of the world has been greater this spring than in 15 or 20 years, owing to the desire of numerous continental cities to replace the stocks in their zoological gardens which were depleted during the war.

Moscow, among other far-away points, has come into the market for various specimens, the soviet authorities having announced intentions to reopen the zoo in the Russian capital which had been closed since the revolution. Riga, Latvia, which had an enormous zoo prior to the war, has also begun buying animals.

England has come to the front this year as a rival of Germany, in the importation of zoo animals.

In one steamship recently there arrived 15 elephants, 12 Tasmanian devils, 12 Tasmanian cats, 12 Tasmanian wombats, numerous wallabies, hundreds of assorted parrots, as well as bears, antelopes, zebras, tigers, leopards, and a collection of cranes, in crates, which is said to be the largest shipment of its kind on record.

CHARGES AGAINST CHILD WELFARE BODIES DENIED

New York Organizations Reply to Statements That Its Wards Are Shipped 'Tagged' in Carload Lots.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Child welfare organizations in New York today hastened to refute charges that they were shipping "tagged" children by carloads to Texas and Northwestern states, ostensibly to be adopted, but actually to be enslaved by families in those regions as farm and plantation drudges.

Charges of wholesale dealings in child slaves were brought before the annual conference of teh Child Welfare Committee of America here a day or two ago and certain delegates outlined a plan to end the practice.

But "No," say the New York institutions who send children for adoption in other states. "It is a misconception or a statement based on facts of years ago."

It is true, according to Clinton W. Areson of the executive staff of the National Child Welfare League that in years gone by, when distances were great, education laws lax and modern methods of placing children in suitable homes had not been thought of, such practices did exist.

Recalls Former Practice.

"Undoubtedly children were sent into distant states to fill the requests of families who said they wanted to adopt them to give them homes(who were not properly cared for," he said. "Shcool authorities did not insist that they go to school. There was no way of enforcing school laws.

"And, too, in those days there were so many more waifs to be cared for, that it is probable children were shipped by carloads into other states where families had asked for them and the families were allowed to look over the babies and take their choice.

"But I am positive that such things do not go on any more and have not for some years. If that was still happening, complaints would have come to my office—and there have been none."

Sister Cyrilla, director of placements in the New York foundlings hospital, was hot in her denunciation of the accusers. "Yes, we send children to Texas and the Northwest," she said. "And yes, we send them in carloads—that is, we charter special care so that our children may keep together and enjoy greater comfort. And once more, yes, to the idea that our children, most of them, have been placed with owners of large farms and plantations. Such people have wealthy, comfortable homes which can conveniently care for children.

Sent Upon Request.

"But every child who leaves this institution goes at the particular request of some family who has promised to meet it, take it home, educate and love it, and adopt it if circumstances are propitious after the passage of sufficient time. Every child is visited periodically during its residence with these people, and if everything is not as we would have wished it, the child i staken away, and a new home found or it is returned to us in New York."

These are the circumstances under which children are found homes by the Children's Aid Society, according to Charles L. Brace, one of its executives.

"That whole controversy probably arose," he said, "throughp ublication of a would-be facetious story in a Nebraska newspaper in which a reporter, seeing a group of children arrive by train and a group of families—already selected—at the train to meet them, assumed they were being picked out helter-skelter.

"There is no institution in New York which sends children in homes anywhere where they will not have proper education and love. No one could adopt a child in these days of required school attendance and work it in fields. The State education authorities would soon hear of it and object.

No Child Slavery.

"The only thing that is done to which the members of the Child Welfare Committee who made the assertion that children were being sent from here to other States to work could have referred is a practice we have. There are in this world a great many drifters—boys from 14 to 20, who run away from home, perhaps to join the navy, perhaps to try to find a job and, failing, in everything, come to us for help. We send them to our farm at Valhalla, teach them the principles of agriculture and try to find them positions. Then we do send them into various states where they do help out on farms and plantations. But they are past the required school age—and they would have had no home or work at all if we had not found both for them.

"Sometimes these boys are adopted—usually they are not because they are too old. But certainly that is not child slavery."

ZOWIE TRADE MARK HAND SOAP TABS for ALL Hands

AT last the secret—Zowie! The new, different, hand soap, unequalled in cleansing power, convenient in form. Deadly to grease and dirt, yet it leaves the hands clean and refreshed.

10¢ for Tube of 30 Tabs

Zowie plays no favorites! Good for father or the boys, mother or the girls! Zowie is happy in any pair of dirty hands—makes them clean — invite comparison with anybody's table cloth.

Zowie is a patented compound with a special, pure soap base blended with glycerine and soothing, healing emollients, with cereal and wood-fiber to absorb the grease and dirt after the soap has loosened it. Separately its ingredients have been used for years, but no one could conceive of a way to combine them successfully in usable form so the effectiveness of all the ingredients could be unified in one product.

Then, a genius in a tool factory, who wanted a real hand soap badly, had a great idea. Why not compress these ingredients into tablets each just the right size for a wash-up? Why not, indeed?

And so Zowie is here. And here's how it is used and why it is so wonderfully effective:

Using a small stream from the faucet (cold water works as well as warm),moisten the hands thoroughly. Place a Zowie Tab on the palm of one hand and run a little water on it.

Watch it swell! In a few seconds it will be nearly twice its original size!

When it stops swelling, rub it on your hands thoroughly, just as you would ordinary soap. And then watch the dirt and grease disappear like magic! The soap loosens every bit of it, and the other ingredients absorb it so it can't be rubbed back on and into the skin.

There is the real secret of Zowie's marvelous cleansing power—absorption! That is why, without strong alkalis or harmful abrasives, it can clean the hands so thoroughly. And why it is safe for the tenderest, daintiest skin—for women and children as well as for men who work in grease.

Try Zowie this week—tomorrow. Get it at your grocer or druggist, or if he hasn't it, send the coupon below for a supply. Then you will use it always.

CAILLAUX URGES EUROPEAN UNITY TO CURB ISLAM

Declares France and England Should Combine Experience in Future Policy in Occident.

ONLY WAY TO AVERT A GRAVE MENACE

Conditions Should Be Studied With the Idea of Tranquillizing Musselmans, He Declares.

By JOSEPH CAILLAUX.
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, May 23.—The Mussulman peoples of Northern Africa are at present shaken by a growing movement in which the Occidental idea of nationality and the aspirations of Islam are closely united.

Egypt is showing a lively impatience at the latest limits placed upon her independence, and seems to wis hto break the last ties which attach her to the empire, and London is irritated at seeing her proteges, whom destiny has placed on the imperial highway, obscurely menacing it.

The young Turkish republic, which is displaying a curious effort at secularization in her own territory, is externally supporting Ibn Saoud, chief of the Wahabis, whose fervor and religious austerity sometimes recall the Scotch Puritans. Angora and the Arab chief have been in accord as to confiding the Mussulman Holy Lands to th egreat Sheik of the Senoussis, the celebrated brotherhood whose violent opposition to European influence, after having long disquieted the French, is giving considerable anxiety to the Italians in Tripoli and to the English in Egypt, Arabia and Mesopotamia.

Irak Is Threatened.

The Kingdom of Irak is threatened by its Mussulman neighbors in spite of, and doubtless because of, the protection of Britain, which has sheltered it since its beginnings.

Putting aside the Italian experiences in Tripoli, which are too recent to enable one to judge the method and the results, one is struck by the contrast between the situation of the Mussulman countries under the control of Britain, and that of French Northern Africa. adn the omment has perhaps come to study the means of remedying, limiting and tranquillizing this crisis.

England has showed herself much more liberal than we in regard to specifically political demands. She has given the right to vote to the Egyptians en bloc, she has allowed national institutions to develop everywhere, she has regarded with good-will the renaissance at Cairo of a Mussulman university which is to Islam of the Twentieth century what our Sorbonne was to Christendom of the thirteenth.

Inwardly in Revolt.

Her liberalism seems to me to have been in large part indifference. England, when she intervened in Egypt, brought outward order; she never consigered assimilation of the natives possible, she was often unacquainted with them, and, not envisaging a reapproachement between the two civilizations, she allowed, under the lid of the English occupation, the Egyptian soul to ferment in a sealed vessel, over the old Koranic maxims.

France has followed a different method; we have an invincible tendency to evangelism. Often arbitrary as apostles always are, the French in Algeria have not shown themselves very tolerant to nationalistic notions; the rights of suffrage have been but parsimoniously granted; political representation of the natives has been reduced to a consultative form which is not very liberal. But, on the other hand, France has sought contact with the Arab and the Berber. She has desired to open the door of Occidental civilization to them. She has not developed a Mussulman higher education which could make Algeria the intellectual center of Islam, but she has multiplied Franco-Arabian schools. She has given to the means of civilization which the militarw service incontestably is, its full effect by integrating the regiments of Northern Africa in the metropolitan army. The progressive Europeanization of the natives of Algeria is well under way.

Algeria Remains Calm.

The work of the French in North ern Africa has sometimes been criticised rather violently. The errors committed have been chiefly errors of beginning, when France had not yet had experience with her conquest, but she can show with legitimate pride the results obtained. In the midst of the Musselman effervescence which is manifesting itself nearly everywhere, Algeria remains perfectly quiet. The local troubles produced by the brusque establishment of conscription during the war, were less serious than those which the First French republic had to repress when the same measure was taken in France for the first time. France is not far from having realized, by a progressive assimilation, a work similar to that once accomplished by Rome.

Time for Comparison.

Has not the moment come, for all, and in particular for London and Paris, to compare their methods and their results and to study the means of unifying their policy toward Islam; France adopting a little of the political liberalism of Great Britain, and the latter drawing inspiration from the results obtained by our effort at Europeanization, so that the collaboration between Europeans and Mussulmans from the Euphrates to the Columns of Hercules shall be along analogous lines. This is the only way to prevent the Mussulman world, which extends over the territories whose contribution to antique civilization was considerable, from being again, as it was for 600 years following the Crusades, almost closed to Occidentals, and from becoming rapidly a cause of grave troubles, dangerous to the civilization of the world.

"They made me slender . . why don't you try them!"

"I had just about given up hope of ever being slender again, Margery. You know I can't stand exercises or diets. And I love rich foods! But when I read about Marmola Tablets, I . . ."

"Did you use them, Katherine? Tell me about them."

"They're wonderful! I used them a short while and my weight disappeared. See how slender they made me!"

Many people are surprised at how easily and quickly Marmola Tablets reduce weight. Yet, for nearly twenty years, hundreds of thousands of men and women each year have regained slender figures by using these tablets. Last year alone, users purchased more than a million boxes!

Surely you would rather use Marmola Tablets and regain your slender figure, than try some unknown and perhaps harmful method of reducing!

Get some Marmola Tablets at any druggist's (one dollar a box) and try the pleasant way to reduce. Or if you prefer, a box will be sent to you in plain wrapper, postpaid, by the Marmola Co., 1854 General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

'AMPLE OIL IN U. S. TO MEET THE DEMAND FOR LONG TIME'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Plenty of oil remains in the ground in the United States to meet the demand for a long time, A. C. Bedford, chairman of the Board of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, testified yesterday at a War Department hearing. The hearing was on the proposal to build a bridge across the Mississippi at New Orleans.

Reports of a shortage in the next 10 years, he said, were unfounded. The adequacy of the supply in the continental United States, he added, is to be taken up soon by the President's oil conservation board and it is the belief of oil men that the board will find the oil supply is ample for some time.

Much oil, Bedford asserted, remains in old fields, in some cases a rather high percent, which will be available when the demand warrants its capture at the price that will be required to obtain it.

THERAPY EXHIBITION AND GARDEN PARTY

Work of Students to Be on Display at City Sanitarium on April 2.

Dr. G. A. Jordan, Hospital Commissioner, Dr. C. H. Shumaker, Superintendent of the City Sanitarium, and the Board of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, have issued invitations for an exhibition and garden party on the grounds of the sanitarum, 5200 Arsenal street, Tuesday, April 2, from 4 to 6 in the afternoon, and from 2 to 9 in the evening. Mayor Miller, Dr. Jordan, Dr. Shumaker, Miss Bess E. Sutton, Director of Occupational Therapy for the State of Illinois, Bert S. Lang, J. Lionberger Davis, and Mrs. Elias Michael will give brief addresses.

The work of students of the St. Louis School of Occupational Therapy will be on exhibition, and also handicraft of patients in a number of "work cure" shops in hospitals and institutions. The hospital will not be open to the public, but guides will conduct special parties through the buildings.

A statement issued yesterday by the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy shows the rapid growth of therapy in St. Louis, with 14 hospitals and institutions now having occupational therapy departments. Graduates of the St. Louis School of Occupational Therapy, which is under the direction of the Missouri Association, are at the head of these departments, and a number have gone to State and private institutions in many parts of the country. The association also conducts a home service department which handles an average of 34 cases a month, with therapists visiting the homes of shut-ins to teach crafts and other handiwork.

The St. Louis School of Occupational Therapy, will open a new class next September, to which only 16 students will be admitted. Women of good education and executive ability are desired for the class which includes study of crafts, lectures on medical and general educational subjects, and practice work in hospitals and institutions. Details may be learned from Miss Geraldine Lermit, director of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy, 602 South Euclid avenue.

SANITARY QUARTERS FAIL TO ATTRACT SLUM DWELLERS

Edinburgh Health Officer Finds Customs in Crowded Districts Hard to Overcome.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

EDINBURGH, May 24.—Slum dwellers in Edinburgh and other crowded Scottish cities have showed in more ways than one that they preferred bad environment, and all its attendant evils, to new houses fitted with every modern convenience, it was asserted recently by Dr. William Robertson, medical health officer for the city, in addressing a meeting of the municipal council.

Dr. Robertson declared that today, when new houses were being provided, he had found it very difficult to convince slum dwellers that the slums were not a place for decent existence. Once people become accustomed to the tenements and crowded districts, it was a hard task indeed for the authorities to get them to feel at home in new and more sanitary quarters. The way to solve the problems, he believed, was to provide decent houses in the outskirts of the cities for all, and in this way prevent families from ever acquiring the slum dwelling habit.

WATER CARNIVAL TO BE GIVEN

Will Be Held at Town Club Pool on Tuesday.

A water carnival, at which a series of life-saving demonstrations and other swimming and diving feats are to be given, will be held in the Town Club Swimming Pool from 3:30 to 4:40 p. m. and from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. Capt. Fred Potthoff of the Red Cross Life Saving Division, will head the list of demonstrators. Other exhibitions will be provided by Miss Bertha Bennett of Washington University; Miss Galena Stowell, athletic director of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Elizabeth Maybury, swimming instructor of the Town Club and Miss Grace Ryffel of Harris Teachers' College. Invitations have been issued for the event.

SUICIDES IN GERMAN ARMY

Averaged 100 in 1923 and 1924. Due to Long Enlistment

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, May 4.—There were 100 suicides in the German army a year during 1923 and 1924, and the authorities, investigating causes, lay the blame largely to the long period of enlistment, 12 years, prescribed by the treaty of Versailles.

Soldiers get despondent at the end of four or five years, it is pointed out, when they are not made noncommissioned officers. Naturally the number of such commissions is limited. Those who are not selected see ahead of them only eight more years of drudgery.

On the other hand, men who serve out the full 12 years are given preference in the allotment of civil service positions, which means that they are practically taken care of for life

Head Swim?

Clear the digestive tract, if you would relieve dizziness,

IN the dark ages of medical knowledge, people didn't understand that most unpleasant of afflictions—uncontrolled dizziness. They blamed the heart, the lungs, the brain—everything but the right thing; suffered untold torture as a result.

Today, sensible people know that dizziness is simply a symptom. It usually means that congested waste matter in the digestive tract is saturating the entire system with its poisons.

Whenever your "head swims", you may be sure that a dose of Pluto Water is in order. This safe, quick-action, water physic goes direct to the root of the trouble. In 30 minutes to two hours, the poison is expelled and a normal feeling of equilibrium returns. Don't resort to slow-action, over-night cathartics. Get relief promptly and thoroughly with Pluto Water.

Pluto is prescribed by physicians, sold by druggists and bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

Mother Says They're Fine For Kiddies
"My little girl (age nine years) looked so thin and pale I was worried constantly about her health. Your Tablets seem to be all she needed, and she picked up so rapidly I am now giving the Tablets to my other three children. Several of my neighbors' children are taking them also. They like to take them and they are doing them a world of good. Their appetites are enormous."
Mrs. E. Thorn, Illinois

Gains 11½ Pounds
"I tried your tablets and almost at once my appetite, which had been very poor, improved noticeably. I have been taking the tablets ever since and have gained eleven and one-half pounds and am feeling fine."
Mrs. Eugene V. Fagan, Chicago

Built Him Up—Now Wants Brother to Take Tablets
"I took the treatment and gained twelve pounds. Now I want some tablets for my brother. He needs them and I know they will do him good."
Mr. L. W. Brinton, Illinois

Best Tonic He Has Ever Taken
"Beyond any doubt your Tablets are all that you claim for them and I will gladly recommend them to people who need something to build them up. Several friends are now taking them on my advice. I tried many other medicines without effect and had all but lost confidence until I tried your Tablets. They have made me feel ten years younger."
T. Terrell, Illinois

Skinny Man Increases 15 Pounds
"For the past ten years I have been trying to annex a little flesh. I tried a lot of remedies without any gain. Last October I started to use Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets. Then weighed 115 pounds. Since then I have gained 15 pounds and never felt or looked so well as I do now."
Mr. Harry Feige, Chicago

Gains 10 Pounds, 3 Ounces
"On September 10, I weighed 130 pounds, which was the day I started taking your tablets. After ten weeks of using your tablets I weigh 140 pounds, 3 ounces. The only fault with your tablets is that they make my clothes too small."
Mr. H. E. Simonson, Illinois

It's no trick at all, as hundreds of people have learned in the past few months, to put on good solid flesh with Dr. Gross' Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

Sugar-coated, they're as easy to take as candy, and they certainly do the business, building you up and giving you new pep and energy. They're splendid for weak, puny children, too—giving them appetite and vigor.

If you're tired of being scrawny and run-down, go to your druggist and get a bottle. So sure are we of results, we make this positive guarantee: Take three bottles of Dr. Gross' Tablets according to directions and at the end of 30 days if you haven't put on at least 5 pounds, if you don't feel like a new person, your money will be cheerfully refunded.

You've nothing to lose and everything to gain, so start the treatment today.

OSAKA IS NOW THE LARGSET CITY IN JAPAN

$100,000,000 to Be Spent for Improvements in the Next Eight Years.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.
(Copyright, 1925.)

TOKIO, May 1.—Osaka, the great manufacturing and commercial center of Japan, has followed the example of London, New York and others of the big cities of the world and is now the largest city in Japan.

Plans for a greater Osaka have been in the making for a long time, but now it looks as if something is going to be done. A minimum of $100,000,000 is to be spent in the next eight years.

Osaka offers a great opportunity for the city builder. Not only is it a convenient center for transport and communication, but it could be made a most attractive city. The streets are to be widened and paved and the writer is informed that full advantage is to be taken of the broad and rapid river flowing through the center of the city and forming an island as does the Seine in Paris.

The people of Osaka are more enterprising than those of Tokio, the capital. Kobe, the port of Osaka, is now one of the leading ports of the Pacific and aims to be the Liverpool of Asia. Greater Osaka has an area of 65 square miles and a population of 3,132,600.

"This is Osaka's opportunity to move to the front and take the lead of the cities in the empire," the Mayor said to the correspondent a few days ago. "Tokio will probably always remain the political center, but Tokio will be restoring ruins and healing her wounds for another 10 years, during which time Osaka and Kobe will move together as city and port. Situated in the very heart of the empire we must go ahead."

Banker's Friends Elated

"Twelve years ago I became afflicted with stomach trouble which steadily became worse. I frequently became prostrated with colic attacks and bloating. My doctors wanted to operate for gall stones. I wished to avoid an operation and on advice of a friend tried Marr's Wonderful Remedy with excellent results as since taking it about 2 years ago my trouble has entirely disappeared." It removes the catarrhal mucous from the intestinal track, and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. ENGLISH EDUCATORS CRITICISE U. S. SYSTEM

Grading Plan Is Characterized as Impediment to Students Starting Education Late.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

OXFORD, England, May 24.—The American system of education, with its arrangement of yearly grades or classes extending up from the primary schools to the senior year in college, finds little favor among English teachers and university authorities.

In English public schools the form system, which puts promotion upon equality of work done rather than on years of attendance, is considered to give satisfactory results, while, in the universities the American classification of freshman, sophomore, junior, senior and post-graduate is unknown.

Sir Michael Sadler, president of University College and a noted English educator, has recently criticised the class system of school organization, on the ground that under it a boy who does not begin his schooling early enough or in the approved manner "misses the train" and thereafter is never able to catch up.

Many Students Tutored.

Oxford certainly is free from this criticism, he said, as a considerable number of the students admitted have been under tutors and have never attended any variety of school.

The disadvantages of a strictly organized class system of schools and colleges are well illustrated, it was pointed out, by the career of Joseph White, M. A., Ph. D., D. C. L., LL. D., Litt. D., F. B. A., until recently the Oxford professor of comparative philology. Dr. Wright was born in a one-room Yorkshire cottage for which a weekly rental of 10 pence was paid, and at the age of 6 was working for 30 cents a week.

Mastered 11 Languages.

He never attended a school, but at 13 he taught himself to read, and in the seven years following he taught himself Latin, Greek, French and German. To these he later added Sanskrit, Old Bulgarian, Old Norse and Icelandic, old and modern High German, Lithuanian and Russian.

With these qualifications Dr. Wright was readily received into the university world, and in 1901 he succeeded the great Max Muller in the Oxford professorship and brought out the scholarly and comprehensive English dialect dictionary. He also produced standard primers and grammars of Gothic, Greek, middle and old High German and old English. The value of his researches were recognized by the crown, and, after the ancient fashion, he was provided with a Government grant or civil list pension of about $1000 a year.

Great Dane Mothers Lion Cubs.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 23.—The raising of three cub lions, the offspring of Senta, the prize lioness of the Berlin zoo, has been entrusted to a Great Dane. The cubs upon their birth immediately were taken from Senta, who showed a disposition to kill them. The foster dog mother nurses them carefully to the great delight of hundreds of children who are watching the development of the playful young lions.

JUDGE COMPELS ATTORNEYS TO DEFEND TEXAS NEGROES

Rangers to Be on Duty During Trial of Pair Indicted for Six Capital Crimes.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., May 23.—Judge Charles A. Pippen in Criminal District Court yesterday appointed two attorneys, over their protest, to defend Frank and Lorenzo Noel, negro brothers, indicted for six capital crimes, and ordered a special venire of 300 men for next Thursday.

A "demonstration by anyone will be tantamount to his committing suicide," the Judge declared in announcing defendants would be protected during their trial. A detachment of Texas Rangers, as well as an increased Sheriff's force will be on duty. A mob attempted to storm the Dallas County jail in order to lynch the negroes last Wednesday night.

COUNTY PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS WIN IN HEALTH CONTEST

St. Paul's at Pine Lawn and St. Mary's at Bridgeton Successful in Events.

Both events of the annual healthiest school contest recently conducted in the city and county parochial schools by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis were won by county schools, it has just been announced. St. Paul's School at Pine Lawn came out first in having the highest percentage of children up to normal weight, and St. Mary's School at Bridgeton was given first place for making marked improvement in the percentage of children up to normal weight. This is the first time since the contest was instituted three years ago that county schools have won a place in either event.

In part one of the contest, which determined the school having the highest percentage of children up to normal weight, St. Paul's School came far in the lead. Honorable mention in this part is also due Holy Innocents, Blessed Sacrament and St. Joseph at Manchester.

In part two of the contest, which determined the school making the greatest improvement in the percentage of children up to normal weight, St. Paul's School again ranked first. However, with St. Paul's consent, rewards in this latter event were given to St. Mary's School at Bridgeton which ran a close second in its record of improvement. Honorable mention in this part of the contest is due Blessed Sacrament, St. Michael at Shrewsbury and Visitation. Forty-two schools participated in the contest, representing a total enrollment of more than [illegible] children.

Becoming a Home Owner Promotes Happiness and Encourages Thrift

THE Pilgrims boarded the "Mayflower" and sailed West because they wanted to establish better homes for themselves and their children. The Pioneers, in their covered wagons, penetrated forests, crossed plains and mountain ranges in search of desirable locations where they could build and enjoy better homes.

The inherent desire of free people everywhere is to establish homes, to have a place where they feel that they are settled and can accumulate the inanimate things that bring comfort and pleasure and inspiration.

The present-day family in St. Louis, in its desire for a home, is not unlike the Pilgrim or the Pioneer, but the hardships which were an inevitable part of our forefathers' home hunting, no longer exist. Today in St. Louis we have improved neighborhoods, with schools, churches, stores, transportation—everything.

Your start toward home ownership should begin at once—today—and now while you have the Post-Dispatch in your hand, turn to the Real Estate Section and look over the list of desirable homes and homesites.

Read the Home Offers in the Post-Dispatch Today

GERMAN ACTORS DRIVEN FROM STAGE BY HARD TIMES

Film Manager of Metropolitan Theater in Berlin Has Become Bavarian Farmer.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 23.—Hard times on the stage have driven not a few German actors and singers to take up other occupations. Seven stage celebrities have recently become farmers and restaurant owners and others turned to industry and commerce. Farming has also attracted a number of stage favorites. Eduard Schulz, at one time manager of the Metropolitan Theater in Berlin, has become a Bavarian farmer. Otto Sommeratorff and his wife, Therasina, formerly the Romeo and Juliet of the German stage, have retired to a country place near the village of Spital on the Alps.

Hans Poppe, once a star of the Kroll Theater in Berlin, married Lava and is devoting her time to the cultivation of fruit at Brissago, Switzerland. Rudolph Rittner, who won fame as interpreter of roles in Gerhart Hauptmann plays, has bought a little estate in Neudorf, Upper Silesia, and is busied with mixed farming.

Hanna Gregor, founder of the Kroll Opera of Berlin, has married an American woman and become a farmer in the United States.

BRITONS LIKE CHINESE COOKS

Some Are Brought From America to Serve English Households.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—Chinese cooks are in demand in England, and in several instances they have been brought from the United States after having mastered the American way of preparing food. In families where the Chinese servants have been for years they are looked upon as nearly equal to the English family butler and most of them consider that they have their jobs for life.

A story is told of one old timer who learned his art in San Francisco. One day he said to his master: "Since the war, Wong read much history." The master nodded, indicating that he was pleased. Wong continued: "Wong read Stone Age—and Wong read about Gladstone. Velly great man. Gladstone. He go out every morning and chop wood for cook."

BRITISH GIRL AN AIR PILOT

Daughter of Lord and Lady Inchcape Takes Up Flying.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—Miss Elsie Mackay, daughter of Lord and Lady Inchcape, who distinguished herself some time ago as a designer of the interior of steamships, has taken up flying and recently purchased an airplane for her own use. She was granted a pilot's license some time ago; has already made many flights, and has become known as England's most daring woman aviator.

Most of the steamships controlled by Lord Inchcape, which ply between England and India, were decorated interiorally after designs conceived by Miss Mackay. The suite occupied by Lord and Lady Reading recently on their voyage from Bombay to London was arranged by her.

Lindenwood Dress Design Awards.

A competition for dress designing and workmanship in the art and home economics departments of Lindenwood College has resulted in the award of six prizes, bestowed by Mrs. Paul F. Donnelly of Kansas City. A house-dress made by Miss Marie Lansing, which won first prize of $25 in the dressmaking, will be adopted by Mrs. Donnelly's manufacturing plant. In the art department, Miss Isabel Wanless' dress design won first prize of $15; Miss Oda Wentworth took second prize, $10; and Miss Martha Shortridge, third prize, $5. Following Miss Marie Lansing's place as first in the dressmaking department, the other winners were: Miss Adah Davis, $15, and Miss Wanless, $10; Miss Wanless having also won in the art department. Honorable mention was given to Miss Allene Moran.

COBBLERS RAISE REQUIREMENTS

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 23.—Young men of Wilmersdorf who desire to take up the shoemaker's trade must be graduates of the public schools and possess a report showing that they have at least average ability. This is one of the conditions for apprentices prescribed by the master shoemakers' association.

The apprentices also must demonstrate a deep interest in the trade and a willingness to work. They must be healthy, of good bodily build, and live wires. The conditions emphasize that lack of concentration, inclination toward melancholy and inattentiveness will disqualify candidates.

The Perfect Market-Place

of Calumet Baking Powder will do the work of two spoonfuls of many other brands. It goes farther—lasts longer because of its more-than-ordinary leavening strength.

That's why it is most economical of all leaveners.

CALUMET

THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

If you have been using some other brand in a recipe that calls for two spoonfuls of baking powder — try it with Calumet and use less baking powder.

You will notice a big improvement in the quality of your baking—it will taste better—be lighter and more easily digested. You'll decide then and there in favor of the "best by test" leavener — the baking powder that millions have been buying and using daily for years.

There Is No Substitute for Calumet

Make Note of This!

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 ounces. Some baking powders come in 12 ounce instead of 16 ounce cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.

BERLIN CONCERT SEASON DOMINATED BY AMERICANS

Striking Success of Artists From United States Is Eye-Opener to Germans.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 23.—Berlin's concert season, which was almost completely dominated by an invasion of American talent, proved a veritable eye-opener for the Germans. With the end of the season the critics frankly admit that they did not believe the United States could produce such brilliant musicians.

Anna Case, who opened the American forces of concerts, was apostrophized as "a rare combination of unusual beauty and highest artistic achievement." Of Dusolina Giannini's singing, Berlin's leading critic, Prof. Adolf Weisman, observes: "Mark this name Dusolina; it is born for fame. Even the most spoiled listener remains in his seat until the last tone of her voice is wafted through the hall."

Mlle. Giannini has been engaged by the state opera as guest star for two months, beginning in September.

Sascha Jacobsen, violinist, not only was compelled to give three encores at the end of his program, but also, in violation of the usual German concert tradition, had to repeat two numbers in the middle of his performance—an experience almost unheard of.

The Fisk jubilee singers are honored with warm eulogies of the negro's services to musical art. One critic says of them: "Their music expresses everything that pained, oppressed and comforted the soul of the negro among the whites—the sorrows of the slavery of yesterday and the hope for final liberation tomorrow.

The way has thus been well paved for the recitals of the remaining three Americans yet to be heard—Sophie Braslau, Richard Crooks and Wilhelm Middleschulte.

"HONOR RINGS" IN GERMANY

Conferred Because Constitution Forbids Decorations or Titles.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 23.—Under the Constitution of the republic, Germany no longer can award decorations or titles. Hence several state governments often are confronted with the problem how to show appreciation for distinguished service.

In connection with the opening of the Deutsches Museum in Munich the Bavarian Government set a precedent which seems to commend itself to the German people. Instead of a decoration, gold "honor rings" were awarded.

POSTAL AUTHORITIES FIGHT OBSCENITIES

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Recent increase in the flood of questionable matter offered for transmission through the mails has led to further tightening of the routine safeguards employed in the postal service for keeping it out and for prosecution of those violating the Federal statutes in that regard.

Thousands of complaints have come to the office of the Postmaster-General from parents and associates asking that the department augment its efforts to protect children from obscene literature and pictures.

Courts Discourage Dealers.

The close surveillance exercised over the character of matter passing through the mails officials believe, has effected a material decrease in objectionable matter. Federal Courts have discouraged the efforts of such dealers by upholding the post ofice department in each instance where rulings excluding obscene matter from the mails has been challenged.

Foreign dealers, especially since the war and the return of American soldiers from France, have been active in endeavoring to dispose of their products in this country. In many instances foreign consignment are intercepted at custom houses. The trade of these offenders has been crippled by the postal authorities returning to senders letters addressed to all known dealers in obscene matter, by confiscating great quantities of unmailable advertising circulars and the materials as well, and by acquainting those attempting to import such matter with their responsibility and liability to prosecution under the penal provisions of the laws.

Magazines Partly Responsible.

Numerous small magaines are the source of continual complaint and the exclusion of many of them from the mails curtails to a considerable extent their widespread circulation. These publications have been responsible for increasing the work of the post office department's legal forces. The magazines when excluded from the mails find their way to newsstands through other channels.

BARS NIGHT MUSIC PRACTICE

Berkeley Authorities Hold That Scales Should Be Run Before 9 P. M.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., May 24.—The much-advertised anti-noise ordinance in this college city is construed by City Attorney Earl J. Sinclair as including piano practice at late hours in the evening. Running of scales and other such trying modes of perfecting one's technique should come before 9 p. m., the city attorney held recently, in reply to complaints of neighbors about a music student's nocturnal practice.

Roosters and canaries have been legally silenced in previous interpretations of the ordinance. So have cats and needlessly used motor horns. Nevertheless the air of Berkeley is not always quiet through the night.

RADIO CONTROL FOR CAMERAS

Device Perfected for Use in Filming Scenes Extended in Area.

UNIVERSAL CITY, Cal., May 23.—Radio control, which has been used successfully in the operation of airplanes and battleships, has been applied to motion picture cameras. Officials of a film corporation have perfected a radio device by which cameras may be placed at distant points and actuated by a transmitter.

The invention is devised for use in photographing long landscape scenes showing battles and similar large spectacles, where cameras at varied positions must be used at the same time.

AUTO UNDER TEST HAS GASOLINE AND ELECTRICAL DRIVE

Attempt Made to Use in Passenger Cars, System Replacing Transmission in Some Busses.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, May 23.—Attempts continue to be made to supplant the present type of automobile driving-gear transmission. The latest device, a gasoline-electric drive combination, is being produced in Toledo, O., after a sample device has been tested in an automobile for several months.

This device, if it proves practicable, will eliminate gear-shift lever, flywheel, clutch, generator, starter and accompanying parts, making the car virtually electrically driven.

A gasoline engine is used to operate a large generator, which produces electricity for a motor drive. The engine can be cut in at any speed to furnish additional power for emergencies. It is said the device enables a saving of 50 per cent in gasoline.

The device resembles that already in use in some busses in the East and in a large number of busses ordered for immediate production. Of these busses, 200 are to be in use in Philadelphia.

These busses carry 64 persons each. Power to drive an electric generator is furnished by a six-cylinder gasoline engine, with four-inch bore and six-inch stroke. The generator is gear-driven off the engine, and is so constructed as to give a nearly constant output of electric power at widely varying speeds. The electricity from the generator drives two electric motors, mounted side by side in the chassis, each geared to a rear wheel through its own propeller shaft. This eliminates the differential and insures contant torque to both wheels. Variations in speed and power are determined by the engine throttle. One bus so powered has been driven 150 miles since August last, without a failure of the drive.

ROAD SOUTH TO FESTUS AGAIN OPEN TO ST. LOUIS MOTORIST

The State Highway Department announces that the concrete road south from the old Lemay Ferry road through Pevely and Herculaneum to Festus is open for traffic to Herculaneum.

From Herculaneum motorists can follow the good old road into Festus. From Festus highway No. 8, a generally good gravel road, with one or two short detours and a few dirt spots, goes to Ste. Genevieve.

For some time there has been rough going and a mean detour into Herculaneum. The official detour has been down the Lemay ferry road through Maxville to a point a mile east of Hillsboro, then left and over the old Silica road into Festus. It no longer is necessary to use this detour.

Motor Camping From New York to St. Louis for Only $47

How Couple Made Trip, Where They Camped, What It Cost Them—All the Details Motorists Planning This Trip Will Want to Know Told by a Camper of Many Years' Experience.

By WILLIAM DINWIDDIE.

"HOW long did it take, and how much did it cost ya?"

It was the financial pessimist of the Post-Dispatch talking, just after we had untangled our legs from the foot pedals and wriggled our fingers, cramped by hanging onto a steering wheel, had just finished an automobile camping trip from New York to St. Louis.

Well, it took us five days, and cost only $47.80, $8.25 of which was for incidentals—such as a big milk can to carry a water supply, a hammer, adjusting brakes and patching two punctured tires. The wife broke in here ecstatically with "Oh! we had such a beautiful time camping; wonderful weather, perfect roads all the way, and such good meals. It is the only way to live!"

"Depreciation? Bah!"

But the pessimist was riding his hobby of a cost sheet. He broke in, "You do not count the wear and tear on your automobile, the depreciation; you've probably ruined your car by overloading it and dragging a big trailer behind it."

"Oh! What's the use?" was my mental reservation, though I kept the smile on my face. He hadn't seen, as we had, the pale green, fragile verdure of spring; the white blossoms of the old roadside cherry trees, the lavender lilac clumps and the woods violets. He hadn't seen the purpling mountain ranges of the Blue Ridge and the Alleghanies at sunset; or the new moon, yet so young it hurried to bed after the setting sun; or the mist clouds slowly rising from the deep-laid valleys in the early morning, and the smoke curling from chimneys of nestled homes among the hills. Nothing to him were the beautiful tortuous winding roads, unraveling new vistas at every turn, nor the miles of long undulating straightaway travel through the fertile farmlands of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, with our engine purring softly and the speed—well, just within the legal limit. Depreciation! Bah!

Good Roads All the Way.

We were talking of a May automobile trip from New York to St. Louis. From the little suburban New Jersey town, where we live, just south of New York, to Missouri's metropolis is 1046 miles, via Philadelphia, Lancaster, Gettysburg, Chambersburg, Bedford, Greenburg, Pittsburg, "Little" Washington, Pa., Wheeling, W. Va., and then over the National Old Trails through Zanesville, Columbus and Canton, O., Richmond, Indianapolis and Terre Haute, Ind., and across Illinois through Marshall, Effingham and Vandalia.

Old-time east-and-west motor tourists will remember the muddy horrors of an attempted spring crossing of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, by this more southern route. They were sure to be bogged half a dozen times and dragged out by farmers' teams, if they dared to try the roads after a heavy rain. There was just one thing to do after a storm—stay in camp or in a hotel for several days, until the highway dried up again.

Today the states' highways are perfect the entire distance.

Economical Outing.

To us of the professional camper type—and we say it without conceit—who know how to camp with all the comforts and no discomforts, there is no form of outing so delightful, or which can be conducted so economically as an automobile camping trip across the United States.

We use a medium-priced, high-powered car—make it higher powered, if necessary, by putting in mountain-climbing gears. Most automobile manufacturers equip their cars with several sets of gears, depending on whether their market be in flat or mountainous country.

In Praise of the Trailer.

Years ago we gave up the tent and various forms of canvas shelter which sprang from the sides of the car, and, in their place, have adopted the trailer. Of course, there are trailers and trailers, all the way from the lurching little go-cart hooked on behind, piled up with tent and camp equipment, through the makeshift series of camps on wheels, upon which may be erected a tent covering, with struts and bars and cross-pieces galore, to the kind we are now using. Our trailer, on the road, looks like a dwarfed, solid-walled delivery cart on two wheels. In five minutes after selecting a camp site and without uncoupling from the auto, if you prefer, the side curtains can be unbuttoned and the sides pulled down, almost as one opens an upper Pullman berth. The roof elevates itself, and two fine wire-mattressed beds, 6 feet by 4 wide, spring out from the sides.

This simple operation gives one a canvas house, wire-screened, mosquito and bug proof, six feet from floor to ceiling, a total width over all of 12 feet and 6 feet 2 inches long, while the roof is still more of a protection from rain because its construction is like that of a truck—boards covered with oilcloth material.

A portable step lets down from the rear, and the entrance door has a lock on it. In the triangular, bow-shaped front is a clothes closet on one side and a kitchen cupboard on the other. In the latter are a real ice box, a big two-burner folding gasoline stove, a two-gallon water can, a nested set of aluminum buckets, sauce pans, skillets and coffee pot, a full set of aluminum dishes, plates, cups, knives, forks and spoons, and shelves which provide ample room for flour and other groceries.

The door to this front closet lifts off its hinges and as, it has stiff folding legs on its face, it can be converted into a substantial table at which four people can dine comfortably.

Other Equipment.

We have had the bad luck to be caught in some very severe storms, but, as the winds raged outside and the ground under the trailer was flooded with water, in our hotel on wheels we have (in great comfort and warm as toast) cooked our meals and, by the light of a 35-candle powered electric bulb, fed from the storage battery, read the latest magazines and gone peacefully to sleep, miles away from the nearest habitation.

As a matter of practice we carry an extra folding table, of the roll-up type, four fine full-backed folding canvas chairs, a 9x9 single-pole canopy tent, with sewed-in floor and extension canvas wings, which make a screened-in front porch, around which is hung masquito netting reaching to the ground. This auxiliary tent is very useful

SUPERCHARGER RACERS EXPECTED TO SET NEW INDIANAPOLIS RACE MARK

Two Front Drive Cars Will Be Center of Interest in Annual 500-Mile Memorial Day—Best Motoring Route.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 23.—A new 500-mile record is confidently expected to be made Memorial day by the winner of the annual event which Americans assert is the world's premier automobile race and Europeans grant equal rank with the French Grand Prix. The increases in speed on the new tracks at Charlotte, N. C., and Culver City, Cal., and the fact that virtually all of the cars entered in the race here will have superchargers that lift the power of the engines at high speeds from 20 to 40 per cent above the power of similar engines not so equipped, are the principal reasons for this confidence.

Records of Past Races.

The first Indianapolis race was won at an average speed of 74.59 miles an hour. In 1912 the average was raised to 78.7, which has remained the record for 600-cubic inch cars. The first year engine size was limited to 450 cubic inches, the average speed was 76.92, but in 1914 it went up to 82.47. In 1915, Ralph de Palma, driving the first race under the 300 cubic inch limitation, raised the average to 89.84, which stood for several years. In 1921, Tommy Milton, driving in the second race under the 183-inch limitation, was able to average only 89.62, and it looked as if De Palma's old record would stand for some years. But in 1923, the last year of the 183-inch cars, Tommy Murphy raised the average for the 500 miles to 94.48. In 1924, Milton drove one of the new 122-inch cars the 500 miles at an average of 90.95 miles an hour. Then, in 1924, Joe Boyer, driving as relief pilot, raised the average to 98.20 with a car whose engine's cubic capacity was only a fifth of that of the cars of 1912.

Two Front Drive Cars Entered.

The race this year is almost entirely between Miller and Deusenberg specials, driven by men who own their own "boats" and campaign them around the "bowls" of the country. The only factory car entered is a front drive machine of Miller construction that is to race under the name of the Locomobile Junior Eight. Another front drive car, listed as a Miller special, also is entered. Interest of motorists mechanically inclined and of automobile engineers and designers, will center chiefly in the speed and endurance displayed by these two front drive racers. If they finish the 500 miles, they may have a pronounced effect on automobile design. If either finishes well up in the money, there is no telling what the result may be.

There is disappointment over failure of the French driver and designer, Albert Guyot, to get his Guyot specials built in time to ship them here for the race. These cars were to be engined with six-cylinder, single-sleeve valve motors.

How to Motor to the Race.

The best route from St. Louis to Indianapolis is over the National Old Trails. Cross the Free Bridge (Chouteau avenue and Seventh street) and continue off the end of the bridge to Tenth street, East St. Louis, going left about 200 feet in St. Clair avenue, then into Ninth street and the Collinsville road

Leadership—and why

Graham Brothers impressive advance to first position in the 1½ ton truck field, and second in the 1 ton and the 1½ ton fields combined—during the first quarter of 1925—is explained by four vital reasons:

1. Distinct price advantage.
2. Pronounced quality advantage.
3. Dodge Brothers engine.
4. Substantial character of Dodge Brothers dealer organization.

Ordinary logic demands that these facts receive your immediate consideration if you have any need whatever for a truck.

BIDS ASKED TO FINISH ROAD TO NEW ORLEANS

Building 26 Miles of Concrete Road Will Close Missouri Dirt Gap in Highway.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 23.—Bids for 53 miles of new road work on the Missouri highway system, 55 miles of which will be concrete costing about $1,500,000, will be received at the State Highway Department here June 5.

The work is to be done in only five counties, Dekalb, Ray, Montgomery, Vernon and Pemiscot. Approximately 26 miles of the new road will be located in Pemiscot County. Only 2.7 miles of the new construction will be other than concrete and will consist of chat paving in Vernon County. The State will furnish materials, as usual.

The Pemiscot County concrete construction will complete Missouri route No. 9 to the Arkansas line and will make the Chicago-St. Louis-Cairo-Sikeston-Memphis-New Orleans highway an all-weather reality.

MOTOR CAMPING FROM NEW YORK THROUGH TO ST. LOUIS

in a camp used for several days, as it becomes the outdoor kitchen and dining room.

All this extra duffle, including our dress-suit cases and a treated paper trunk of good size for the lady, is included in the load packed in the back part of the touring car.

Today there may usually be found, riding high on the luggage, an eight-tube superheterodyne radio set, with its folding loop and a big loud speaker packed in a separate box. On the running boards, held in by luggage carriers, are placed an extra storage battery for the radio, the lights of the car, as needs may require; a 5-gallon milk can for water, extra gasoline, a gallon of oil, a small wire-rope windlass and a frame to carry our outboard motor.

Motor Boat on Top of Car.

Yes, we carry our motor boat with us, when we go on fishing trips down to Florida or up to Maine and Canada. It is a real canoe, too, of the sponson type, nonchsizable, 16 feet long and 4½ feet in the beam. It is carried on steel frames erected at the front and rear of the car. The canoe rides over the top of the machine and one man can mount and dismount the 130-pound boat, as it slides into position on rubber-covered rollers, and is locked down tightly with buckled straps. Once placed and belted on, it has been known to travel a thousand miles without shifting a fraction of an inch.

A word of warning just here: If you go in for the motor boat, have limousine springs put in to replace your lighter touring-car springs, or you may get a road wallop which will demolish a leaf.

The motorboat had added greatly to our pleasure on inland-water fishing trips, as often there are no boats available on very attractive lakes and streams, and it also makes one quite independent of high-priced guides in other sections of the country.

No Trouble in Mountains.

"Can you climb steep mountains with such a load?" is a question often asked. On this western trip, we did not carry the motorboat, but, for reasons of our own, we were more heavily laden with luggage in the car and trailer than usual—quite enough more to offset the weight of the boat—and all the steepest climbs over the Blue Ridge and the Alleghanies into Pittsburg were easily pulled, at 15 to 18 miles an hour, in second. First speed was never resorted to.

In going down the long hills, we kept in second, and once or twice threw in the low gear, as the push of the trailer was noticeable, but any good motorist always saves his brake bands by this expedient.

Out in the level middle country, it is difficult to keep the bus from going over 45, and, as the signs in the West read 35, we are always careful, particularly if we have seen a motorcycle cop in the last few miles.

The First Day.

Hotel versus Camps: Two hundred miles a day seems about the distance we can cover, on good roads, without too great fatigue. After leaving Gettysburg, on the trip out, we began to climb into the mountains. Another hour's hard driving would have been required to reach a hotel in Chambersburg. Instead, we suddenly discovered a State of Pennsylvania Forest Reserve camp, on a beautiful trout stream. The State has supplied water, wood, camp-fire shelters and latrines for campers in a wonderful piece of pine and hardwood forest.

We had clocked 214 miles. We had laid in a supply of food which cost us $3.19. Our gas and oil for the day cost $3.12. We had had a fine hot lunch on the roadside at noon. Our dinner was tomato soup, broiled porterhouse steak, new potatoes and spinach, ice cream, cake and coffee. Our dinner concert was the twilight song of the robins, the sad plaintive note of the bluebirds and the bass rumph of the frogs in a nearby pond. As we fell asleep amid the vast stillness of the mountain woods, we heard the subdued gurgling laughter of the brook, hurrying along beneath its bower of low-hung laurel. Perhaps there are those who prefer the jangled orchestra, the backfire of noisy automobiles on the busy city streets, the slam of bedroom doors nearly all night, and the hotel bill next morning—not we!

On the Open Road.

And so it went for five wonderful days. Warm days and cool nights, with leafy foliage springing into being over night, and woodland flowers everywhere.

Out of Pittsburg we were not so fortunate, as a bad detour slowed us down in entering the city, and the evening's traffic jam delayed us interminably, in crossing the downtown business section. The sun was gone, and twilight deepened as we roared through the great $40,000,000 tunnel highway piercing the mountain on the south, and came out again into fading twilight near Carnegie. We hastily went into camp on a vacant lot near the main highway.

A dozen curious youngsters, inoffensive but pestiferous, kept up some noisy game, under the nearby electric light, until midnight.

The cost sheet of the day read, food, $2.68; gas and oil, $6.09. The toll of the mountains was showing in the gas bill.

Our breakfast usually consists of bacon, poached eggs, coffee and hot wheat cakes, with maple syrup. To this was added strawberries with cream, for we carry milk, from the last store passed in the evening, in our refrigerator.

We had made only 176 miles for a long day, but we were through the big mountains.

Enjoyable Camp in Park.

The third day's camp was a real joy. We were sailing out of the beautiful city of Columbus in the late afternoon, with a thundershower threatening, when we saw a public park at our left, in which there were already a dozen auto camps. In a beautiful natural amphitheater, well within the city's limits, the fathers have given permission to autoists to set up housekeeping.

We had hardly come to a standstill, when a man and his wife ran up to offer assistance in making camp before the rain struck us. "We're from Los Angeles," they said. "We've rented a house temporarily, right up there, but we're going camping again as soon as the weather's a little warmer." The storm broke, and they rushed off to close the windows in their cottage, just on the bluff above us, so we did not fathom their eternal urge for travel.

Food for this day was $3.79, but it was Saturday, and we were laying in Sunday's provisions, as well. The gas and oil bill was still high, $6.38, but most of the trip from Pittsburg, through Wheeling and for 40 miles beyond, was in rough mountainous country, though we began to follow down some valleys, instead of crawling straight up over five different mountain ranges, as we had done the day before. The mileage was 196 miles.

Delightful Country Camp.

On the fourth day—Sunday—we broke camp very late for us, nearly 10 o'clock, but we made 192 miles by 5 in the afternoon, when we went into camp a few miles west of Indianapolis.

Following our custom, when we can, we turned into a side road at a small village. On the spacious porch of a frame dwelling we were passing were grouped, in their Sunday best, three or four middle-aged couples. We called to them, asking for a camp site, and, as one of the men shouted pleasantly that, about a mile down the road, was a schoolhouse grove which campers used, his wife nudged him in the ribs, and we heard her exclaim, sotto voce, "Hiram, you're not polite. Go show them where to camp." We drove away, with thanks and a wave of the hand, before Hiram could pry himself out of his rocking chair.

A little modern brick schoolhouse, tucked away amid rough-barked hickory, pin-oak and soft maple trees, delighted our eyes. The ground was covered with yellow and purple flowers, and clumps of May apples, just unfolding their flat-topped leaves, were scattered about.

Too bad! We put to flight a pair of youngster petters in a Ford sedan, who had chosen this sylvan nook in which to dream dreams.

For the day our food bill was 45 cents, but our gas and oil bill jumped to $7.16—mostly for oil, as the engine ran hot with thinning oil, and the crankcase had to be drained and washed out.

On the morning of the fifth day we were 246 miles out of St. Louis, and, with a perfect concrete roadway before us across the State of Illinois, we expected to go over the Mississippi an hour or two before sunset.

Camp Managed by Girl.

We made our start at 7 a. m., but, in less than three hours, the bright morning sun had clouded over and the warm air became chilled, as a nasty, drizzling rain began to fall. We ate an early lunch, between showers, just outside of Effingham, and, before 1 o'clock, we were anxiously looking for a camping place, through a windshield obscured with moisture.

A garage keeper in Vandalia tipped us off with the statement that "Jerry Lacey's daughter has just opened a new filling station on Route No. 2, two miles north of town. She's got a nice camp, with lots of shade trees." So we made for Jerry Lacey's daughter's camp.

We spent the afternoon and evening between our own comfortable house on wheels and Jerry's daughter's snug little office. We heard the story of how it became more difficult for the old man to run the little farm, and of how "my girl" had put up this station, and of how they were going to drill a deep well right by the road—when they could afford it—though the water from the well at the old farmhouse was hard to beat.

"Touch and Go" on the Road.

To us there is a real pleasure in these touch-and-go associations of the road. There is a cordiality, a sincerity in the simple tales of life and aspirations, disappointments and simple successes that one seldom gets in the more conventional relations of existence. Who you are, what you are counts little. If you know how to be one of God's common people, and wear a smile on your face, good fellowship greets you everywhere.

Our mileage for the day was 170 miles. Food cost $1.60 and gas $2.67. Incidentally it should be said we always buy high-priced gas with the pep in it. We think it pays in keeping the engine free of carbon.

The last short run into St. Louis next morning took $1.42 worth of gas and oil.

A Laughable Contrast.

Five bellhops in front of one of St. Louis' great caravansaries were necessary to unload us, while the brass-buttoned factotum, who waves the limousines and taxis in and out, gave evidence of great agitation as we completely blocked the entrance and the sidewalk with our multifarious chattels, to the amusement of a gathering throng of the curious.

Even the unlimited supply of hot water in the bath (we use a folding rubber tub in camp, with three gallons of hot water) and he cordial handshake of the head waiter, who knows us, at the door of the vast dining room, did not bring contentment to our souls, so now we are tucked away in a small bungalow over the county line and we sleep in the trailer out in the back yard because the lady says: "You know it's kind of stuffy in the house, and anyway the trailer beds are more comfortable."

ROAD MAPS AND TOURING INFORMATION FURNISHED BY THE POST-DISPATCH

ROAD maps of the various states, and information about road conditions and touring routes, may be obtained at the Travel and Resort Bureau, in the business office on the first floor of the Post-Dispatch Building. The road and touring information is free. A charge of 10 cents each is made for maps. The Automobile Editor may be consulted about tours between 8 and 10 a. m. daily, except Saturday and Sunday.

with Illinois highway No. 11 signs. Continue on No. 11 across the State, through Troy, Highland, Effingham and Marshall to the Indiana line. There, pick up Indiana highway No. 3 and follow it through Terre Haute and Putnamville to Indianapolis, which is 244 miles from St. Louis. Except in some towns, the entire route is paved.

Some of the Drivers.

Among the contesting drivers will be Tommy Milton, Harry Hartz, Bennett Hill, Ralph de Palma, Earl Cooper, Jerry Wonderlich, Leon Duray and Dr. W. E. Shattuc, a former amateur who has shown a world of speed. Pietro Bordino, who has turned some fast laps on the Culver and Charlotte tracks, will drive the Fiat which he has campaigned in this country for several months past. Bordino won the Grand Prix at Milan, Italy, in 1922, and was wrecked when leading near the end of the 1922 French Grand Prix. He is a fearless driver.

A welcome entrant is Antoine Mourre of France, who will drive one of the Duesenberg specials. He finished ninth in last year's Indianapolis race after losing 12 minutes changing a wheel that was jammed when Ernie Ansterberg's car hit the wall and rebounded against his machine. He will team with Peter de Paolo. Peter Kreis and Phil Shafer on the Duesenbergs. He was to have driven one of the Guyot cars. When Mourre returned to Paris recently, after some months of racing in this country, he became involved in a quarrel with most of the French race drivers and motor publicists because he praised American cars as the fastest in the world and American drivers as the finest sportsmen. "In France," Mourre said, "sometimes they think there is trickery in the fast averages the American drivers make in their cars. But I know different, for I was driving in the American races." As will be recalled, the Automobile Section of the Post-Dispatch some time ago told how a noted British driver publicly declared that American tracks were short and American motor car speed records not, what they were purported to be.

ROAD CONDITIONS ON ROUTE 12 TO JEFFERSON CITY

Story of Enjoyable Trip to Columbia, Mo., and Report on East Half of Road to Kansas City.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

IF proof be desired that Missouri really is being lifted out of the mud by its $60,000,000 road bonds and hard-working State Highway Commission, let the motorist take the trip here described, from St. Louis to Jefferson City and Columbia. It traverses Missouri hills of striking beauty.

With fair weather, the road is perfect all the way. In a hard rain it is the same, except for some comparatively short stretches not yet fully graveled, where the surface is quite slippery, but does not mire machines, because there is some natural gravel in the dirt. The route is by No. 12, the Capital Highway, and No. 7, a cross-State highway. Route No. 2, the St. Louis-Columbia-Kansas City air line, is not in good shape for some distance beyond Warrenton, but is said to be all right between Columbia and Kansas City, except for 30 miles of poor road.

Good Time for Night Drivers.

The writer left St. Louis at 4 p. m. in a Ford, without previous knowledge of the route beyond the middle of Franklin County. An hour and a half was consumed in stops for supper, a tire change and refreshments at Jefferson City, and Columbia was reached at 12:30 a. m.—eight hours on the road for 163 miles, rarely exceeding 30 miles and hour and seldom dropping below 25. Better than 20 miles was made to the gallon of gasoline and no trouble was experienced.

A description of the route follows, starting with the speedometer at 00.0 at Grand and Olive:

Any route to Manchester road, the East end of No. 12, on which concrete begins about mile 8.0, and continues for about 22 miles to the county line. From there to Union (county seat of Franklin County, notable for its courthouse and "St. Louis trials" held there), the road is rather rough gravel, due to recent work, but is passable. Three miles beyond Union, new road surface begins which is comparable to a park drive for its own quality and the beauty of the wooded hills that spread out all around.

Unspoiled Landscape.

Here let it be remarked that such is the character of the country all the way from St. Louis' suburbs to the State capital. This is no thickly settled land like that to the east of the Mississippi, and it has few settlements of importance. Nature holds full sway, and at this season of the year the slopes and woods are breath-taking in the brilliance of their green and splendor of their shadows.

"Free air," it is, to recall Sinclair Lewis' tale of the highway, but "Gasoline" and "Barbecue" are signs that have not invaded this region to any great extent. Neither have the advertising men spoiled the landscapes with their boards and bulletins.

Scarcely a spot in the highway from Union to Jefferson City can be singled out at present as differing greatly in quality from the rest of the way. It is obvious, though, that the promised maintenance of the State will be necessary to keep up this condition, not forgetting the importance of preventing overloaded trucks from ruining the surface.

A Land of Streams.

Between Leslie and Rosebud there is about 15 miles that is slippery in wet weather, but cars do not bog down in it. The route turns north to Rosebud at Drake, where No. 45 contipues north for Hermann. Otherwise, No. 12 runs generally westward.

Rivers abound along the way. In St. Louis County, No. 12 is flanked by the Meramec and Missouri hills, and in Franklin County there are glimpses of the Missouri and its white cliffs. Five miles east of Union there is a view of the Bourboise River, a vacation stream.

Mount Sterling, at mileage 94.0, overlooks the hilly Gasconade River valley. There are eating and sleeping accommodations here (as at some other points). Just east of Mount Sterling there are a number of gravel bottomed creek and brook fords, but these need cause no fear, except during and immediately after quite heavy rains. Such creeks usually subside quickly. There is one steep, winding hill six miles east of Mount Sterling that must be watched for.

The old bridge of two board troughs across one of these creeks has been demolished.

Beyond the Gasconde.

No. 12 crosses the Gasconde, continuing through the Ozark Country; through Linn, the detached county seat of Osage County, at 109.0; across Big Maries Creek and, a little way farther, at 119.8, the broad Osage River. A few miles east of Jefferson City, the Moreau River is crossed on a peculiar narrow bridge suspended beneath a trestle of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. The Osage and Gasconade are spanned by fine modern bridges.

Even at night, the illuminated dome of Missouri's strikingly beautiful Capitol stands out for some distance as the capitol is approached. The route leads directly into East High street, Jefferson City's chief thoroughfare, and passes within a block of the State penitentiary. Just beyond the hotel and store section is the Federal Building, on the right, and next to it, on the river bluff, the Capitol, which has internationally known examples of art within and without, on the left, opposite it, is the well-designed Supreme Court Building.

It is best to turn right with the car line on the west side of the Capitol, going one block to Main street and west several blocks to the approach to the toll bridge across the Missouri. The toll is small. Broadly sweeping between bluff and lowland, the Big Muddy offers a series of pictures as the bridge is crossed.

Into the College City.

From North Jefferson, on the Callaway County side, there is a marked detour of 4.3 miles of level dirt road. Running to a distant bluff, it passes work on a new straightaway road and concrete bridge across the M.-K.-T. tracks, under construction. Crossing into Boone County, the completed section of No. 7 is reached, though there are stretches still to receive surface gravel. A number of miles at the Columbia end is a winding country pike, formerly a toll road, with numerous narrow bridges requiring caution. The landscape here is mildly rolling, with fertile marms all around. Columbia itself is a neat, clean and shady county-seat, plus the all-pervading atmosphere of the University of Missouri. The campus and its surroundings of student boarding places, fraternity and sorority houses and countless student eating places, is on the left on the way to the business section, where there is a good hotel.

Routes No. 7 and 12 are well marked with the State's orange and black signs.

The Return Trip.

The return trip may be varied in various ways. For instance, one can swing over to Herrmann from Mount Sterling or Drake and return through Washington, or ferry the Missouri at Washington and return via Warrenton and the concrete on No. 2.

An attractive side trip may be made south on No. 7, which runs to Rolla, seat of the State School of Mines, from the junction of No. 12 and the Osage River. This route turns south with the Osage and gives vistas of the sparkling stream from high points. Several miles away from No. 12, is the bright and isolated town of Westphalia and still farther, on good gravel road, is Vienna. Beyond it is said, there are rough spots on the way to Rolla.

When the writer stopped at Mount Sterling on his return trip and watched a rainstorm brewing, two big closed cars rolled in from the East. A resident of Salt Lake City, his wife and daughter had bought them in New York and were driving back to Utah. They were high in their praise of the Missouri roads and scenery.

I'll Tell You Why I'd Buy a JORDAN

¶ This is a simple statement of facts. ¶ A simple explanation as to why other people buy Jordans—written in words easily understood—for the man who thinks. ¶ Here's why I'd buy a Jordan.

1 Because of the name on the radiator—accepted—approved—a mark of prestige—evidence of good judgment.

2 Because it sells for $1000 to $2000 below cars in its class—materials cost as much—but Jordan overhead, salaries and plant investments are less.

3 Because it is the most satisfactory line eight motor built. Other manufacturers who have bought Jordans say so.

4 Because you can drive it from two to seventy miles an hour—or all day long at forty-five—and think you are going thirty.

5 Because you snap away in the traffic press, confident of power—it's agile on its feet.

6 Because you cannot describe the feeling at the wheel. It has what the salesmen call a wallop—a little kick—a little something known as pep.

7 Because when you take it to the long pull hill—and think it's going to die—it just lies right down and pulls and pulls and pulls—that's performance.

8 Because the finish and equipment on The Great Line Eight are the best obtainable today.

9 Because the Jordan starts easily—reliably.

10 Drive the Line Eight for a week—and then go back and drive any car you have ever driven—that's proof.

11 You will be happy with the Jordan if you have driven an old fashioned, bulky car. You never hear much about "shimmy" with balloon tires on the Line Eight—it's balanced.

12 You never hear salesmen condemning balloon tires for the Jordan. It's just a matter of distribution of weight. Some cars are top heavy. Jordan isn't.

13 Place your hands on the wheel—balloon tires do not effect the steering. It's easy to handle—easy to turn around.

14 You have heard a lot about four wheel brakes. With the Jordan hydraulic brakes you never hear of trouble. They just work.

15 You may have driven a higher priced car with noisy transmission or a humming axle. Drive the Jordan from two to forty-five miles an hour in second speed and just listen.

16 If you have the spirit of youth take a look at the Playboy—step into it—drive it, and watch the people stare as you go by.

17 If you want enclosed car comfort without the squeaks and rattles, ride in a Jordan Victoria, Brougham, Sedan or Friendly Three.

18 You'll never hear of a broken spring in a Great Jordan Line Eight. Factory records show that not a single one has ever been replaced. That's because they're all chrome vanadium steel properly designed.

19 I'd buy The Great Line Eight because I'd enjoy economy of operation over a long period of time and second hand value when I trade it in—

20 Second hand value—that's the thing—that's service—that's saving dollars—that's the main point in an automobile.

These are the reasons why people are buying Jordan cars.

It's the most satisfactory eight in its field.

It's the best looking car we know.

It will run and run and run at low cost.

And think how much more it will be worth a year from now than any ordinary car.

P.S.—Remember that the main thought in the mind of every buyer today is this—What will I get for the car I'm going to buy when I bring it to the second hand market—as I eventually will?

WINS SALES CONTEST.

B. B. DEW.

PRIZES have been awarded in the car sales contest conducted by the Weber Motor Car Co., Studebaker distributor, in April for salesmen in its main office and its North Side branch. First prize, $100, was won by B. B. Dew of the main office; second, $75, by J. E. Carrell, also of the main office, and third prize, $50 by C. C. Boyd of the North Side branch. Dew turned in $17,855 in net cash business during the month. The contest stimulated business greatly, and it was only in the last few hours of the contest that it was determined which of 7 or 8 men were to be winners. The prizes were awarded at a dinner at the Missouri Athletic Association at which speeches were made by Edward Weber, president of the Weber Co.; J. M. Falkner, sales manager; Henry Weber, vice president; Robert Weber, treasurer; Barrett Weber; Homer Weber and Carl Fairbanks.

ANNUAL MEETING TUESDAY.

The Automotive Accessory Association will hold its annual meeting at the Claridge Hotel on Tuesday, following a dinner at 6:30 p. m. The Nominating Committee has selected candidates as follows: For president, Dan F. Hyland, Stewart-Warner Products Co.; for vice president, W. G. Jenkin, Jenkin-Guerin Oil Co., and O. C. Schelp, the Frampton Co.; for secretary and treasurer, Robert E. Lee; for directors, vote for four, Stuart Campbell, Campbell Iron Co.; James K. Courim, Black & Decker Manufacturing Co.; H. H. Fleer, Fleer-Betty Auto Accessories Co.; G. C. Giese, Autoquip Corporation; E. A. Kansteiner, Sligo Iron Store Co.; K. T. Muldoon, Alemite Lubricator Co.; Frank Quan, Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co., and C. D. Wagener, Beck & Corbitt Iron Co.

DEALERS HOLD SESSION.

The St. Louis Chevrolet dealers met May 12 at the City Club. After dinner Harold MacCarthy of the MacCarthy-Pardue Motor Co. presided. Dr. James Harding Smith, pastor of the University Presbyterian Church, Skinker and Delmar boulevard, spoke on "Clean Business Methods and Relationship of Dealer to the Public." Enthusiasm was shown by the dealers over the increased popularity of the Chevrolet in St. Louis and the way the new "K" model is being accepted by the public. H. J. Klingler, sales manager; O. E. Nonn, assistant sales manager, and C. G. Slawson, St. Louis city representative, attended the meeting. Klingler addressed the dealers on Chevrolet policies and the program for the coming year. A guest was Felix Doran Jr., sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co. zone office at New Orleans.

1903 CAR IS ON TOUR.

Near Miami, Fla., recently, C. P. McLain was arrested for driving his car 40 miles an hour. Ordinarily this would not be out of the ordinary. But the car, now making a tour of Florida, was the "Old Pacific," a one-cylinder Packard, in which E. T. Fetch made one of the first, if not the first, transcontinental tours of the United States. During the first seven days of the tour now being made more than 1500 miles were covered and an accurate record of the gasoline consumed disclosed that 17 miles had been obtained to each gallon of gasoline. The transcontinental trip of "Old Pacific" was made in 1903. E. T. Fetch, noted in the early days of the automobile as a road driver, who now lives at Jefferson, O., insists the trip was the first ever made with an automobile under its own power from coast to coast. The start was made at San Francisco June 18, 1903, and Fetch drove his travel-stained car into New York 53 days later. "Old Pacific" has a one-cylinder, nine-horsepower motor. It weighs, ready for the road, 3000 pounds. It cranks at the side and drives through a chain, slack in which is taken up by moving back the rear axle. When built, it had a governor which limited its speed to 20 miles an hour.

GETS FOREIGN BUSINESS.

Victor Motors of St. Louis reports its first order for trucks from Athens, Greece, and Columbia. Orders warrant the belief that the factory will be shipping 10 to 15 trucks monthly to New Zealand.

100,000 MILE CLUB.

Membership in the Chandler 100,000 Mile Club, composed of persons who have driven Chandler cars 100,000 miles or more, has increased to 187 in three years. Two members have done more than 300,000 miles each in Chandlers; one more than 250,000; seven more than 200,000, and 25 more than 150,000 miles. The club has members in 32 states.

DELIVERS MORE BUSES.

The Kardell Motor Car Co. drove a fleet of eight Reo buses through from the factory, the machines arriving here Thursday. There were six intercity palace-type buses for the Adele Place Realty Co., which now operates 14 Reo buses, a sedan bus for the Egyptian Transfer Co. of Marion, Ill., and another sedan bus for M. C. Foster of Troy, Mo.

NEARS 100,000TH CAR.

The Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. is informed that the Hudson-Essex plant will turn out its 100,000th car in 1925 before the end of Spring. Hudson officials say this will be the second year that Hudson-Essex has reached the 100,000 production mark first among six-cylinder car makers. Last year it made its 100,000th car for the year in midsummer.

MOVES TO LOCUST STREET.

The Cooper Tire and Battery Co., distributer of Cooper cord tires and batteries, has moved from 1828-30 Pine street to 3225 Locust boulevard. Several factory representatives were here for the opening of the new quarters yesterday. The local office is one of a number of factory branches all over this country. John Horning and George Huber are in charges. The change was necessitated by increased business.

TO SEE NEW CAR MAY 27.

It is reported that the first public showing of the new Ajax car, which is to be made by a subsidiary of Nash Motors, will be May 27 at Racine, Wis., where the Ajax factory is located. Racine has declared a public holiday on May 27.

APRIL SALES INCREASE.

Domestic retail deliveries of Ford cars and trucks increased 33,215 in April to a total of 187,144. Enrollments under the Ford weekly purchase plan averaged 1300 a day in April.

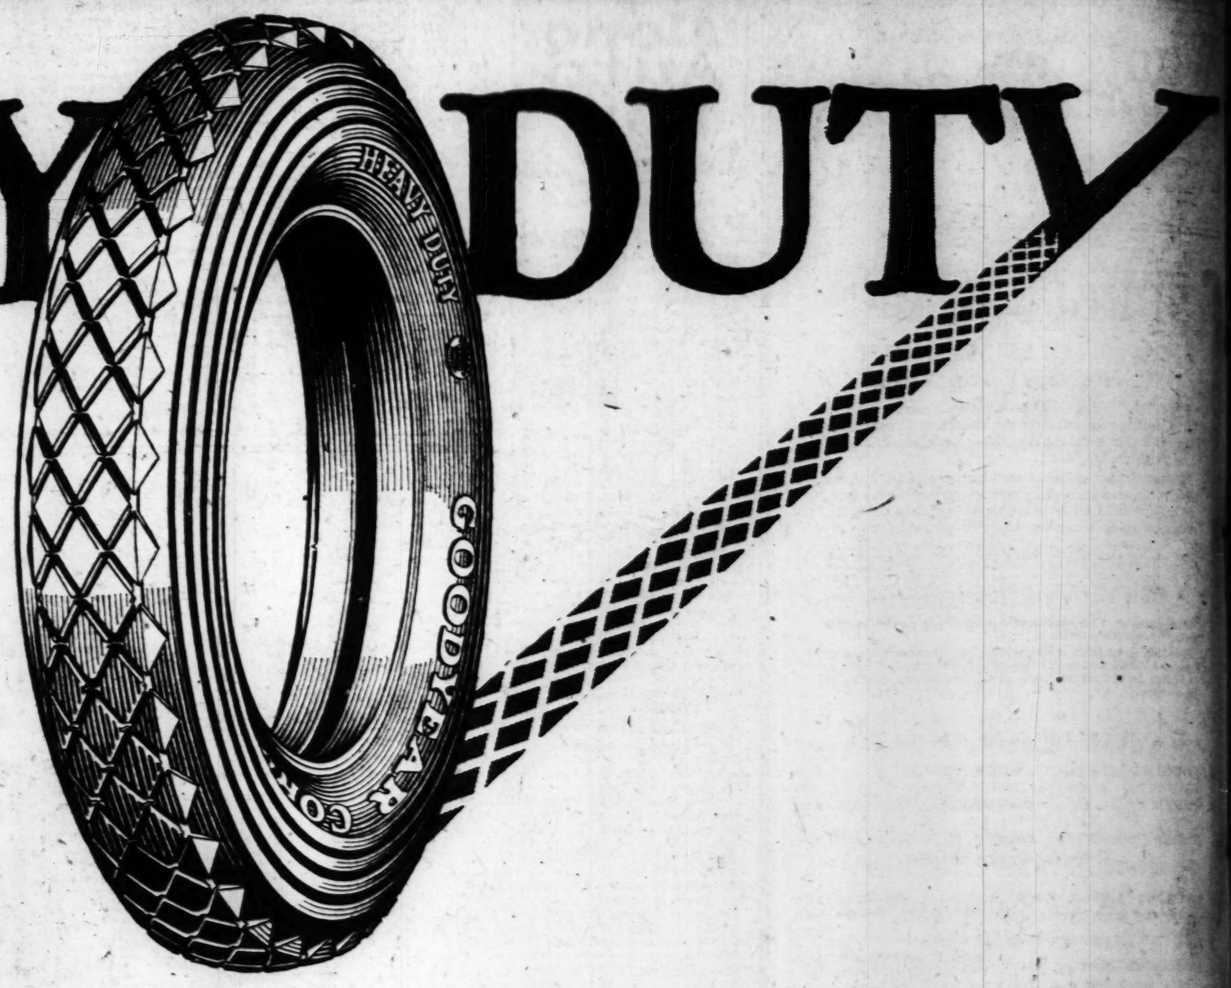
HEAVY DUTY



Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tires are available from Goodyear Dealers in the following sizes:

30x3½(Cl.)		34x4½(S.S.)
32x4 (S.S.)		30x5	"
33x4	"	33x5	"
32x4½	"	34x5	"
35x5(S.S.)

For those who desire balloon tires Goodyear makes a complete line, including the HEAVY DUTY type in certain sizes.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

—that's the whole story, Folks!

It describes exactly the usage for which the new Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tire, for passenger cars, buses and trucks, is designed

HOW ABOUT YOU—do you drive a sizeable car, and as if you really enjoyed it?

Is any part of your traveling off the asphalt and concrete, where the going is sometimes heavy and rough?

Would you like to have tire equipment under you that you can safely forget about, no matter how punishing the route?

Then you're one of the throttle-conscious fellows who should be riding the new Goodyear HEAVY DUTY Cord Tire.

It's no ordinary tire—being perhaps needlessly good for ordinary service.

Through and through, in carcass, sidewall and tread, it's built for day-in-and-day-out, take-it-as-it-comes, heavy-duty usage.

Its tough sinewy body is made of SUPER-TWIST, the celebrated new Goodyear cord fabric of superior elasticity and endurance.

It's an extra-heavy body, made that way to insure extreme protection against stone bruise, carcass breaking and the shocks of rough roads.

The tread on this new HEAVY DUTY Goodyear is a thick, deep-cut, full All-Weather, combining maximum traction with long slow wear.

Even the sturdy sidewalls are additionally reinforced against rut-wear by stout concentric rubber ribs.

Yes, it's a HEAVY DUTY tire throughout—costing a little more, naturally.

But if you drive a big or heavy car, or follow a hard route, it's the cheapest tire to buy in the end.

To repeat, how about you—can you use this extra spunk and stamina?

If you can, this new HEAVY DUTY Goodyear is the greatest tire buy you ever made.

And when it comes to truck tires—

Goodyear leadership is not limited to passenger car tires only; it includes truck tires as well.

For every hauling condition, for every requirement of service, road and load, there is a right Goodyear Truck Tire—in each case designed and built to be the best truck tire for the job.

Your Goodyear Truck Tire Dealer will advise you what type is the right equipment for you: whether the All-Weather Tread Heavy Duty Cushion, for heavy trucking; the All-Weather Tread Pneumatic Cushion, for lighter work; or the Heavy Duty Pneumatic Truck Tire, for all service where pneumatic equipment is practical and desirable.

Good tires deserve good tubes—Goodyear Tubes

What's New in Cars

NEW SIX IS SHOWN HERE.

LOOKING very much like the Auburn 8-88 models, the new Auburn six has arrived in St. Louis and is being shown by the Mound City Automobile Co., local distributer. It is a car of much distinction and unusual power. Mechanical four-wheel brakes and balloon tires are standard, as are front bumpers and rear fender bumpers, extra tire and automatic windshield wiper. The emergency brake operates with a pull grip on the instrument board and all ignition and lighting levers are on the steering wheel. A very atractive brougham and an equally fine sedan, a dashing roadster and a touring model make up the line of new sixes, which are in two-tone finish. A trip last week over some of the hills and rough roads in this part of Missouri proved that the new six is a performer on the grades as well as a smooth and quiet runner on the straightaway.

NEW SEDAN MODEL.

A NEW Overland four standard two-door sedan, so built as to be especially fitted for motor camping trips, is the feature of a camping scene which has been elaborately staged at the Willy's Overland building, Twenty-third street and Locust boulevard. In this sedan, the front seats fold back to make the lower end of a car bed. The rear seat cushion is set on the floor immediately behind the folded front seats. The front seats cushion is laid on the rear seat. This arrangement provides a very comfortable, ample-sized bed for two persons. The sedan contrasts in the camping scene with a touring car and tent bed outfit, and the greater convenience of the sedan for camping is emphasized. The sedan has unusually wide doors, is upholstered in Bedford cloth and finished in a rich blue with deep beading, the color scheme resembling that of the all-steel four-door sedan. Side windows are unusually long, and with only one door post on each side the view is virtually unobstructed. Heavily built persons find this sedan very easy to get in and out of.

CHAMPION

WITHIN THE LAW.

SMITH was telling me about the trouble he experienced when on one of his recent trips. It seemed he had been fined for disobeying an ordinance in a city he had never driven through before. His interest in the matter of knowing how to keep within the law as it varies from one city to another was evident.

"What's a motorist to do?" he pleaded. "In one city he gets bawled out if he goes in front of the cop in turning, while in another he is 'called' for going around the cop. In some places he can make a right-hand turn, no matter which way the stop-go sign happens to be pointing; in others he can't. In some cities he is within the law if his car is eight feet from a fire hydrant, but if he left the car in this position in some other cities he would have a fine to pay. I just heard of a case where a driver was forced to make a technical violation of the local ordinance by turning to the left of a street car which had stopped to take on passengers. The streets were wet. His car was sliding. There was only one alternative for safety's sake. Now, as I understand it, the law is intended as a means of protecting citizens primarily, but here was a case wherein the motorist would have jeopardized the safety of a group of citizens, and perhaps injured them, had he elected to obey the law to the letter. He did the only reasonable thing under the circumstances, yet he was arrested. In some cities his action would have been approved. So how in the name of Sam Hill is a motorist to know what to do when one thing goes in one place and not in another?"

"That's a question bothering more motorists than one," I replied. "When you've had some trouble with a certain locality, and have been a victim of ignorance, dumb luck or unjust justice you naturally root for the idea of having all ordinances uniform. Under certain conditions this might be a good plan, but wouldn't it cripple the progress of regulating motor car traffic? If all the cities and towns operated under the same set of ordinances we would soon find that in many places many of the ordinances would be unnecessary.

"For instance, suppose there was a standard law requiring that no automobile shall be parked nearer than eight feet to a fire hydrant. I can show you that many places right here in this city where because of the position of hydrants there would be no danger in parking cars directly in front of them; but, on the other hand, there are an equal number of places where cars ought not to be allowed to stand even 20 feet away. It all depends upon circumstances, which, to my way of thinking, are better judged by those officials who are in touch with the situation.

"When each community has its own ordinances, there is created a sort of rivalry. Each city and town tries to outdo the other in the effectiveness of its traffic regulations. If you have trouble in a certain city and honestly believe you were unfairly treated, you ought to take it up with your automobile club and with the motor vehicle commissioner of your State. If enough pressure is brought to bear upon the unjust local officials, something can be done. Unfortunately, there are too many unnecessary ordinances on the books and too literal interpretation applied to those ordinances, which are intended to cover intentional violations, but nothing can be gained by urging that all ordinances be standard."

"Yes," Smith agreed, "but while we're waiting for the ideal state of affairs, it's pretty tough on the motorist who goes into a strange town and gets bawled out because he doesn't do the right thing according to the town's way of thinking."

"But why get bawled out?" I asked. "There is a way to obviate this sort of trouble, and it's very simple. If you aren't sure whether you can park your car eight, 10 or 12 feet from a hydrant, then park it 15 feet away. If you are in doubt as to whether a left turn is permitted at a certain crossing, then go on to the next corner, turn right, go around the square and you will not be likely to have trouble. It may take you longer, it may be a little inconvenient, but it pays in the end. It isn't very convenient being summoned to court."

"In other words," Smith summed up my suggestion, "you would leave a margin of safety in your driving. You don't take anything for granted."

"You'll find that's the easiest way to get along," I added. "The same rule applies to driving in general. Many a time it is possible to pass another car in time to avoid being hit by an approaching machine, but it's better to slow down and take your place in line rather than to give the engine gas and rely on speed. Sometimes the engine balks. It appears very necessary in this day and age to save time by taking chances, but you'll find a lot of motorists in the police courts who have changed their minds about it."

Next Week—SKIDDING.

HAS DOUBLE VALVE SPRINGS.

Double valve springs and roller lifters are used in the engine of the new Cleveland standard six, as well as in the motor of the larger Cleveland. The former does away with periodic vibration of springs. The latter eliminates camshaft wear.

STORIES ABOUT OLD CARS STILL IN SERVICE ARE WANTED BY POST-DISPATCH

OWNERS of really old automobiles that are still being driven are invited to write to the Automobile Editor of the Post-Dispatch. The make of car, number of miles that it has run, the use to which it is now being put, some of the feats it has performed, and the owner's reasons for continuing to use it, are among the facts that should be related.

NEW DOOR EQUIPMENT.

Stutz cars hereafter are to be fitted with vent-eaves, which are glass ventilating devices placed at the tops of car doors. They are of special value in stormy weather, when car windows are closed tightly.

PROGRESS UPON ILLINOIS HIGHWAYS NOS. 12 AND 15

The pavement on Illinois State Highway No. 15, which runs across the State from Belleville to Albion, connecting there with No. 1 to Mount Carmel and Indiana cities, the State from Belleville to Albion, and Fairfield. However, the five-mile dirt detour on this section of the highway is still in use, as the pavement has not cured sufficiently. It is announced that the detour will be abolished and the pavement opened on June 8.

Throwing this strip of pavement open to motorists will give pavement all the way from St. Louis on this route to Mount Carmel, except the two-mile cindered stretch in the bottoms just west of Okawville. This cindered road gives no trouble.

We have obtained the

KISSEL

Franchise for St. Louis

—and here are the reasons why

YOU are cordially invited to attend our Formal Opening the week of
May the 24th, 1925

We have taken on the Kissel line only after a very thorough and painstaking investigation of the merits of a number of motor cars. We have long felt that in this city and this county there was a very positive demand for an automobile selling at a price that would be within reach of those who desired a medium priced car, and which had all the custom-built qualities of the higher priced cars.

We desired a car which we could recommend whole-heartedly and unreservedly to our best customers. We desired a car that we would be proud to drive ourselves. Furthermore, we desired a car that had a fine reputation for quality and performance and a car that had the manufacturing facilities and finances behind it that would assure it of permanent success.

Why We Became Interested in Kissel

Our quest led us to be interested in many cars. We investigated them all thoroughly. Then we became interested in Kissel. Here was just the car for which we had been looking. Here was a car costly in design, beautiful and distinctive in appearance.

It had a record of nineteen successful years behind it.

It was a car in the high quality class, but not in a high price class. The Kissel Eight was by far the best eight we have ever encountered. The Kissel Six had everything—power, speed, getaway.

Our long experience in the automobile business had brought us in contact with many motor cars, but the Kissel seemed to outperform anything we had ever known before. We were sold on it from the very outset, but to satisfy ourselves on every point, we investigated further.

The Factory

We found that at the Kissel factories in Hartford, custom-building was really a fact and a practice. We found Kissel to be distinctly a product of master craftsmen—and while it was produced on a quantity basis, each car was built as though it were for a particular customer's order.

We saw how body fashions were designed by Kissel to create the individuality of advanced styles.

Latest Advanced Engineered Motor

We saw how Kissel builds complete the Latest Advanced Engineered Six and Eight-cylinder Motors—truly marvelous power plants that will drive a standard car at from 60 to 75 miles per hour without any noticeable vibration and stand up almost indefinitely without the usual need of taking up bearings or necessitating other service work.

We saw how Kissel custom-builds their own chassis so that rattles and squeaks will not develop.

We saw how Kissel handbuilds completely the solid bodies of individual design and substantial construction.

We saw how Kissel attains perfect roadability so that every car is as easy to drive and handle at 75 as it is at 20 miles an hour.

We saw how Kissel inspection standards and tests insure the use of only the highest grade materials necessary for sterling quality.

Hydraulic 4-Wheel Brakes

We saw how Kissel provides safety for owners by equipping the chassis with hydraulic four-wheel brakes. These brakes are the Lockheed type and, because they are automatically equalized, they exert an even pressure on all four brake drums simultaneously without jarring or skidding.

In short, we found that Kissel actually manufactures about 95% of his cars under one roof where uniformly high standards of workmanship are guaranteed.

Furthermore, we found that the great popularity of the new Kissels had created such a nation-wide demand for these great cars that Kissel was running night and day at almost capacity production.

In fact, Kissels are now being produced to that quantity which permits prices hitherto thought impossibly low for a car so carefully built.

Well Financed Organization

Kissel, with a splendid financial standing, is now preparing to make even greater forward strides in the way of increased production. The whole Kissel proposition was a complete revelation to us, for we found just the car we wanted and found that it was built just as we would design it for the critical and experienced motorists of our community—the car we could personally recommend.

ROAD PATROLMEN TO REPORT CARS WITHOUT 1925 LICENSES

OLD ARMY KITCHENS NOW COOK ASPHALT FOR ROADS

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, TEX., May 23.—More than 150 army kitchen trailers, which cooked "chow" for U. S. soldiers in the World War, are now cooking asphalt for the improved highways of Texas. The kitchens were part of a large amount of war material turned over to the State by the Federal Government for use in building and maintaining roads. The trailers have been remodeled at a cost of $50 each, and are now valued at $300 each.

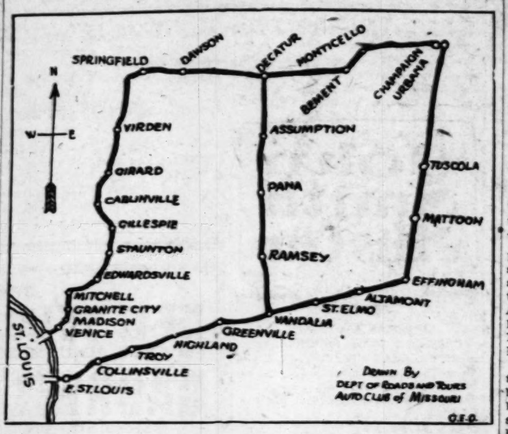
Hard-Surfaced Roads Tour For Memorial Day Weekend



A WEEK-END tour on hard-surfaced roads in Illinois, especially good for over Memorial day, is shown on the accompanying map drawn by George Drummond, manager of the Touring Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri. It has not the scenic beauty of trips in Missouri, but is one that may be enjoyed no matter what the weather. Also, it offers good hotels and may be broken up, cut short or extended as one pleases.

The shorter trip runs from St. Louis over the McKinley Bridge (Salisbury and Ninth street), then on brick pavement to Mitchell and to the right on State Highway No. 4 through Edwardsville, Staunton, Carlinville and Chatham to Springfield (108 miles from St. Louis). At Springfield, is the State Capitol and administrative buildings, the only home Lincoln ever owned, at Bates and Eighth streets, and the old capitol, now used as the County Courthouse. From Springfield, the tour continues east over Highway No. 10 through Dawson and Lanesville to Decatur (about 160 miles from St. Louis). From Decatur, one can turn south on Highway No. 2 through Macon, Pana and Ramsey to Vandalia (about 235 miles from St. Louis), and return home over Highway No. 11 through Greenville, Highland, Troy and Collinsville. The total distance is around 310 miles.

One can stretch the trip by continuing east from Decatur on Highway No. 10 through Cerro Gordo, Bement, Monticello and Seymour to Champaign (230 miles from St. Louis). From Champaign, one can drop south on No. 25 through Pesotum, Tuscola, Matteon and Sigel to Effingham (about 315 miles from St. Louis), and then go home over Highway No. 11 through Altamont, Vandalia, Greenville, Highland, Troy and Collinsville. The distance on this extended tour is around 420 miles.

CAR DRIVEN AROUND WORLD BY MORE THAN 350 DRIVERS

Standard Six Buick Has Completed Worst Parts of Long Journey.

Word has just come to the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., Buick distributer, of a Buick car which departed unheralded from New York City last December to be driven from one Buick dealer to another in a trip around the world. The car, a standard six touring model, is strictly "on its own," being unaccompanied by mechanics or special drivers. When it returns to New York city, the machine will have been handled by approximately 350 different drivers.

The last difficult leg of the trip has been completed, a long run over the bad roads across Australia. The car is en route to New Zealand and Honolulu, whence it will be shipped to San Francisco and driven across the United States through Detroit and Flint to New York.

The trip around the world was planned to demonstrate that a Buick will travel to the remote corners of the earth and on such a journey is always safeguarded by service facilities. The car has made its trip thus far without faltering.

After being boxed and sent to New York city it was shipped to Liverpool where its land journey started on Dec. 21, 1924. From London it was shipped to Amsterdam. With frequent changes of drivers, it passed south through Europe, visiting Brussels and Paris and finally reaching the Mediterranean at Marseilles, France.

Jan. 20 it was placed on a steamer bound for Port Said, Egypt, whence it was driven south to Cairo. Then the route swung "east of Suez" where the real test began. Through Palestine and the Biblical country the car proceeded to Beirut. Feb. 5, it left there for Damascus and Bagdad. The Syrian desert was crossed without difficulty. After spending the night at Damascus, the 540-mile run to Bagdad was made at an average speed of 35 miles an hour.

The Mesopotamian distributers took the Buick at Bagdad and drove it to Basra on the Persian Gulf, whence it was sent to Bombay, India. From there it was driven over trail-roads across India to Agra and finally Calcutta.

It then went to Ceylon, where the Buick distributers drove it for three days before sending it to Perth on the southwest coast of Australia, where it arrived April 1. The desert waste of Southern Australia between Perth and Adelaide was regarded as the most difficult part of the trip. The distance is something more than halfway across the United States. This long stretch of bad going was made successfully, as was the shorter journey from Adelaide to Melbourne, to Albury and then to Sydney, then shipped to New Zealand.

The route to be followed east from San Francisco has not been announced.

The Buick factory last year sent a demonstration party around the country, building a Buick car in each of the factory branch and distributers' cities from the parts stock at each of these points.

BRITISH RECORD FOR FORD.

The 25,000 mark was reached in Ford car production in England April 17. This is a production record for the automobile industry in England. All Ford cars made in England are built of approximately 90 per cent British materials and British labor only is employed.

LOSS OF WATER ON HILL.

After a car engine has heated on a hill and then cooled, the motometer should show a lower reading than before, due to the fact that water has syphoned out through the overflow.

STOPPING FENDER RUST.

Most holes in fenders start from the underside, where rust goes its merry way undetected. Whenever there is an opportunity, clean the under side of each fender and paint it with black enamel.

AMATEUR RECEIVER ADAPTED TO BROADCAST RECEPTION

A Regenerative Hook-Up That Employs Two Variable Condensers and a Fixed Plate Coil.

The tickler or plate coil used in the ordinary regenerative receiver is quite often a source of trouble. Either the pigtail connections become loose or break, or the mechanical parts that support the rotary coil become corroded and do not work smoothly. This can be avoided by the construction of a regenerative receiver that uses two variable condensers for the controls instead of one condenser and a variable plate coil.

This receiver is very similar to the one described last Sunday that will be used by John L. Reinartz when he goes North with the MacMillan Arctic expedition this winter. The circuit is one that has been devised by amateurs for short work, but can be used just as efficiently for the reception of broadcasting stations. A few modifications are necessary, as the receiver used for the latter purpose must cover a greater range of wave lengths than those popular with the amateurs. The inductances and condensers are larger than those used in the amateur set.

The accompanying diagram shows the circuit diagram of the receiver. The inductances L-1, L-2 and L-3 are the primary, secondary and plate coils. All three of these are wound on a single cardboard tube from 3 to 3½ inches in diameter. A tube made of any good insulating material can be used instead of cardboard, though this would improve the set only in looks. The tube should not be painted or the wire coated with any solution. It must be long enough to hold the three windings.

L-1, the primary, consists of 15 turns of No. 20 double cotton-covered wire. This size is merely a suggestion. Any size between 18 and 26 will do very well. Take two taps off of the primary coil, one at the fifth turn and one at the tenth. This winding is placed on one end of the tube. The inside end of the coil is connected to the ground. The antenna is first attached to one of the other three connections and then to the remaining two in turn and fastened permanently to the tap that gives the best signal strength.

A space of one-fourth inch is left between the last turn of the primary and the first turn of the secondary. The secondary coil, L-2, is made of 50 turns of double cotton-covered wire similar in size to that used on the primary. The end of the secondary next to the primary connected to the grid condenser and leak. The other end goes to the positive terminal of the A battery. A .0005 mfd. variable condenser, C-1, is then shunted across the coil.

The plate coil, L-3, contains 25 or 30 turns of wire similar in size to that used on the other two windings. A space of about one-fourth inch is left between the last turn of the secondary and the first turn of the plate coil. The inside end of the plate coil is connected to the end of the secondary next to it. The outside end is attached to one terminal of the fixed back condenser, C-2, which has a capacity of .0005 mfd. This condenser and the plate coil control regeneration and therefore must have the proper values to cover the broadcasting range of wave lengths.

The number of turns of wire given for the plate coil are only approximate. Try 30 turns first and if the set will not oscillate over the entire range of the secondary condenser C-1 add a few more turns. If the set oscillates too easily and the settings of the feed back condenser are very nearly the same over the whole scale of the secondary condenser cut out several turns until the proper value is found.

The radio frequency choke coil X can be made by winding a tube one inch in diameter and 3 inches long full of No. 30, 32 or 34 cotton or silk covered wire. No by-pass condenser is needed across the primary of the transformer and the B battery as this choke coil keeps the radio frequency currents out of this portion of the plate circuit. This is another good feature of the receiver. If the by-pass condenser in the ordinary regenerative is too small it will not permit the radio frequency currents to pass around the phones and the B battery. If it is too large it tunes the primary of the transformer and causes distortion. The receiver just described eliminates the possibility of either of these defects.

The nice part about this set is that the two main controls are variable condensers. Anyone who has attempted to build and operate a regenerative set with a variable plate coil or tickler knows the trouble encountered in getting the rotor to revolve smoothly, and in keeping the connection wires from breaking. The two-condenser receiver is very easy to operate and holds up much better than other types. One stage of audio frequency amplification is shown in the drawing. The set can be built with two stages of audio amplification or with only one tube. The changes necessary to make either a one or three-tube set out of this circuit are very simple and can be figured from the drawing given here.

Of the 3,000,000 receiving sets in use in the United States, more than 2,000,000 are homemade.

A new radio station to be known as WHT, capable of using 5000 watts and to cost $200,000, is to be erected in Chicago.

A bill has been introduced in the New Zealand Senate providing for the licensing of radio dealers. The fees thus obtained would be applied toward the paying of broadcasting.

The United States—the first country to establish radio fog signals for the guidance of shipping—leads the world in this form of navigational aid. The lighthouse service now maintains 12 such stations.

According to concert managers, teachers and sellers of musical instruments in Germany, radio broadcasting is ruining their business. Since people now get their music at home, they are not inclined to go out for it or study it.

DISTANCE RECORD ON LOW POWER

American Amateur Picks English Station When Using Only 2.16 Watts.

Picking up 2LO, London broadcasting on about 2000 watts, primarily gives any fan a thrill of considerable confidence in himself and his receiving set. Consequently, most fans will accord due credit to Clance H. Jackson of Holliswater, Mass., who received test messages from C. L. Naylor, a British amateur living at Shrewsbury, operating with 240 volts, at 9 amperes, or a total power of only 2.16 watts.

Clance H. Jackson is the owner of amateur station 1PL, or in the new universal system, more U 1PL, U standing for United States.

On the evening of Feb. 2, while listening in on 96 meters, with a Reinartz two-tube receiver, which he heard Station G 5SI at Shrewsbury, England, calling an American second district station. Though the other American might not be able to hear it, Mr. Jackson switched on his own transmitting 250-watt tube set, calling G 5SI on 80 meters. In about a minute he was answered, and then these two amateurs kept up communication for an hour.

The code from G 5SI was easily readable, Mr. Jackson says, but clear cut, but very sharp. He succeeded in holding the British man who was transmitting with only 11 watts, while he reduced his power in stages down to 2.16 watts. Reception was without difficulty with his two 201-A tube receiver, Jackson says.

It is believed an excellent accomplishment in reception by Jackson, but almost phenomenal on the part of the transmitter, in England. Mr. Naylor reports that he worked U 1PL through considerable interference at his end from other stations then operating, and for that reason he did not try to go below what he roughly calls 2.2 watts in power. The exceptional part of the test, he believes, lies in the fact employed. As his regular aerial had been blown down, he was using a temporary single-wire antenna 70 feet in length. It reached from the lead-in, 7 feet above ground, to a mast 28 feet high, thence down to a counterpoise post. The height of the aerial at the far end was 10 feet and only 5 feet from the counterpoise. His counterpoise was composed of four 50-foot wires, spaced 4 feet apart and 6 feet high. Mr. Naylor used an inductively coupled Hartley circuit, employing a single Mullard valve as an oscillator. His emitted wave is pure and perfectly steady. He accords great credit to the owner of U 1PL for his reception with the reduced power.

Apparently Jackson is a good DX worker. He has also received the Swiss Station 9 AD, which operated with a plate voltage of only less than G 5SI employed in the test. Among his recent transoceanic correspondents are station owners in Australia, England, Belgium, France, Italy, Holland, Germany, Luxemburg, Denmark, Brazil, Costa Rica and New Zealand. He has a list of nearly 200 Pacific Coast stations. He has worked stations in Australia 52 times and England 8.

Jackson owns three short-wave receivers, covering 20, 40 and 80 meters, and expects to operate on 5 meters soon. He has also built a new transmitter covering 20 to 80 meters, the circuit for which he calls "The 1PL," after his station call.

RADIO NEW FIELD FOR LIGHT VOICE

Radio is creating a demand and recognition for an entirely new kind of musical ability, according to Gustave Frankel, in a recent address before the Beethoven Society of Chicago.

"The professional singer of the past was compelled to devote the larger and by far the more strenuous part of his or her training to the development of volume," Mr. Frankel said. "The mere physical exertion of producing enough sound with the human vocal equipment to fill such tremendous auditoriums as the Metropolitan Opera House and the Auditorium, in Chicago, requires a highly developed specialization of the throat and lungs that only a few people in a million were ever able to attain.

"In radiocasting, volume is of no importance at all. In fact, a professional singer or orator has to make a considerable effort to modulate the tones so as to avoid blasting the microphone. Some of the most popular singers on the radio today belong to that class of voices that have sweetness and purity, but no particular power.

"There are a great many artists trained in musical expression, who have voices of amazing sweetness but so little volume that they are complete failures in public recitals. To this class of singers, the radio offers a possible career, which the operatic and concert stage has denied.

"It is sad to think how many ambitious young women with fine, delicate and highly educated musical intelligence have been debarred from the realization of their hopes by the lack of leather lungs and a bull chest.

"Now the music schools of the country should recognize the practical value of such voices, and educate them for radiocasting without attempting the impossible task of fitting them for opera."

CLASS B STATIONS TO INCREASE POWER

Department of Commerce Issues Ruling to Help Radio Reception During Summer Months.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Class B stations located outside of cities will be permitted to use maximum power during the coming summer months without experimenting by increases in steps of 500 watts.

This announcement, just made by the Department of Commerce, is expected to make clear reception possible during the warm period in spite of the increase of static.

"In taking this action," says Judge Davis, Solicitor of the Department of Commerce, "we are endeavoring to satisfy the demand of broadcast listeners that the use of increased power be permitted in order to overcome the existing static conditions which are making reception difficult."

Since the Third National Radio Conference authorized Class B stations to increase their power comparatively little reliable data has been collected regarding the effects of it. A number of stations are now using 1500 and 2000 watts. Beyond the fact that the service range of the station is increased, little else is known.

In some instances it has been found that stations located inside cities could not use more than 1500 watts power because of interference. In almost all cases stations located outside of cities have not caused serious interference by increasing their power.

So far it is known that two stations—WLW and WSAI, both located outside of Cincinnati—will take advantage of the Commerce ruling and increase their power to 5000 watts. Wherever possible, other stations are expected to take similar action.

The Bureau of Standards has been measuring the strength of signals from the higher power and studying the effects of the increase in power. When the next radio conference meets in Washington considerable data probably will be available which may decide whether in the future fans may depend upon small power local stations or high power distant ones for their reception.

Dr. George K. Burgess, director of the bureau of Standards, believes that the question of best service to fans will probably be the deciding factor.

"We face on the one hand," says Dr. Burgess, "the fact that the nearby local stations are the most satisfactory from the standpoint of technical quality of reception and low cost of receiving apparatus, and on the other hand the fact that the higher the power used at a station the greater is the territory that can be served by a single station and the more economically practicable it becomes to interconnect stations for the simultaneous broadcasting of nationally important material.

"A number of considerations should guide thought upon the problem thus presented. Since the most satisfactory quality of reception is obtained when the incoming signal is relatively strong, the person interested primarily in radio broadcasting as an actual service, the delivery to him of agreeable entertainment and important news and instruction, is served best at the present time by the local stations.

"There is, in the other hand, a vast proportion of the people who derive their chief satisfaction from radio through the thrill of listening to broadcasting from great distances. The satisfying of this interest must and will continue, through the operation of many stations of about the power and location of present stations.

"It must be recognized, however, that all long-distance radio reception is now more of a pastime than a service, since long distance reception is necessarily subject to the interruptions and disturbances from atmospheric discharges and electrical interference.

"There is always a certain amount of random electrical disturbance in the atmosphere, and to insure radio reception of high quality not vitiated in part by these disturbances it is necessary that the received signal have a signal intensity above a certain minimum value. It is therefore not the power of the transmitting station nor the sensitivity of the receiving set which gives the real limit to the distance of reception, but rather the general level of intensity of atmospheric disturbances. All the vast engineering and amateur effort to make more sensitive sets can henceforth be considered as being spent for the benefit of radio listeners who desire to hear distant stations rather than for the listener who desires to secure reception of high quality."

Detroit Conference.

As a result of the conference held at Detroit last week between radio officials of the American and Canadian Governments, agreement was reached that in the future Canadian ship and land stations will transmit on 715 and 858 meters instead of on 600.

It is expected that this transfer will greatly reduce interference to fans who have been complaining of picking up a lot of Canadian harmonics in the broadcast band.

ULTRA SHORT WAVES ARE DISAPPOINTING

Recent Navy Tests Show 20-Meter Wave Is Not of Practical Use in Transmission.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Ultra short wave lengths, despite their great promise of development, have proved in recent tests entirely too temperamental and too unmanageable for immediate practical use in radio transmission.

That is the consensus of opinion among the radio engineers and scientists of the capital who have watched the experiments of the past few months on wave lengths of 20 meters and less.

The greatest blow to the high-frequency pioneers was the poor results in the 20-meter communication tests between the U. S. fleet in the Pacific and the Naval Research Laboratories at Bellevue. Faulty installation of the 20-meter wave-length transmitter is blamed for much of the trouble, but it is conceded that with the present limited knowledge of the problem it is impossible to control the higher frequencies with the same degree of accuracy as can be done with the lower. Reception of the low wave lengths in any reliable manner is another problem which must be solved before the short waves can take their place in the scheme of every-day radio.

A disappointment to the high-frequency pioneers was the decision to equip the ships and planes of the MacMillan expedition with high-wave transmitters in addition to the low-wave transmitters of John L. Reinartz, operator for the voyage. Faith that epoch-making experiments that may be carried out on the expedition with the higher frequencies, however, is being held in many quarters.

FANSTEEL Balkite Radio Power Units

Manufactured by FANSTEEL PRODUCTS CO., Inc. North Chicago, Illinois

The new McCullough A C tubes that work from the ordinary light circuit were tried out recently in the KSD laboratory. These tubes are the first of the alternating tubes to be placed on the market and therefore of particular interest. Five of the tubes were tried out first in a Kennedy five-tube receiver and then in a set built up of Bremmer Tully parts, using the popular nameless circuit, with a standard loud speaker.

In the Kennedy receiver we found that the A C tubes worked very well as radio-frequency amplifiers with 201-A tubes as detector and audio amplifiers. Practically no alternation-current hum was heard when using this arrangement. The volume of signals was just as good as when 201-A tubes were acting as radio-frequency amplifiers. However, due to the fact that the Kennedy receiver is a standard manufactured model, we did not care to change any of the connections in it. To test the new tube as a detector and audio-frequency amplifier we changed over to the Bremmer Tully nameless set.

To adapt the A C tubes to an ordinary receiver a few slight changes are necessary. The negative terminals of all the tube sockets must be connected together and the positive terminals left open. The proper C battery must then be placed in the audio-amplifier circuit. This last feature is particularly important because of the fact that it is not possible to obtain a grid bias from the filament of the tube.

With all A C tubes in the nameless set and the necessary step-down transformer to light the filaments of the tubes, a number of the midwestern stations were brought in with good clarity and volume for this time of the year. We found a slight A C hum present when the set was not tuned to any station, and the radio-frequency circuits were not in resonance, but just as soon as the set was tuned to a particular wave length the hum disappeared entirely.

The results of our test with these new tubes show that they are very good radio-frequency amplifiers, fair detectors, and give more volume than ordinary storage battery tubes when used as audio amplifiers with the proper C battery. The tone quality of the stations heard was exceptionally good.

CHANGING TUBES.

It is always advisable to try switching the tubes in any radio set in order to get the best results. The reason for this is that it is almost impossible to find two tubes in the average run which are alike. Some tubes are good amplifiers in the radio part of the circuit, others work the best as audio amplifiers, and then it is possible that out of five tubes only one is an equally good detector and amplifier. The only way to find in what part of the circuit the tubes work best is by interchanging them until the best results are obtained. This rule holds good for any type of tube, whether dry cell or storage battery operated.

LIGHTNING ARRESTERS.

About this time of the year every one is thinking of protective devices for the radio installation. Many use lightning arresters and some let the wire flap outside the window. However, in order to comply with the law, every radio set should be equipped with an approved lightning arrester. As a rule, after a person secures some sort of a lightning arrester, invariably the arrester is wired to the ground with the same size wire as the antenna. Under all conditions the wire leading from the lightning arrester to the ground should be a very heavy wire, preferably No. 8 or 10 gauge. Do not use the same wire as the antenna.

"OLD MAN" STATIC DOWNED AT LAST

Statichoke Has Startled the Radio World—Insures Clear, Long Distance Summer Reception.

St. Louis, Mo. (Special)—The long-promised invention which insures clear, long distance, "summer radio" without the agony of static, has just been announced here. Radio experts and fans who have tested the new invention pronounce it marvelous.

In addition to reducing static to a minimum, the Statichoke, as this new imported invention is known, increases clarity of distant reception, sharpens the selectivity of tuning in, eliminates that harshness of the tubes so noticeable on local loud speaker reception and acts as a safety lightning arrester.

The Statichoke somewhat resembles a small transformer, and by a system of coils it allows only the correct current value to enter the set, choking out all other high current variation from the aerial, which is passed off through a secondary ground connection.

Radio fans in St. Louis may now obtain this indispensable new unit to any set from Wellston Radio Corp. and other local radio dealers, for only $2.50. If more convenient, write direct to the distributors, Wellston Radio Corporation, 1479 Rodiamont Av., St. Louis, Mo., and the Statichoke will be sent you by insured mail.

When the Auto Radiates

On the short waves there is a source of interference that is much more deadly than static—automobiles. All cars produce disturbances in radio receivers to some extent, the interference becoming more pronounced as the wave-length is decreased below 40 meters. The reason for the increase of QRM from machines as the wave length is lowered is probably because of greater transmission efficiency at the short waves, and the fact that the radiation is greater at approximately the natural wave length of the car, considering the car as an antenna with a fundamental wave below 30 meters.

All machines of the same make seem to work about on the same wave length, and with practice one can tell what make of car is causing interference in his set. Fords may be distinguished from other cars very easily, since the majority of the other makes use a distributor which gives a single spark each time the engine fires, while the vibrators on the Ford coils produce an easily recognizable—almost musical—tone. This type of interference may be one of the main deterring influences in the adoption of the short and ultra short waves. With the daily increasing application of 20 and 40 meter waves to commercial work it becomes more important that some remedy be found for it. Broadcast listeners who have difficulty in separating and eleminating several local stations to tune in California can readily appreciate the amount of interference that thousands of local stations could produce. And cars are nothing else but small spark stations. True, the average range of an ordinary flivver is somewhat less than one-half mile, but at distances of 200 yards or less, the interefference produced is often severe enough that reception of fairly distant stations is greatly marred, if not actually impossible.

Larger cars, like the Hudson, Packard, Pierce-Arrow, etc., due to their larger body, have more capacity to ground, and hence begin to radiate signals at longer wave lengths than a Ford or Chevrolet. Since the noise produced by the larger cars is a series of sharp clicks, contrasted to the mosquito-like buzzing of the flivver, they do not interfere with reception to the same extent as Fords.

Some interesting speculations now offer themselves to experimenters. Even though the "antenna" of the car is small, inefficient and in fact almost entirely inclosed by the shielding of the metal body, signals may be heard up to one-half mile. When will some enterprising manufacturer come forward with a machine equipped with a key that will enable the driver to send out signals by merely turning off and on the ignition? Even at the present stage of the radio game, it is possible to construct a small set which would operate over distances up to 50 miles, using the car storage battery for power. However, the ignition of the car absolutely prohibits operation while in motion. This condition has been overcome in the operation of the radio-equipped mail planes by shielding thoroughly the entire electric system. Think of sitting calmly by the side of the road, calling for a service car and making excuses to your host for the delay, all with the same ease of dispatch that you call your friends by telephone now. Static, that bugbear of broadcast listeners, while not nonexistent on the shorter waves, is much less heavy, signals are louder and fading much less prominent.

As to station channels, few people realize the almost boundless expanse below 20 meters. As the wave length grows shorter the number of stations permissible in a given number of meters grows enormously. For instance, the range between 10 and 20 meters represents 15 times the "room" that is covered by the band of 200 to 600 meters. At five meters, a band of one meter wide will contain, without interference, 1000 stations.

The assistance to the police would be invaluable. The solitary motorist, accosted by hijackers on a lonely road, could with the tap of a switch by his foot send out an SOS call, which could in a few moments be located by a directional receiving set, and the nearest radio-equipped motor cycle cop dispatched to the scene.

Let Grid Leak Alone!

It is always best to make adjustments on the leak when listening to the low waves. Once the correct value of the leak has been found, it should not be changed again for that special tube. By constantly changing the resistance of the leak reception will be spoiled.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The so-called gang socket is coming into its own in this day of multitude sets. Space is a premium in the larger sets and short leads are a vital necessity. The new three gang socket, designed by Maj. Herbert H. Frost, has three sockets mounted on soft, spongy rubber rings, assembled side by side on a bakelite shelf. Flexible leads connect the binding posts on the shelf to the contacts in the socket so that no mechanical vibrations will be communicated to the tubes.

The shelf can be mounted on the front panel so as to bring the binding posts on a level with transformer binding posts. The gang socket is supplied with two small metal legs, so that it can be mounted directly on the baseboard if desired. If the socket is mounted on the baseboard it stands up considerably higher than the ordinary type of socket and thus eliminates the need of raising it on blocks of wood to bring it on a level with other apparatus.

A very commendable attempt to make the popular five-tube radio frequency set more flexible to a wider band of frequencies is being made by the Washburn Burner Corporation, Kokomo, Ind., in its new type of coil. The coils are of the basket weave type and are mounted on bases that fit into the standard tube socket. There are three coils to a kit and three kits to a set. The range of the kits in meters is 40 to 180, 100 to 300 and 225 to 555.

The "Birdies" in the Set.

Whistles in a receiving set may be due to three distinct causes: (1) The radio frequency currents generated in the set may combine with the radio-frequency currents set up in the receiving circuit by the carrier wave from a broadcasting station; (2) The set may pick up the whistle from the antenna of some other receiving set; (3) The set may have radio-frequency currents set up in it by the carrier waves from two broadcasting stations, and these currents will produce a resultant whistling sound.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. Can you tell me why it is that I am able to pick up WCAE at Pittsburg on my crystal set? T. J. C.

A. You either have an exceptionally good crystal set or there is a radiating receiver in your vicinity. Many crystal sets are capable of picking up distant stations and with the increasing of the power of many of the class B stations such experiences will be more frequent. It is quite possible, however, that a strong radiating receiver in your vicinity picked up signals from WCAE and rebroadcast them. Your receiver being very close to the radiating receiver picked up the signals sent out by this receiver.

Q. 1. On what wave lengths do the A, B and C stations broadcast? 2. What is meant by wave length and kilocycles? R. C. J. H.

A. 1. The C classification of broadcasting stations has been eliminated. The class A stations have recently been permitted to increase their power so the only remaining differences between the A and B stations are those of wave length and standards. The A stations generally operate on wave lengths below 280 meters and the B stations between 280 and 545. 2. All vibratory wave forms have three functions, namely, the speed at which they travel, the frequency of the vibrations and the length of each wave. Think of the ripples produced in water when a stone is dropped on the surface. The distance between the crest of one wave and that of the succeeding wave is the wave length. The number of ripples that take place per second is the frequency and the number of feet traveled per second by one particular wave is the speed. The same is true of radio waves except that the speed, frequency and wave length of these waves have different values than the water waves.

Q. May 199 or 299 tubes and sockets be substituted in place of the 201-A or 301-A tubes and sockets in any circuit? W. D. W.

A. No. 199 or 299 tubes cannot always be used in place of other tubes. These tubes are especially good for regenerative receivers where they are used as detectors and audio amplifiers. They also work very well as radio-frequency amplifiers in straight radio-frequency amplification circuits. However, they are not so good when used in neutrodyne receivers, due to the fact that the capacities of the tubes are difficult to neutralize. The tubes alone need be considered in making such a change.

Q. How is a five-tube neutrodyne set neutralized to prevent the tubes from oscillating? W. W. C.

A. To neutralize the capacities of the radio-frequency amplifier tubes in a neutrodyne, first place a piece of paper or cardboard under one of the filament contacts at the base of the first tube. Then vary the neutralizing condenser of the second tube, with the remainder of the set operating under normal conditions, until the second tube will not oscillate over the entire range of the receiver. When this tube has been neutralized take the cardboard or paper from under the filament contact of the first tube and light its filament in the usual way. Then adjust the neutralizing capacity of this tube until it will not oscillate over the range of the first variable tuning condenser. If you have difficulty in neutralizing the tubes in this way, the chances are that your coils are too close together, or they are not sloped at the proper angle. Also, if the grid connections to the first two tubes are too close to other parts of the circuit, it would be almost impossible to prevent a feed back.

Q. After an A battery has been in use a year, should it be replaced? B. H.

A. You have not stated what kind of a battery you mean. A storage battery should last you many years if taken care of properly. A dry cell need not be replaced as long as it is delivering enough current to light the tube or tubes. This can be judged by the volume of signals and the sensitiveness of the set.

NAVY REDUCES INTERFERENCE

The Navy Department, in its efforts to reduce interference to broadcast reception, gave orders that during the visit of the fleet to San Francisco the use of radio on the broadcast frequencies be repressed. As a result of this order, this letter has been received by the Department of Commerce from the District Communications Superintendent at San Francisco:

"It is very gratifying to be able to say that to date there has not been a single written word filed with this office complaining of interference due to the operation of the radio equipment of various vessels of the fleet during its stay in this harbor."

THELMA VELSGOR, FROM NORWAY, FIGHTS HER WAY TO FORTUNE

Once Poor Immigrant Girl Who Had Faith in Her Star Is Now Miss Thelma Wells, Oil Magnate

She Came to Oklahoma Out of Work and Broke and After Several Starts and Stops Became a Broker of Oil Leases —Now With Wealth in Her Grasp She Plans to Use it to Help Those in Need—Declares That Her Fondest Hope Is to Be a "Mother" to Friendless Children.

VERNON, Tex., May 23.

It was a troubled day for Thelma Christoferson Velsgor, from Norway and North Dakota, the day she landed in Oklahoma to make her fortune. Bartlesville was her goal and she didn't have quite money enough to make it. All day on the train she worried about it. At last she spoke to the conductor. If he would carry her the rest of the way to Bartlesville on trust she would pay him soon.

Her blue eyes were frank and fearless, though she was troubled. The conductor, a kind man, decided to trust her, So Thelma Christoferson Velsgor landed in Bartlesville, at the age of 14—broke, and in debt for the last twelve miles of her journey.

Another day—broke again—she walked the streets of Tulsa, hungry, fainted and they took her away to the hospital, where doctors said she was suffering from starvation.

In Northern Texas now, when she passes in her Cadillac, the people say: "There goes Miss Thelma Wells." The other day she sold her oil wells. She is now 27 years old and expects to do great things.

Between the day she landed at Bartlesville and the day that she sold her oil wells is the story of a girl who willed to win and won. Thelma Velsgor was 9 when her father, homesteader on the North Dakota plain, brought his family from Norway, his wife and the three boys, older than Thelma, and the baby sister—and Thelma. They made their home in the new land, out beyond Devils Lake, and Velsgor farmed on week days and preached Methodist gospel to his neighbors on Sundays, for he was a pious man and an expounder of the Scriptures.

Through the years the family grew until children numbered nine. Their mother was an invalid now, and Thelma, oldest of the girls, took her place. She did not demur, for it was her nature to be maternal. Never more so than now, when she has fought her way to fortune, for her great plan is to somehow be a mother to the motherless everywhere.

But maybe there was a way in which she could be a better little mother to her own. They were needy, the Velsgors. She wanted to supply their needs. She felt that somewhere beyond the horizon that rimmed the Dakota plain there was something for her to do, something that would enable her to do more for her father and mother and the little Velsgors than she could do at home.

She Leaves Home

She turned it over in her mind until it took form of purpose. She told her mother about it and met with tearful protest. And she cried, too. "Oh, how I cried," she says now, in remembrance of the bitterness of the struggle. But there was an inner compulsion about it. She was that way. She is that way now. Inner compulsions have ruled her life. She believes there is purpose in them. Through obedience to them she has won, she will tell you.

So it was sorrowfully settled that she was to go away. Where? She had a young friend who knew somebody who had lived in Bartlesville, Ok., and the tales about Bartlesville that her young friend told were wonderful. To Bartlesville, she came to believe, must be the place. So it was to Bartlesville she would go.

Tearful farewells then, vast misgivings on the part of the parents, devastation for the little brothers and sisters who were losing their little mother, and sorrow for Thelma. But back of the sorrow were the confidence and determination that have carried her through.

And why not confidence? For did she not have safely sewed into her jacket most of the fortune of $50 that she had earned by selling magazines to the North Dakota neighbors? With a fortune of $50 to start with, and confidence and determination, she could do anything!

But Bartlesville was farther than she reckoned and there were expenses on the journey, though she traveled in day coaches and shunned dining cars. At Kansas City she asked for a ticket to Bartlesville. The man at the window told her how much. She counted her money. It was not quite enough. How far would it take her? To Ochelata, the man said. All right, then, a ticket to Ochelata.

And all the way to Ochelata, without a penny, without food, she worried. It was 12 miles from Ochelata to Bartlesville the man had told her. In North Dakota she would have walked 12 miles and would have accounted it as scarcely worth mentioning. But it was hot in Oklahoma and she was all too warmly clad for such a climate and she was growing faint from hunger and she doubted whether she could walk the 12 miles, carrying her bundle of scant belongings.

Miss Wells is not afraid to get her face dirty.

The conductor, then, was her only hope. She studied him as the wheels clicked the miles. He was businesslike and brusque and his few words were close-clipped, but it seemed to her that there was a glint of kindness in his eyes.

So at last she spoke to him and told him all about it. It was thus and so. She was on her way to Bartlesville to get a yob and go to school and her money was gone and her ticket, as he knew, was only to Ochelata. Would he be so kind as to trust her for the 11 miles.

He was severe at first. It was not a new story to him. But her blue eyes, though she was troubled so, were frank and fearless. She did not know the artifice of tears and if she had known it she would have scorned to use it.

It was very irregular, he told her, eyeing her judicially, but she was an honest-looking kid and he'd take a chance on her. And she said, "Oh, thank you, Mister," and promised to pay him with the first money that she earned.

She Gets a Job

And that was how Thelma came to Bartlesville. Homesick and forlorn, hungry and broke, sweltering in her homespun, edged with bits of fur, and her fur cap and her yellow pigtails down her back. She laughs now at the recollection. No wonder the bad boys thought a circus had come to town and followed her and, when she turned and jabbered something at them in her quaint Norwegian speech, hooted at her.

Partly to escape from them, partly because the door was open, she bolted into Schneider's tailor shop. The tailor was polite and he tried not to laugh, and what could he do for the young lady today?

She told him how it was. She had come to Bartlesville to work and go to school. She didn't know how, but she reckoned there would be a way. For the time being, though, she was, what you call it, broke, and she wanted to work for something to eat. Was there anything she could do for him?

The tailor was kind. He said "yes" and "so," as she told her little story, unashamed, for there was nothing to be ashamed of. But it was plain to him that this child needed care, the care of a woman and a mother. He said "yes" and "so" again and then, abruptly: "You come along with me to my wife, heh, what say?" And Thelma said that would be just fine.

Shelter and food and a chance to pay for them by helping the tailor's wife take care of the tailor's children. Thelma Christoferson Velsgor was getting on. Next morning, after the breakfast things were cleared, she was off looking for a job. There was a doctor who wanted his bills collected. She told him she was just the collector he had been looking for. Doctor bills are hard to collect. She collected them and on the third day, when the train came in, she was at the station to pay the conductor. "Here's your money, Mister," she said, and he accepted it, gravely, all in the day's business. No, he wasn't surprised. It happened that way sometimes.

Broke Again

And how was she getting on? Yust fine, she said, and the transaction was closed.

She worked at this and that, at anything, at many things. Mostly at things she knew nothing about. The less she knew about a job the better she liked it. For then she made mistakes and by making mistakes she learned. It was the way that she learned most of what she knew. It was hard on her employers but that couldn't be helped. She sent her earnings home. She worked for her board. She went to night school and studied out of borrowed books. People said Velsgor was such a funny name, and they couldn't remember it, so she changed it to Wells.

She answered all the advertisements, trying to get more jobs and better jobs. Once it was a bookkeeper that was wanted. Could she keep books? Oh, yes. So they hired her. It took them about half a day to find out that she couldn't keep books. But she refused to be fired and worked so hard that they kept her.

Too many jobs were her undoing. She worked and studied until she broke down and they sent her to a hospital. Recovered, and a doctor bill to pay and nothing to pay it with, she went to Tulsa, for in Tulsa, she had heard, were greater opportunities for a girl. She landed there bareheaded and broke.

Down the street a little old woman sat on the porch of a little yellow house, reading. The place looked homelike and the woman looked motherly, and the child was homesick and needed a mother. She went in. The little woman looked up. The eyes that scanned her through old-fashioned spectacles were

"You look nice," said Thelma, "I want to stay with you."

"But, child," said the woman, "I can't take you in. I don't let rooms to girls. I have to be particular."

"Yes, I know," said Thelma, "but I'm as particular about where I stay as you are about who you take in, so I think I'll stay."

So that was settled and the girl had shelter, but food was another matter. When mealtime came she said well, she guessed she would go up town and get something to eat, but she had no money to purchase food.

Three days she walked the streets looking for work. Three nights she went to bed hungry. The little old woman would have given her food, but she did not know and a certain pride had come to the girl and she would not tell, always going away when her landlady prepared the food she would have been glad to share.

Starved Again

The third day, walking the street, her vision blurred and the sights and sounds went topsy-turvy and then there was blackness and silence. They picked her up and sent her to the hospital and the doctors said it was starvation, that was what ailed the child. When, at last, she could ask questions, they told her it was three weeks since she had been found lying in the street and had been brought there. She told them she would pay them when she could and went away.

A job was hard to find. She started out to sell toilet articles from door to door. The first week she made $90, in two weeks $150. Her deliveries were so heavy that she had to use a pushcart to make them. She paid what she owed and then turned to the more congenial occupation of cashier at a night restaurant. An advantage was that this gave her time work at other things in the daytime. She worked daytime as a reporter of oil news. She entered a contest and won an automobile and sold it for $2200. She won a trip to Colorado in another contest and took the money instead, $360.

The oil game was getting into her veins. She was absolutely the worst stenographer in the world but she got a job with a big oil company. They found out quickly that she wasn't a stenographer, but she was so in earnest and so wanted to stay that the boss did not have the heart to fire her. Especially since she had promptly taken over the responsibility of the business and came frequently to his office to ask how business was and to discuss plans and prospects. She was so comically serious that she kept everybody about the place in high good humor and the boss decided that she was worth, as a kill-gloom, all that they paid her and kept her.

The Oil Broker

At the end of three months they gave her a raise and she threw the organization into consternation by announcing that she was going to leave it flat and go into business for herself.

She opened an office as an agent for oil leases. Did she know anything about oil leases? Certainly not. But she would learn, as usual, by making mistakes. She had no selling argument, as other agents had. She figured that the producing companies knew what they wanted, and that it was useless to try to sell them anything that they didn't want. She was that way. Nobody could sell her anything that she didn't want. So she would go to a company and say that she had a lease somewhere and did they want to buy it, and they would say no, and she would say all right, good-by, and go away.

For a year that went on. For a year she did not sell a lease. What with her oil lease business and the odd jobs at which she made a living, she worked 16 hours a day.

Finally, after a year, she sold a little lease that netted her between $200 and $300. That convinced her she was a business woman. She tried to sell everything connected with the oil business, mostly things that she knew nothing about. It is her calm conviction now that she made more mistakes than were ever made by a human before or since. But she learned by her mistakes. She was watching and listening and learning.

The Burkburnett field came in and she was caught in the excitement of that. She obtained a lease on the edge of the producing district. She wanted to bore a well but she had no money to do it with. Somebody mentioned W. L. Leland, an independent operator. She went to him. She told him her lease was a doubtful prospect and mentioned all the bad things about it that she could think of. It was a new experience to him. He told her she was the first person in the oil country who had talked honest to him. For that, he was going to back her. She had

CHILD WIDOW TESTIFIES AGAINST HER FATHER, ACCUSED SLAYER OF HUSBAND

MRS. CORA HICKS ALSO IS ESTRANGED FROM HER MOTHER, WHO IS DISTRACTED BY THE TRAGEDY

When George Hicks Eloped With the Prettiest Girl on Beaver Creek, Her Father Vowed Vengeance, and When, After Overtures for Reconciliation, They Came Back Home the Young Husband Was Shot to Death in the House of His Father-in-Law—His Widow, Blotting Her Own Parents From Her Life, Finds Refuge Among Her Husband's People.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WALTERS, Ok., May 23.

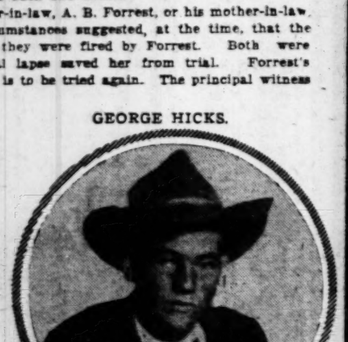
ROMANCE came early to Ella Forrest, but tragedy quickly followed. She mourns her husband, shot to death before the honeymoon waned, and is estranged from her mother, who has been driven mad by her daughter's elopement and the murder of her son-in-law, and, under the protection of her husband's father, she is now a witness against her own father, charged with the murder of her husband.

With all this romance and tragedy in her life, she is only 15 years old.

George Hicks loved Cora Forrest so much that, knowing the risk, he married her in the face of her father's wrath and threats. When the resentment of his wife's parents seemed to have subsided he brought her back to them and it was there, under conditions of hospitality, that he was shot in the back and killed.

Whether the shots were fired by his father-in-law, A. B. Forrest, or his mother-in-law, Mrs. Forrest, has not been proved. The circumstances suggested, at the time, that the woman had fired them. The belief is that they were fired by Forrest. Both were charged with the crime. Mrs. Forrest's mental lapse saved her from trial. Forrest's trial last week resulted in a hung jury. He is to be tried again. The principal witness against him will be his daughter, as she was last week.

GEORGE HICKS.



Cora Forrest was called the prettiest girl in the Beaver Creek settlement, eight miles east of here, when she lived there on a farm with her parents and went to the Beaver School.

At 14, in stature and appearance, she might have been 18, and the boys of Beaver Creek were beginning to take notice of her, but she did not encourage them, and her parents, regarding her as the child that she was, pointedly discouraged them. So Cora, despite her precocity, had not had a sweetheart until George Hicks came.

He came last autumn, out of Eastern Oklahoma, and romance came with him, for about him was the glamour which the stranger brings, and he wore his wide hat with a jaunty air and his 23 years had brought him worldly wisdom. Cora Forrest felt that a cavalier was come to Beaver Creek.

The home of A. V. Forrest in Walters, Okla., where George Hicks was shot to death by someone who stood behind him as he sat on the back porch.

Hicks had left his father's house at Atoka and had come to live with his brother, Elmer, whose farm lies across the creek from where the Forrests then lived. He had not been long there until he rode, one evening, to the farm of the Forrests, to get acquainted, as a newcomer was expected to do, and saw Cora Forrest for the first time.

The Love Affair

It was not much more than that, because she was such a child, in the eyes of her parents, that they scarcely felt called upon to introduce her to the young stranger, and considered that they had fully served the amenities of the occasion by saying "This is our girl." She was shy in the presence of this man of the world, for anybody could see that he was that. His glance was discreet, but appraising, and he told himself, as he rode away, that Cora Forrest was fair, fairer than any girl that he had known.

After that he went often to the Forrest farm, on one pretext or another, and soon was on terms of familiar friendship with the family and on relations with Cora that were rapidly becoming romantic. Noting which, after a little while, her parents were less friendly to him, and then came hostility, for their Cora was just a child, far too young for romance.

But romance does not reckon years and it prospers upon the opposition of parents. The young man rode no more to the Forrest farm, but the term had opened at Beaver School and it chanced that often, as Cora Forrest was on her way to school or on her way home from school, George Hicks came riding by and, as ever, the stolen sweets of byway trysts were best, and romance had its way.

By mid-November they were plighted lovers and making plans. Their planning was for Thanksgiving day, when fate might be expected to favor lovers' plans, and fate was indeed friendly, affording the opportunity that they needed, but foresight had failed and no license could be had that day.

Next day Cora Forrest went as usual to Beaver School, but at recess she slipped away and hurried to where George Hicks was waiting, down by the creek, with the license in his pocket, and they came to Walters and were wed by the Rev. Moody Nicholson, Presbyterian minister, and went away to Lawton for the beginning of their honeymoon.

Word was carried to Forrest that his daughter had eloped with Hicks and, breathing slaughter but making reluctant use of the law's aid, he overtook them at Lawton and brought them back, the bridegroom to go to jail until he should face a perjury charge, and the child-bride to be sent away to relatives in Texas in the hope that absence would do its work, and that, when the time came, she would be willing to return and testify against Hicks.

She did return and was at her father's house when the trial began. Her father took her to court. She has told since that he threatened that unless she testified against her husband he would kill her. He did not doubt that she would testify as he desired. District Attorney Tobe Morris had been given to understand that she would so testify.

But hers was the strategy at which Cupid smiles. She went demurely into court and was called to the stand. Hicks saw her for the first time since they had been torn from each other soon after marriage. If he knew how she would testify he gave no sign.

Tensely the crowd that filled the courtroom waited for the words which it expected would send the young husband to prison. But she testified that she had told Hicks that she was 18. The District Attorney, finding himself double-crossed by his principal witness, threw up his hands and the case was dismissed and the boy and girl rushed into each other's arms and the crowd cheered.

So love laughed at the law and the wedded lovers went their way to resume their interrupted honeymoon. Forrest was more wrathful than ever, now that the law had failed him, and it was prudence that prompted Hicks to take his bride to his people at Atoka.

It was the parents' overtures that brought them back, Hicks to his death and his bride to widowhood and entrangement from father and mother. The State, calling it conspiracy, says assassination was the purpose and that the sanctity of hospitality was violated in carrying out that purpose. It may have been that. And it may have been that the overtures were in good faith and that the killing of the young man was uncalculated, done in a resurgence of rage. The result is the same.

Mrs. Cora Hicks, the child widow, taken with her father-in-law, G. C. Hicks, with whom she has decided to make her home.

Word went to Hicks and his wife that the Forrests had softened and were willing to receive them back and forgive them. Mrs. Forrest wrote to her daughter, a broken-hearted letter, not chiding her, though, and telling how she yearned for her. They talked it over, Hicks and his wife. They did not doubt Mrs. Forrest's good faith, but Hicks remembered Forrest's threats and he had misgivings. He wanted to avoid trouble. Maybe it would be better if they waited awhile.

Back Home

Forrest sought the intervention of Charles McCuistion, court clerk, friend of Hicks. The Forrests had moved into town from the farm and were planning to move to Texas. They wanted to see their girl before they went, Forrest said. McCuistion communicated this to Hicks.

Counting upon these overtures, but not without misgivings, they came here Feb. 4 and went first to see McCuistion, to make sure of their welcome. They asked him to go to Forrest and tell him that they had returned and ask him if he still desired to see them. The answer he brought back was an invitation to the young couple to come and be forgiven.

So a little before noon that day they drove to the Forrest home on East Oklahoma street. After all, home was home, and it was good to be back. Cora jumped out of the car and tripped to the door and opened it without knocking. She wanted to surprise her mother, and she did.

Mrs. Forrest, turning from her housework when the door opened, saw Cora in the doorway, laughing, and George behind her, trying to smile but still a little uncertain as to the reception that awaited him. With a cry of surprise and gladness the mother dropped her broom and ran to her, a little unsteadily, for she was ill in body and mind, and hugged her and kissed her, and cried a little, and shook hands with George, constrained but not unfriendly. She asked him about his work and hoped they would get along all right, and started to take his coat and hat, but he said no, he would go and get the suitcases out of the machine.

"Where's Dad?" asked Cora, flitting about, touching familiar things of home. And Mrs. Forrest said he had gone up town but it was time for him to be back.

Cora took off her coat and hat and hung them in the closet and caught up the broom, gaily, and finished sweeping the kitchen and began sweeping the dining room. Her mother remonstrated. She did not want Cora to work the first thing after she came home. She tried to take the broom from her hand. Cora refused to give it up and told her mother to go and lie down.

George brought the suitcases and set them on the front porch and sat down in the front room. Forrest came in the back way. Cora ran to him and hugged him and kissed him. He did not return the embrace or the caress. He was pale and nervous. He did not speak to George. Mrs. Forrest had told him to bring some baking powder from the store and he had forgotten it. He would go and get it and bring some lemons for a hot lemonade, too.

He left the room and they heard a door slam, but when Cora was testifying against him the other day she said she did not know whether he left the house. He and Mrs. Forrest had whispered in the kitchen before the door slammed. There was a sack of apples setting beside the pantry door. Cora had moved it in her sweeping. Mrs. Forrest closed the pantry door.

Cora, presently, went out into the back yard. She had looked into the front room and George was sitting there, between the bed and the door, looking at a family group picture. Her mother was doing something about the kitchen stove.

The Murder

As George Hicks sat there somebody, coming up behind him, fired five shots into his back and the family group picture fell from his hands and he crumpled from the chair to the floor.

Cora did not hear the shots. She was playing with a puppy when she heard a woman screaming and looked up and saw her mother running down the street toward the Methodist Church, with a revolver in her hand.

Cora started to run after her and called to her but she did not heed. Cora then called George but he did not answer. She turned to the porch and opened the door. George was lying dead on the floor. She knelt and took his head in her lap.

Presently Forrest was there in the room, asking Cora where her mother had gone and Cora, who had risen to her feet and was weeping and wringing her hands, pointed down the street, and Forrest, stepping across the body of Hicks, strode after his wife. Bill Hood, coming along in his truck, had jumped off and pinioned her arms and had taken the weapon from her and Deputy Sheriff S. E. Cook and Constable Slim Kinser took her to jail, for nobody doubted then that it was she who had killed George Hicks. She, in her hysterical grief, kept crying out that somebody had killed Cora.

When all the circumstances were known there was reason to think that Forrest might at least have been a party to it, and both were charged with the crime.

Cora, seeking asylum with her husband's people, made herself a stranger to her own. And at the preliminary hearing she testified against them, not vengefully or vindictively, but as one having a duty to perform, retaining her composure even when her mother, whose aberration had increased, shrieked, as she did, at her: "It's not Cora. It can't be Cora. Cora is dead." She was taken away.

Before the day of trial it was clear that Mrs. Forrest, brooding in jail, mourning her daughter she believed to have been murdered, had lost her reason. There was no one to find fault when an inquiry was ordered and a jury found her insane and she was taken away to the asylum.

That left Forrest to be tried alone. Whether he had only conspired with his wife to get her fired the shots, his guilt, if convicted, would be the same in the eyes of the law. The State's theory was that he had actually fired the shots and that was what District Attorney Morris undertook to prove. It was believed, for one thing, that Mrs. Forrest, in her nervous, weakened condition, could have fired the five shots from a heavy double-action Smith & Wesson .38. One shot, yes, she might have fired, but then her nerve would have failed her and the weapon would have fallen from her shaking hand.

Rather, the prosecutor reasoned, the mother had no thought of vengeance when she welcomed her daughter and son-in-law, but deadly resentment smoldered in the heart of her husband and, if the purpose to kill had not been formed before, it was fixed when he entered the house and received his daughter's caress with surliness and refused to speak to his son-in-law.

So, instead of leaving the house, he slammed the door to make his daughter sure that he had and concealed himself in the pantry and when Cora went to the back yard he came out and stepped close to George and fired the bullets into his back. And Mrs. Forrest, distracted by the concussions in the small house and the smoke and the form lying on the floor, snatched the revolver from her husband's hand and fled with it down the street. The prosecutor's task was to prove that Forrest was in the house when the shots were fired, or, failing that, to raise such a strong presumption of his presence as to satisfy the jury of his guilt. The proof was conflicting and not conclusive.

Stays With Husband's Family

Cora could have cleared him by saying that he had left the house, but the most that she would say was that she had heard a door slam. She admitted on cross-examination that she had not spoken to her father or mother since the death of her husband, that she did not speak to her father in court or look him more than a swift glance. He sat there moved, stolid and surly, while she gave her testimony which was calculated to carry weight with the jury, charged with the duty of sending him to the gallows or to prison for life if he was found guilty.

The jury deliberated a day, but could not agree. It was said to have stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal, but the talk is that a compromise verdict of conviction could have been obtained if the Oklahoma law had not limited the penalty to death or life imprisonment.

Through the trial, G. C. Hicks, putative father of the boy, the youngest of his 11 children, who was killed, sat beside Cora, and when the mistrial resulted she went away with him to Atoka, for when her husband was killed she blotted her own parents from her life and said to him: "Thy people shall be my people."

Thelma Velsgor Makes Big Oil Strike

all kinds of hard luck but she struck oil at last and came out of that with $80,000.

She Takes the Children

The day she sold out her gladdest thought was that now she could do for her mother as she had always wanted to do. That day a telegram came from Devils Lake. Her mother was dying.

At her mother's deathbed she took up the task that her mother had laid down. Not only with respect to the care of the family, for this mother had never been content to care only for her own. "She was always ambitious to care for all the world," says the daughter now. "Often, after working through the day on the farm she would put us wee ones to bed and walk miles to some one who was sick or heartsick. She spent her life that way. It was too great a task for her. When, tired out, she laid it down, I took it up. I cannot hope to do it as well as she did because I am not as good as she was, but I'll carry on."

After the funeral she took the family with her to Barren County, Kentucky, and bored 19 shallow wells there. They were all good, though she lost one from bad casing. But the market was bad and she had ups and downs and finally returned to Texas. At the end of six months most of her winnings were gone.

She wanted to make a strike and bring in a field, something big, so that she could make a lot of money.

"For," she says now, "I need a lot of money for what I want to do. It isn't the money I want. It's what I can do with it. For myself the things that I have missed—education, music, languages, Europe, all the rest of it for those things. The rest for myself? No, I am not generous. I'm selfish. I want to make myself happy. And I have found that there is only one thing in the world that makes me happy, and that is making others happy. I have found great happiness in helping the dependent members of my own family. I dearly love children. The world is full of children that need help. Orphan children, homeless children. It hurts me to think of them. I want to do something for them. Not in mistaken, indiscriminate charity, but in helping them to help themselves."

It is true enough that she doesn't need much for herself. Her tastes are simple. She is not a spendthrift. Her only visible extravagance, now that fortune has come to her, is the Cadillac that has been bought by the "Leaping Lena" company. And as for that, hers is still masculine, although she has substituted a strikingly effective outfit of soft material and nice workmanship for the khaki and sweater of the recent past. Many of Vernon who see her every day have never seen her in feminine attire, though those who have seen her in evening gown at the country club or somewhere say they cannot accept the sacrifice of vanity that she makes in wearing mannish things.

Out south of here in Wilbarger County was a field in which hundreds of wells had been bored without substantial result and it had been passed up as a "graveyard." Thelma Wells believed oil was there. She gave the structure and common sense, she says. The logs of the dry holes showed that structure was right. It was common sense that where the logs showed sand and not water and traces of oil, a pool was near.

Strawberry Time in Sarcoxie---1500 Workers Motor In for the Picking

SOUTHWEST MISSOURI TOWN IS WAY STATION ON TRAIL OF MIGRATORY LABORERS FROM GULF TO NORTH DAKOTA

A group of berry pickers in a patch near Sarcoxie.

Another crew of pickers ready to take their trays to the packing shed.

When the Strawberries Are Picked They Will Move North to Kansas, Nebraska and Dakota Wheat Fields, Cutting Corn on Their Way Back in the Fall — They Follow Warm Weather and Sunny Skies, Spending the Cold Season in the Southern Cotton Fields—Some Aspects of the Strawberry and Peony Crops Which Have Made Sarcoxie Famous.

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SARCOXIE, Mo., May 23.

THE strawberry picker is a lordly man. He rides from the South in his venerable Buick or Studebaker—a Ford usually is too small to carry him and his family, his tent home and his dogs—and arrives in Sarcoxie at a dramatic moment. A hundred strawberry growers await him anxiously; their berries are ripening and must be away to market. He comes like some latter-day Ulysses, an old straw hat upon his brow, stout brogans on his feet, the dust of many roads behind his ears, the smoke of many campfires in his eyes. No strawberry baron scorns him for his looks; his fingers are nimble and his back like a hickory sapling. He will do prodigious labors.

If the strawberry picker came not to Sarcoxie on the tenth of May each year there would be tragedy in the land. Lucious berries would wither unplucked; ten thousand families would go without strawberry short cake. The strawberry picker, therefore, is no sordid laborer who works in materialistic things. He tickles the palate of America. His achievement is expressed in crushed red fruit and flaky pie crust and whipped cream. A million smacking lips applaud him. The sweetly leaden calm of his fellows, filled with strawberry shortcake, is silent tribute. He sends spring to the cities long before backyard gardens bloom. He is the good genii of shortcake, the patron saint of strawberry ice cream, the soul of strawberry jam.

In a cloud of dust the strawberry picker whirls into the town square at Sarcoxie. Grateful citizens have decked the square with bunting in his honor. Should he decide to live in town and motor daily to his work there is a tourist camp just off the square. Should he wish to take his meals out there are hot dog stands nearby. A street carnival is set up for the amusement of himself and family. The stores have bargain sales, the bank will cash his strawberry checks. He is welcomed heartily.

The Wife and All the Kids

This important personage does not come alone. As a rule he brings his wife and the children. Then there are 800 more strawberry pickers like him. About 1500 pickers visit the Sarcoxie region each year during strawberry season which extends for about 20 days from May 10 to 30. Sarcoxie boasts that round about are grown the largest quantity of the best berries in the United States. There are 764 growers banded in two marketing associations. When the correspondent was in Sarcoxie 93 refrigerator cars of berries already had been shipped and it was estimated that many more would go out before the season ended.

One hundred and eighty-six cars of berries, each car holding 420 crates, each crate containing 24 quarts! It becomes a mere matter of arithmetic to say that a car represents 10,080 quarts and 186 cars represent 1,874,880 quarts and that many quarts will make 9,474,400 helpings of strawberry shortcake.

But this is not the only kind of work that awaits the migrant laborer. Sarcoxie is the world's greatest peony raising center. Peonies bloom at the same time strawberries ripen. The four commercial growers of peonies employ several hundred persons in season. Gilbert H. Wild & Son, for instance, have 50 acres of peonies and cut, they say, 8000 buds from an acre. These must be sorted, wrapped, packed in boxes and shipped by express to florists all over the country.

Consider the carefree life of Jack Smith and family, who were encamped the other day at Bill Green's place near Sarcoxie. It could not be said that they left home to go strawberry picking, because they have no home. Their home is where they pitch a tent, and they have lived in many States. This spring they followed the strawberry season northward, beginning in Louisiana and Mississippi in April and working through Arkansas to Missouri. Warm weather and the open road, with work always ahead and plenty of it has been their lot.

During peony season, from May 10 to 30, the roads about Sarcoxie are lined with automobiles of tourists who come for miles to see the gaily-colored fields.

A Knight of the Road

Jack Smith was camped under an elm tree in Bill Green's yard. The family Buick stood near the khaki tent, laden with such simple furnishings as are required by campers. The whole farm was Jack's front yard. He buys milk from Bill—new milk still frothing in the pail. His water comes from a deep cistern or a spring down in the woods pastures. A few steps from Mrs. Smith's camp stove is a garden, wondrously stocked with new potatoes, string beans, peas, sweet corn, and other "garden sass." For his plenty of this, Jack pays farmer's prices. He buys meat in Sarcoxie or chickens from Bill, or sends one of his youngsters out to kill a squirrel now and then.

There are five children in the family, three big enough to pick strawberries. Counting Mrs. Smith, Jack has four assistants in the strawberry patch. He is paid three cents a quart for picking. If he starts early and works hard he earns seven or eight dollars a day. Mrs. Smith earns $3 a day. The little Smiths average $1.50 each, though Tom, the largest boy says he never picks less than $2 worth. At any rate, Jack is assured of an income of from $12 to $15 a day.

Nor will this employment soon run out. When the strawberry season here is over, Jack will point the rusty nose of his Buick to the road again. The Smith family will make for the Kansas wheat fields where Jack can earn $6 a day driving a binder and his boys $4 apiece shocking wheat.

Wheat ripens gradually and the cutting season grows later as the traveler makes his way northward. In June you will find the Smiths camped in a Kansas pasture. In July they will have moved into Nebraska. In August they may be in South Dakota or as far North as the Red River district in North Dakota and Minnesota. They will not overwork—trust Jack for that. He estimates that two days work a week under harvest wages will support his family. He may work an extra day or so on the average to buy gasoline and tires for the Buick. But there will be loafing days on the road, beside fragrant woodlands, fishing in lazy streams, hunting on friendly hills.

The Caravan

When the days become snappy of a morning Jack Smith will head South again. It will be time to cut corn for fodder and ensilage, and hard-pressed farmers along the way are always glad of an extra hand. Back over new trails Jack Smith will travel, beating the cold weather in his race to the South. In October you may find the Smiths down in Georgia, ready for cotton-picking. It is an amiable migration. Strawberries, wheat, corn and cotton—always in warm weather and the open air.

There are hundreds like Jack Smith here at Sarcoxie now. Strawberry season means the halt of a great and curious caravan. Battered automobiles carrying licenses of half a dozen states can be seen parked in farmers' yards or at every turn of the road. Barefooted children scamper in dust pits like rabbits. Camp-fires smoke cheerily in the evening. Browned men and boys tramp into town, their pockets heavy with the metal checks issued by the strawberry growers in pay for the quarts each has picked that day. There is the bustle of a carnival, the magic of a fete about it all.

Not that strawberry picking is easy. The correspondent tried it in a field where 40 or more pickers were at work. You are handed a shallow tray holding half a dozen quart boxes and assigned a row of plants. And some humorist yells, "Root for 'em boy!"

Strawberries seem to hug the ground and hide around clumps of sharp-bladed grass. After the first two minutes an ache begins in the back of the neck. In three minutes this ache extends in a broad band down the back, focusing about the liver. Then the fingers start to cramp. Changing hands is impossible as both are needed. The picker is supposed to reject green and blighted berries as one or two in a box will reduce the grade from A to B. After 10 minutes the tenderfoot's eyes ache and then his head aches and in half an hour the ache is no longer confined to specific points. But those who are hardened to it go down the row in a half creeping posture, plucking berries right and left and filling a quart box in what appears to be two motions. And they keep it up all day.

Facts on Strawberries

One hundred quarts is considered only a moderate day's work. The good pickers reach 200 quarts with no trouble. As the trays are filled they are carried to a small shed at a corner of the patch where women give credit to each picker for the quarts he turns in. The berries then are worked over by women or children, who throw out bad ones and pack the boxes in crates. The crates are loaded in an automobile or a spring wagon and carried carefully to the loading sheds of the growers' association.

Wanderers are not the only source of labor supply. At Bill Green's when the correspondent called there was a lad from Springfield, and three youngsters from Sarcoxie. Two girls, who gave their names as Jenny and Ruth, and who were slimly boyish in overalls and blue denim waists said they were high school students out to earn spending money. A picking crew is a motley crowd. It is made up of tramps and students, women and children, old men and mere babes.

There are two growers' associations at Sarcoxie, the Fruit Growers' Union and the Sarcoxie Horticultural Association. The latter was one of the first if not the first mutual sales organization in the country and served as model for the California fruit growers when they formed exchanges. Both ship berries for their members on a pool basis.

Each member brings in his day's harvest to the shed of his respective association located near the Sarcoxie, St. Louis & San Francisco station. A refrigerator car is packed, each member contributing berries to it being given a car slip showing the number of crates and the grade. Market reports wired every day determine whether the car will be routed to Chicago, St. Louis, Des Moines, Omaha or New York. The car is sold as a whole and the price forms the basis for pro rata returns to the shippers. Those sending in Grade A berries of course receive more than those whose berries graded B.

Berries were selling at about $4.50 a crate wholesale at the height of the season. Each crate costs the shipper 28 cents. He has in addition the expense of raising the berries, picking and handling. The crop this year was not so heavy as it has been in years past, but good patches yielded 100 crates to the acre. Roughly speaking this gave the grower a gross return of $450 an acre, which, as many remarked, beats a wheat crop at $30 an acre. The bulk of the berries handled by the Horticultural Association were sold at auction at Monett, 18 miles away, where buyers for commission houses all over the United States came to bid.

These young women are spending the week-end in the strawberry patches.

The incoming laborers who arrived early, or who did not care for work in the berry patches found employment in the peony fields. Men have been sent out daily with shears to cut the peony buds and women are employed to store them in refrigeration rooms or to pack them for immediate shipment. There are four commercial growers of peonies about Sarcoxie, Gilbert H. Wild being the pioneer. He and the Wild Brothers Nursery, operated by an uncle and cousins are the largest growers. Otis Lambeth and James Whitaker operate smaller enterprises. Peonies have come into great demand by florists in recent years as a show flower and the Sarcoxie growers have more demand than they can supply.

The peony is a perennial and every good plant will produce eight or 10 buds annually. These buds sell for $10 or $15 a hundred. Considering that 8000 are cut from a single acre it is apparent that the peony growers have plenty of funds to pay Jack Smith and his fellows for their work.

Sarcoxie is a lovely stopping place for the great caravan of the foot-loose and fancy free this time of year. Acres and acres of peonies send up their perfume to the May air. The countryside is splotched with gay reds and gorgeous purples and beds of Sweet William nod by infrequently traveled roads. Strawberry patches are not beautiful, but they lie by fence rows dotted with wild roses and alive with birds.

What accidents sent these gypsy-like wanderers to Sarcoxie along the trail that runs from the Gulf to North Dakota? The correspondent talked to many about the town square one afternoon. Answers varied, yet all had a startling sameness. One man had been a carpenter in Biloxi, Miss., who went out on strike and found he could not go back to work. He had an automobile and a family, so he joined the migration to the strawberry fields. Another man, who had been a clerk in Pitcher, Ok., was told to find outdoor work under penalty of tuberculosis. He and his wife sold their household goods, bought a secondhand Ford and set out along the road of perpetual summer. From South to North and back again they plan to wander until he is well.

Another strawberry picker had a steady job in Memphis. But he was tired of it, and believed he could find work more to his liking and earn better pay outdoors. He has been on the strawberry-wheat-corn-and cotton circuit for three years now. Another man, elderly, had been a mechanic but had never settled down. "I was always wandering," he said, "and my wife got tired of stayin' home with the kids. So she said, 'John, you buy a car and we'll all go.' We've been out four years and we like it better than anything we ever did."

Drifting with this restless tide, of course, are a certain percentage of true hoboes, young

Easy Way to Remove Superfluous Hair Roots

What beauty specialists regard as one of the most important discoveries in recent years is the phelactine method of removing superfluous hair. Its great advantage, of course, lies in the fact that it actually removes the hair roots. It does this easily, quickly, harmlessly. Sufferers need no longer despair. The actual hair-roots come out before one's very eye, leaving the skin smooth and hairless as a babe's. Because it offers such complete relief, a stick of phelactine is the most inexpensive thing one can buy for the removal of hairy growths. Druggists are having a big demand for it.

RAPID REHABILITATION IN TORNADO AREAS

Red Cross Reports Steady Progress in Relief Work in Three States.

Rapid progress in the rehabilitation of cities and towns in Illinois, Missouri and Indiana, devastated by the tornado of March 18, is reported by the Red Cross, which has been steadily engaged in relief operations since the day of the disaster.

Rural areas affected in the three States are said to have returned almost to normalcy with agricultural activities but little behind the usual seasonal schedule. Red Cross relief caravans have been busy in these areas, too, completely covering the region between the Mississippi and Wabash rivers, clearing away wreckage, restoring trees, fences, barns and livestock. Horses, mules and cows have been obtained for the stricken farmers and crop planting is almost completed.

Rehabilitation Awards.

Out of 246 cases of rehabilitation awards in the area centering around Annapolis, Mo., only 50 remain to be filled, and at Perryville, the collection of information upon which to base final awards is virtually finished.

The area in and around Gorham, Ill., is alive with building activity, and at Murphysboro, where the greatest destruction was wrought, awards were made in the last week are being made daily. More large issues of rebuilding awards than in all the previous period of relief effort. Here the relief workers faced the greatest and most complicated task of reconstruction. At De Soto, which was also nearly obliterated, an augmented force of workers is getting final awards into shape and the same process is being carried out at Mush, Ill.

A substantial increase in awards was noted this week at West Frankfort, another of the larger towns which suffered most heavily.

McLeansboro Area.

In the McLeansboro area, which covers the rural damage in Hamilton County, only 128 rehabilitation cases remain open and these are expected to be filled shortly. Merchants of this region have rallied to the aid of the sufferers, and, cooperating with the Illinois State Dairy Division on a nonprofit basis, have furnished a large number of dairy cows to the Red Cross beneficiaries.

In many instances families have suffered losses so complete that weekly maintenance supplies have had to be issued by the Red Cross until rebuilding awards permit these sufferers to re-establish themselves permanently.

THELMA VELSGOR MAKES BIG OIL STRIKE IN TEXAS FIELD

Never mind what the geologist said. She had always got along without the geologists, although they might have their uses. But common sense was better than geology. She hired a "roughneck" and they went out and dug cellars to get the dips. She picked her location and obtained a lease that was just expiring and signed a contract to drill a well. And she was flat broke. She needed at least $20,000. To Dallas on borrowed transportation and there a conference with Al Guiberson, manufacturer of oil well supplies. He put up the $20,000. She planted her rig in Waggoner pasture.

The lease expired at midnight on May 2. The well had to be spudded then or the lease was void. At sundown two hours' work remained. The dynamo failed. Lights or failure and no lights nearer than Vernon, nine miles away. "I'll bring 'em," said the girl.

"Leaping Lena," her Ford coupe, never leaped as it leaped that night over the chuck holes to Vernon. It came tearing back, bellwether for a flock of machines, driven by her friends. They surrounded the rig and in the glare of their headlights the men worked and at 20 minutes to midnight the well was spudded in.

There were hindrances and hardships. The oil-wise laughed at the girl and called her a fool. But she stayed with the rig night and day. She slept, when she slept, on the greasy floor with a workman's coat for a pillow.

The Big Strike.

At 1300 feet she expected gas. No gas. At 1900 feet the well was a dry hole. Her money was almost gone. Everybody was laughing at her. Everybody, that is, except the men of her roughneck drilling crew. They had caught her spirit and were loyal to her. They stopped at nothing, unless it was to punch the head of anybody they heard laughing at their boss. "Drill on," she ordered, and they gritted their teeth and drilled on.

Nineteen hundred and fifty feet. 1970. 1980. 1990.

It was night and the girl, dog tired, and maybe discouraged, had started to town.

Nineteen hundred and ninety-four feet. An excited exultant whoop. "We've got it!"

The first thought then was of the boss, headed for town. A driller leaped into the toolpusher's car and went tearing after her. Overhauling her and yelling, "We've got it," and wheeling and racing back with her to the well.

That night they drilled six feet of as pretty oil sand as has been found in any well in North Texas.

The swab was run in the hole and the oil spouted to the top of the derrick. Oil-spattered from head to foot Thelma Wells dipped her arms in it and lifted them in solemn oblation.

Last week she sold her wells for $400,000 cash.

OLDEST VETERAN OF G. A. R. HERE IS 92

Only 240 Members Remain of 3000 Roll of St. Louis Posts in 1880.

Few youthful Union soldiers who received the news 60 years ago next Tuesday of the surrender of Gen. Kirby Smith, commanding the Confederate Transmississippi army, completing the surrender of Confederate forces, live today to reminisce of the reception of the news. Halls of G. A. R. posts which boasted memberships of several hundred now house each fortnight a handful of aged veterans, while others surviving remain at home, too infirm to make the trip to the meeting place.

In 1880, when the Grand Army was yet near its height in membership, 10 St. Louis posts had an aggregate membership of more than 3000. Today, 240 names are on the rolls of six posts, four having surrendered their charters. The report of W. F. Henry, assistant adjutant-general of the Missouri Department, for 1924, shows only 1542 members in the State. In 1924 there were 190 deaths.

The average age of the 240 members in St. Louis is 82. A man of that age was 18 at the beginning of the Civil War in 1861.

However, there are several notable exceptions to the average age. Philip F. Coghlan, 92, of Overland, St. Louis County, a printer, employed in the composing room of the Post-Dispatch, is the oldest member of a St. Louis post. He enlisted at the age of 28 in the Fortieth Missouri Infantry.

William C. Pfeffer, 4240 Juniata street, at the age of 75, is the youngest St. Louis member. He enlisted in St. Louis at the age of 11 and followed Sherman through the wilderness as a drummer boy. Like the oldest member, he is a printer, but retired recently.

PROGRAM COMMEMORATES OPENING OF NEW PRICE SCHOOL

Work on Building on Price Lane, Near Clayton Road, Was Begun Last Fall.

Exercises, commemorating the opening of the new Price School, were held Friday in the yard of the school on Price Lane, near Clayton road. The 69 pupils of the school participated.

The new building, a spacious structure, with four class rooms, two playrooms, a library, a rest room and auditorium, marks the passing of the old frame two-room district school built in 1889. In 1872 the first Price School was built—a one-room frame building.

Work on the new building was begun last fall, and for three months classes were held in an adjoining garage. As soon as the lower portion of the new place was completed and heating appliances were working, the pupils and teachers moved in.

Friday, the last day of school, found the building almost complete. A May day program, the presentation of diplomas to the graduating class, and a picnic lunch was the order of the day. The County Superintendent of Schools, R. G. Russell, who presented the diplomas, received a vote of thanks from the mothers and teachers of the institution for his help in procuring the new school.

The children's program, a cantata entitled "The May Day Charm," was directed by Miss E. Copeland, principal of the school, and the Misses Mamie and Nettie Reed, instructors.

STRAWBERRY TIME IN SARCOXIE—1500 PICKERS MOTOR TO TOWN

men and old, who travel alone and travel light. "I work only enough to get by," a young fellow who was "bumming" a cigarette on the Frisco station platform said, "and that ain't often." These tramps show up here and there along the route, sometimes loitering behind when the workers move in hope that the town will take up a subscription to send them on. The caravan has other parasites, too. As stragglers follow an army a hundred carnival operatives follow the strawberry pickers. They set up hot dog stands and paddle-wheel booths and baseball throwing contests in towns like Sarcoxie where the caravan halts for a time.

But by and large the pilgrims one sees around Sarcoxie in strawberry and peony time are an independent lot. They are willing to work their way, asking only for a place to pitch their tents. Knights and ladies of the open road. A new class of laborers. They have become an institution in Sarcoxie and others towns in the strawberry, wheat, corn and cotton lands. Regularly each year about the tenth of May Sarcoxie looks down the road from the South. Regularly about the tenth of May the leading automobile chugs into view. It is the vanguard of the caravan.

The strawberry picker is a lordly fellow. He likes the open air and the sunshine. From the Gulf to North Dakota and back again he drifts, seeking only a job at good wages under warm skies. Soon he will be leaving Sarcoxie, the strawberries having vanished into shortcakes and the shortcakes, too, disappeared. Hutchinson, Salina, Platte, Yankton, Sioux Falls and Fargo may see him. Bronzed and happy he will be back this way before snow flies and then the cotton fields will call him.

HIS BAD HEADACHES SOON HEADED OFF

Sufferers from sick headaches frequently do not know that this symptom, with which at times almost every one is troubled, is often due to poisons in the body that have not been taken care of properly, on account of constipation or a torpid liver.

Such sufferers will be interested in the following story by Mr. Jeff Jervis, of Endicott, Ky., telling how he found relief from his own disorders.

"I began having severe headaches," says Mr. Jervis. "I can't tell just how they would begin, but soon my head felt like it would split open and I would be so sick I felt like I was paralyzed.

"I would have shooting pains in my neck and, if I turned my head, I felt like it would crack at my neck. My eyeballs were sore and I would vomit. I would be 'torn to pieces' for a day or two. I would take headache medicine and feel so queer afterwards I'd be scared. I didn't feel right—I felt numb."

In spite of these distressing symptoms, Mr. Jervis was soon to find relief through following the wise advice of a friend. To use his own words—

"I was telling a neighbor and he said, 'Get some Black-Draught and take a big dose when you feel a headache coming on.' I did it and took a few doses each night.

"Soon I had these headaches headed off. Now it is very seldom that I have one at all. I just keep Black-Draught and use it when I need it. I don't let myself get constipated."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found to relieve sick headaches in thousands of cases that were due to constipation or a torpid liver. Containing no mineral drugs, it acts gently, helping the organs to drive out the poisons and regain a state of healthy activity.

Black-Draught has been in successful use for 80 years.

A Test Every Man Past 40 Should Make

Medical authorities agree that 65% of all men past middle age (many much younger) are afflicted with a painful and annoying disorder. Aches in feet, legs and back, sleep disturbances; sciatic pains are some of the signs—and now a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has written a remarkably interesting free book that tells of other symptoms and just what they mean. No longer should a man approaching or past the prime of life be content to regard these pains and conditions as inevitable signs of approaching age. Already more than 20,000 men have used the amazing method described in this book to restore their health and strength and ambition. Send immediately for this book. If you will mail your request to The Electro Thermal Company, 570-B Macy Bldg., Steubenville, Ohio, the concern that is distributing this book for the author, it will be sent to you absolutely free without obligation. Simply send name and address. But don't delay, for the edition of this book is limited.

Medical News Service of St. Louis Tuberculosis Society

No. 3—Modes of Infection in Tuberculosis.

This is the third of a series of articles on matters pertaining to tuberculosis which are being prepared by medical experts and distributed among St. Louis physicians by the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis. The others will be sent out every two weeks, and will contain the latest medical information on the subject.

In attempting to determine by what route or routes tubercle bacilli enter and lodge in the human body we can possibly best orient ourselves by stating that this presents different problems when we consider, first, the route of infection in the child as compared to the adult; and secondly, the rouet of infection by the human type as compared to that taken by the bovine type of tubercle bacillus.

Before we turn, however, to the consideration of these specific phases of infection, we may well state that primary infection directly into the blood stream, to the meninges or through the genitourinary tract can practically be dismissed as occuring rarely, if ever. Primary infection through the skin may and does occur in a limited number of cases, but is unimportant as bearing upon the widespread infection with the tubercle bacillus as occurring in the human race. There remain then as the two important portals for entry the respiratory and the digestive systems.

We must, however, appreciate the fact that the tubercle bacillus, in order to invade and grow in the body, must, in every case, pass through a layer of mucous membrane in either of these systems. The organism is not motile, so it is most probable that it is carried through this layer in the bodies of moving cells—in all probability in leukocytes—and thus it comes to lie in lymph spaces, may enter the lymph stream and may be carried to distant parts of the body, usually, however, lodging in lymph nodes. Usually the bacillus passes through the mucous membrane without leaving any lesion at the point of entrance.

In children we find an increasing occurrence of tuberculous infection, until adult ages are reached, when 75 per cent to 90 per cent of individuals are or have been infected. In other words, the great majority of persons become infected before middle age. However, we must always keep clearly in mind the distinction between infection and active disease. And it is likely that most of these infections occur as a result of inhalation of dust containing tubercle bacilli, or of droplets coughed or sneezed by a tuberculous individual or direct contact with the fresh sputum. The child being close to the ground, and playing upon the floor or on the ground, has constant opportunity to pick up the dust of dried sputum. The dust being inhaled may lodge in the tonsil and the primary route may be through these organs, or the dust may be carried down to the alveoli of the lung and through the alveolar walls into the lymphatic system of the lung, or finally, and probably most infrequent, the organism may be swallowed and pass into the body through the wall of the intestinal tract.

Considering for a moment infection with the bovine type of tubercle bacillus, which occurs principally in children, it can be said that this latter route, through the intestinal canal, is the usual one, but here inhalation plays little or no part, since infection with the bovine tubercle bacillus results usually from the ingestion of milk containing this organisms, in this respect we may contrast infection with the bovine bacillus with infection with the human type.

Since most persons already have been infected before they reach adult ages, and since it is questionable whether a person who is once infected will acquire a second primary infection, we should possibly consider most cases of adult disease as being really secondary to and metastatic from the lesions of the early infection of childhood. It is possible that some cases do not follow this course, and that a second infection does occur in adult years. It is by no means certain that infection from without does not occur.

It is evident then that in considering infection with the tubercle bacillus we must consider the earlier years of life as the most important period, and inhalation as the most important factor in acquiring infection.

DAWES 'DAVIS CUP DONOR'

French Paper, Unfriendly to General's Reparations Plan, Makes Error.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 23.—Vice President Dawes is known to be a man of varied interests, but it remained for a French provincial paper to identify the General as the donor of the world-famous Davis cup for tennis. With the first round of the Davis cup matches in full swing in Vienna, Amsterdam, Brussels, Warsaw and Berne, the newspaper, which has nationalistic political leanings and looks upon the Dawes reparation settlement plan rather unfavorably, has taken a hand at commenting on the tennis situation in Europe.

"General Dawes has given Europe a reparations plan which may be discussed and criticised, and in the operation of which France does not appear to receive all her due. The General, however, also has given a perfectly good cup to be disputed by the tennis world, and it is up to France to make up for some of her defeats at the hands of Americans by carrying away the General's cup."

A large memorial drinking fountain, being erected just inside the entrance to Forest Park at Skinker and Forsythe boulevard by the American Federation of Musicians in commemoration of two St. Louis musicians, Owen Miller and Otto Ostendorf, members and officers of the Federation, will be unveiled and presented to the city at 10 a. m. next Sunday.

The presentation will be made by Joseph N. Weber of New York, president of the federation. Mayor Miller will be invited to accept the fountain on behalf of the city. Frank Gecks, president of the St. Louis Musicians' Association and conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, will preside. A band of 125 local musicians will render several selections.

The memorial to Miller and Ostendorf was voted by the federation because of their work in furtherance of music and to the local chapter of the National Federation. Miller and Ostendorf served for more than 20 years as secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the National Federation.

The fountain will be composed of a stone stela 14 feet high, on the front of which will be a decorated panel and memorial tablet, both in bronze. The panel, which was executed by Prof. Victor Holm of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, has as a design the subject of Pan in the

SUFFRAGE BILL 6 YEARS OLD

French Women Don't Seem Worried Over Issue.

PARIS, May 23.—Woman's emancipation seems slow in coming in France, but none except the militants appear to be worrying about it. Horsewomen were barred from riding astride in a recent horseshow, so they ocilely took the jumps in the old sidesaddle. A bill for universal suffrage has been pending in the French Parliament for six years, and although a well organized party campaigns steadily for votes, women's enthusiasm in France never has reached the big parade and window smashing stages once known in the United States and in England.

Eggs Popular With Athletes.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, May 4.—The age-old question as to whether a meat or vegetable diet is more beneficial for athletes came up for solution at the recent sport exhibition. The answer is still missing. In an exhaustive investigation active sportsmen insisted they could not get along on an exclusively vegetable diet and that their systems required fairly large quantities of meat. Eggs appeared to be the most popular article of food with a majority of athletes in training.

RUSSIANS AND CHINESE AT ODDS IN MANCHURIA

Increasingly Tense Situation Manifest Over Railway Issue.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.

PEKIN, May 23.—An increasingly tense situation in Manchuria is growing out of the Chinese Eastern railway issue. There is growing evidence of an anti-soviet attitude on the part of Gen. Chang Tso Lin, Chinese Dictator of Manchuria, which is aggravated by the Russians supplying arms to the "Christian General," Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang.

The difference among the Chinese and Russian railway administrators arose in March, when the Chinese chairman of the board of directors tendered his resignation owing to the alleged high-handed and illegal actions of the soviet general manager, Ivanoff, regarding the appointment of higher officials and to the increasing tariffs discriminating against Chinese goods without the board's sanction.

Later Ivanoff further antagonized the Chinese by issuing an order June 1 dismissing all employes not soviet Russian or Chinese citizens. This affected more than a thousand Russians of the Czarist regime who do not acknowledge allegiance to Moscow, Poles and other nationals who are able and veteran employes of the railway. Recently Gen. Pao Kuei-Ching, president of the railway, issued an order cancelling Ivanoff's ruling on the grounds that the Russian general manager acted without the directorate's consent.

Ambassador Karakhan then instructed the soviet railway officials to disregard Pao Kuie-Ching's order, contending that under the 1924 agreements such an order required the signatures of both the president and vice president. The latter official is the soviet Consul at Harbin.

Now Karakhan has protested to the Chinese Foreign Office, alleging that the Chinese authorities are illegally seizing railway lands and rentals.

POPULAR ST. LOUIS DRUG CLERK INDORSES HERB JUICE AS THE GREATEST MEDICINE OF ALL TIME

Says He Used It Himself With Wonderful Results, and That It Has Proven to Be the Most Satisfactory Medicine He Has Ever Sold to His Trade

MR. HARRY DUERR.

"During the fifteen years I have spent in the drug business," said Mr. Duerr, who resides at 2915 Lemp avenue, St. Louis, "I have sold thousands—yes, hundreds of thousands of different kinds of medicines for stomach trouble and constipation. Some I found would help while taking, others would give relief for a short time only. Still there was something lacking in all of them, and I was always a little skeptical about recommending them to a customer. About two months ago I started selling Herb Juice, which I admit I thought was just another advertised product, and treated it as such. In a short time, however, I began to sit up and take notice, as hundreds of my customers were coming back for two and three bottles more and telling me it was the most satisfactory treatment they had ever used for constipation, stomach, kidney and liver trouble. I was personally acquainted with a number of those who had used Herb Juice and I knew they were reliable. So I decided to try it myself, as I have been bothered a great deal in the last few years with my stomach; was always constipated and have had rheumatism since I was just a boy. The first bottle proved to me that it is a medicine of exceptional merit. I have now taken four bottles and I can truthfully say that I feel better than I have in years.

"Before I used Herb Juice I was always bilious; gas would form on my stomach after eating, which caused me a heavy bloated feeling. I was losing in weight and seemed to be in a general run-down condition. But now I feel like a new man. I am never bothered with gas; my bowels act regular; my stomach and kidneys are in excellent condition; never have a rheumatic pain and gained six pounds in weight.

"I know Herb Juice will do all that is claimed for it. I feel perfectly safe and take great pleasure in recommending it to my customers, or to anyone, and I really believe that Herb Juice is the greatest tonic laxative of all time."

The Herb Juice man has established headquarters at Bridge & Dolph Drug Company, 514 Washington Avenue, where he will meet the local public daily, introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.

18-STORY BUILDING AT FOURTH AND LOCUST STREETS

Excavation Under Way for Structure on Southeast Corner—Plot Is 60x80 Feet.

WORK PROGRESSING ON OTHER PROJECTS

Several Offers for Buckingham Hotel and Site May Result in Sale of the Property.

By Berry Moore.

Excavation has been started for an 18-story fire-proof building to be erected on a plot 60 by 80 feet, at the southeast corner of Fourth and Locust streets by interests represented by Isaac T. Cook & Co., downtown real estate specialists.

The Seiden-Breck Construction Co. has been awarded the contract for the new building, which will cost $1,000,000 exclusive of the site. The plans were made by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, under whose supervision the building will be erected. The height of the structure will be all the more pronounced owing to the restricted area of the plot.

The site was acquired through William R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., with plans originally for a 14-story structure, but it was decided later to increase the height to 18 stories. Cook & Co. will have the management of the building.

Fourth Street Revival.

This project is of extreme interest as marking the revival of Fourth street, which had been a comparatively dormant section of the St. Louis real estate market, prior to the erection of the new Federal Reserve Bank Building, occupying the entire block facing Broadway, Fourth and Locust streets. It is also worthy of note as the third large building project to materialize on Locust street this year.

The obsolete structures at the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets are fast being dismantled to make way for the 25-story theater and office building to be built by Skouras Bros., and which will cost more than $5,000,000 with the site.

Chicago Architects.

This building was designed by Chicago architects with Isaac T. Cook & Co. collaborating. Applications for offices in the building are also materializing, according to Cook & Co., which will have its management.

This improvement is expected to add substantially to values of real estate in this vicinity, according to real estate authorities.

Though the structure of the Mercantile Trust Co., occupying the entire west half of this block, is only three stories in height, including the mansard, its foundation and superstructure provide for a 17-story structure. The building hardly will be extended to this height, however, unless the site should become too valuable to confine to the company's business or unless the growth of the banking establishment should necessitate it, which is not unlikely, in view of past performances.

Work is progressing on a 12-story office building at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Locust streets, and on the new building for the Roxana Petroleum Co. at Thirteenth and Locust streets, also to be 12 stories in height.

Transactions out of the ordinary continue to characterize the real estate movement in the residential, as well as the business areas, and with diversification of character.

Offers for Buckingham.

Orson E. and R. G. Scott received several attractive offers during the week for the Buckingham Hotel building and site at Kingshighway and West Pine boulevard, the indications being that negotiations for this holding will soon take tangible form.

This property is owned by a company of which Orson E. Scott is president. Scott admitted yesterday that negotiations for the property were progressing.

Contracts have been closed through John Grether & Co., with offices in the International Life Building, for a large plot at the northwest corner of Skinker road and Forsythe boulevard, as a site for a presentious residence. Ownership of the purchaser is withheld.

The site was acquired through William R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., with plans originally for a 14-story structure, but it was decided later to increase the height to 18 stories. Cook & Co. will have the management of the building.

Fourth Street Revival.

This project is of extreme interest as marking the revival of Fourth street, which had been a comparatively dormant section of the St. Louis real estate market, prior to the erection of the new Federal Reserve Bank Building, occupying the entire block facing Broadway, Fourth and Locust streets. It is also worthy of note as the third large building project to materialize on Locust street this year.

The obsolete structures at the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets are fast being dismantled to make way for the 25-story theater and office building to be built by Skouras Bros., and which will cost more than $5,000,000 with the site.

Chicago Architects.

This building was designed by Chicago architects with Isaac T. Cook & Co. collaborating. Applications for offices in the building are also materializing, according to Cook & Co., which will have its management.

This improvement is expected to add substantially to values of real estate in this vicinity, according to real estate authorities.

Though the structure of the Mercantile Trust Co., occupying the entire west half of this block, is only three stories in height, including the mansard, its foundation and superstructure provide for a 17-story structure. The building hardly will be extended to this height, however, unless the site should become too valuable to confine to the company's business or unless the growth of the banking establishment should necessitate it, which is not unlikely, in view of past performances.

Work is progressing on a 12-story office building at the southwest corner of Eleventh and Locust streets, and on the new building for the Roxana Petroleum Co. at Thirteenth and Locust streets, also to be 12 stories in height.

Transactions out of the ordinary continue to characterize the real estate movement in the residential, as well as the business areas, and with diversification of character.

Offers for Buckingham.

Oreon E. and R. G. Scott received several attractive offers during the week for the Buckingham Hotel building and site at Kingshighway and West Pine boulevard, the indications being that negotiations for this holding will soon take tangible form.

This property is owned by a company of which Oreon E. Scott is president. Scott admitted yesterday that negotiations for the property were progressing.

Contracts have been closed through John Grether & Co., with offices in the International Life Building, for a large plot at the northwest corner of Skinker road and Forsythe boulevard, as a site for a pretentious residence. Identity of the purchaser is withheld, pending completeion of the transaction.

A sale of the site was once negotiated by Grether to the United Hebrew Congregation for a synagogue. It was never concluded, however, owing to restrictions which prohibited the erection of buildings of this character on the site, one of the most imposing on Skinker road opposite Forest Park.

Mars Pl. Active.

Sales in Mars place on Natural Bridge road were a feature of the week in the close-in subdivision field. These included four two and four family flat buildings. This addition is being handled by the Wagner-Grant-Bell Real Estate Co., with C. E. Cravens as sales manager. The company also effected the sales of two handsome residences, one at 6350 Pershing avenue, to Jeanette Gillespie and the other, 6317 Washington avenue to B. P. Bransford, sales manager of Carr-Trombley Co.

BRISK SALES IN NEW DELMAR TRACT

53 Lots Sold in Addition; Streets and Sewers Being Built.

Sales continue on a brisk scale in New Delmar Heights, on Delmar boulevard and on the North and South road, adjoining University on the west, acording to William J. Abbott & Co.

A total of 53 lots already have been sold in this addition to date. Impetus was given to sales here during the week with the announcement that contracts had been let for concrete streets throughout the addition, an improvement which will place it on a par with other high-class additions in the University City area.

Sewers, including storm sewers, water and gas mains are being installed, together with the construction of streets and sidewalks. The tract is right in the path of the development and accordingly is regarded as offering decided speculative opportunities. Many lots have been reserved for duplex bungalows.

TWO LARGE SALES REPORTED BY THE SINGER-KLEIN CO.

The Singer-Klein Realty Co. reports the sale of the fireproof garage building at 5617 Pershing avenue. This two-story concrete structure, on a lot 80 by 179 feet, with a modern ramp leading to second floor from the street level, is under lease for a long term. The purchaser, Albert Saifer, bought for investment. The price was in the neighborhood of $100,000. M. I. Robbins of the Singer-Klein Realty Co. handled the transaction.

The company also reports the sale of two six-family apartment buildings at 5792 and 5796 Westminster place, each apartment having four rooms, sun parlor and sleeping porch. The rental of property is about $12,000 a year. The property was purchased by Samuel Glickman for investment. The Singer-Klein company will have the management of the property. The price was approximately $70,000.

SOUTHWEST PARK LOTS SALES TOTAL $24,887 FOR WEEK

R. A. Newsham of the Schollmeyer Development Co., selling organization for Southwest Park, on Watson boulevard between Marquette and Pernod avenue, reports marked activity in the sale of this property.

"The work of grading the property is well advanced," said Mr. Newsham, "and last week the graders brought Marquette avenue to grade which will permit the installation of a five-foot walk on the west portion of the property. Work on the sidewalks will be started within the next 10 days. As fast as the grading and walks are installed trees will be set out.

"Twenty-four thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven dollars' worth of lots were sold in Southwest Park last week by the sales force of 12 men."

The proposed 34-acre "Lindenwood Park" is located across the street from this property and the Russell-Lindenwood bus line runs within three blocks. Hampton avenue, the new 80-foot bond issue boulevard, borders Southwest Park on the east.

EMBASSY APARTMENT BONDS TO BE OFFERED

Greenebaum Sons Investment Co. will this week offer $610,000 first mortgage 6¼ per cent serial real estate bonds on the Embassy apartment building being erected at the southeast corner of Union and Washington boulevard, on a site 155x142 feet in extent. The bonds will be offered in $100, $500 and $1000 denominations, maturing semiannually in two and one-half to 12 years, with 2 per cent Federal normal income tax paid by the borrowers.

The Embassy apartment building will be eight-story and basement high, of highest grade fire-proof construction; it will contain a total of 322 rooms, divided into 78 suites of from two to five rooms and equipped in the most modern manner; also includes a 40-car garage on the rear of the lot. The house was built by Jackson Johnson for his daughter, Mrs. Lee J. Niedringhaus.

OPENING SALE TODAY IN NORTH - POINT ADDITION

The Better Built Home & Mortgage Co. announces the spring opening sale of North-Pointe addition will be held today.

The streets, sewers and sidewalks have been completed in this tract, and the property is ready for building—in fact, two bungalows, which wil cost approximately $10,000 each, have been started.

The Better Built Home & Mortgage Co. developed Delmar Garden, Hi-Pointe, Hi-Pointe Addition and North St. Louis Heights, and is now developing DeMun Park. Officers of the company announce that North-Pointe addition will receive the same supervision as the above-mentioned subdivisions, with the idea of making it equally as beautiful, as well as successful from a financial standpoint, as any of the other tracts they have previously developed.

The property is restricted, some sections permitting flats, others bungalows, as well as a business section being provided for. The lots are wide and deep, and can be purchased in any size desired.

North-Pointe addition is reached by taking the Bellefontaine car to the end of the line. Automobiles may drive straight west on Florissant avenue, direct to the property at Kingshighway Northwest. Both Union and Florissant busses go direct to the property.

The Baldwin Construction Co. are making arrangements and plans for 20 new four and five room flats. The Alcamilo Construction Co. are completing five double flats on McDonald avenue. The Charles H. Final arrangements have been completed for the installation banquet of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, to be held Wednesday evening, May 27, at the Hotel Statler, at 6 o'clock, at which time John J. Dowling, president of the John J. Dowling Real Estate Co., and a past vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be installed as president of the St. Louis organization, and Messrs. William W. Butts, president of the Butts Realty Co.; Joseph M. Darst, vice president of the Joseph Darst Realty Co.; John W. Gibson, president of the John W. LOAN COMPANY WILL OCCUPY NEW QUARTERS ABOUT JUNE 1

The Citizens' Loan & Savings Co. has leased the southeast corner of Seventh and Pine streets, ground floor of the Fullerton building, for a term of years from the Fullerton estate and will occupy the premises as soon as the extensive alterations that are being made are completed, which should be about June 1. The change of location became necessary because expansion of the business of the company rendered the present quarters at 116 North Seventh street inadequate.

The newly formed Citizens' Acceptance Co. will be joint tenants with the loan company, the officers of both companies being Roy F. Britton, president; Henry C. Garneau, vice president; John C. Tobin, vice president and counsel, and E. F. Singleton, secretary and treasurer. The board of directors is composed of some of the best known business men of St. Louis.

MULLIN-WALTERS REALTY CO. CLOSES 3 COMMERCIAL LEASES

NEW SUBDIVISION IN UNIVERSITY CITY

Improvements Being Installed on Partridge Heights—Tract to Be Auctioned June 6.

A new subdivision is being laid out in University City and improvements are being installed. Developments now under way include ornamental entrances, paved streets, curbing, sidewalks, sanitary and storm sewers, water and gas mains, electricity and landscaping.

The tract is bounded on the west by Partridge avenue, which is a paved street connecting Olive Street road and Page avenue, about 7200 west. On the east it is bounded by Pennsylvania avenue and Benoist avenue forms the northern boundary of the tract. Two new streets, Camden and Dover, are cut through the property so as to form a circular drive ending in a formal entrance with brick columns.

A large amount of grading already has been done and the balance will be completed soon, leaving a gentle slope from Partridge avenue, which is one of the highest streets in the county, to Pennsylvania avenue.

The property is to be sold at auction, Saturday, June 6, on the premises. It will be sold in units of 20 feet, with an average depth of 125 feet, a minimum of two units to a customer, which means the lots will be not less than 40 feet wide each.

The property is restricted and can be reached by automobile via Olive Street road or Page avenue to Partridge avenue, or by street car via the Midland route which goes west on Page, starting at the Hodiamont car tracks and Page avenue.

This subdivision has aroused a great amount of interest because it is practically the last tract of high ground in University City suitable for subdividing.

SIX-ACRE TRACT ADJOINING CARONDELET PARK IS SOLD

J. I. Epstein & Son report the purchase of 6¼ acres of ground fronting on Morganford road and adjoining Carondelet Park and Holly Hills, the new subdivision now under development on the south side. The property adjoins land already owned by Epstein & Son and makes their total holdings in this vicinity about 21 acres. Plans are being drawn for the laying out of a subdivision.

The company also reports the sale of 625 Northwood avenue, three-family apartment in "De Mun Park." The sale was made to a client of the office, for the account of the Wagner, Grant, Bell Realty Co., at a consideration reported to be $10,000.

Other sales reported by the company are: Property on the north side of Southwood avenue in "De Mun Park," sold for the account of Jacob Althaus to the E. L. Wagner Construction Co., where three and six family apartments will be built. No. 20 Arundel place, a seven-room residence in Hill Crest, sold for the account of Albert and Bessie Saifer to a client of the office. A lot on the north side of Theiss avenue sold for Edgar B. Woolfolk to Frederick Folk. A lot in Fletcher Park sold to Francis H. Dill for the account of the Kirkwood Park Realty Co., and 124 feet of ground on Thirty-fifth street, East St. Louis, to Louis L. Horen.

BUILDING OPERATIONS ACTIVE IN UNIVERSITY CITY TRACT

Building operations in University Park and in University Hills, lying respectively on the north and south side of Delmar boulevard, form the feature of the real estate movement in University City. Both tracts are being built up on a large scale and indications are that they will be entirely out of the market so far as the Cyrus-Crane-Wilmore organization, selling agents, is concerned. A majority of the lots have been purchased by home seekers with building plans.

Surface and underground improvements in this addition are of the highest type and are included at the prices at which the lots are being sold. Restrictions insure a high standard of construction in these two additions.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE UNDER WAY IN BEL-NOR TRACT

Improvements are being installed in Bel-Nor, a 160-acre tract that is being subdivided by the Bel-Nor Realty Co.

Improvements include reinforced concrete streets, sidewalks, sewers, water, gas and electricity. The property is located just west of Natural Bridge road and is directly opposite the Bellerive Country Club. The Normandy Golf Club adjoins it on the south and the Marillac Seminary is immediately east. Several homes are under construction, among them a home for C. H. Lakebrink, cashier of the Northwestern Trust Co.

The MANSION

"The Show Place of St. Louis"

You will experience the thrill of a lifetime as you enter the doorway and see the huge living room, 28x36 feet, and the magnificent dining room, 22x36 feet, both decorated and furnished according to the latest ideas of interior decorating.

You will admire the lovely furniture in its summery garb, the "Strozzi" suite in the dining room, the hangings, fixtures and mirrors. Then on into two other large rooms, containing the newest ideas in wall decorations. See the "Dance of the Nymphs," something novel in wall papers, in the study, also the old-fashioned fireplace.

The Mansion is open every day in the week, including Sunday, from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Make it your country club. Decorations and furnishings by

Exhibit of Two-Family Homes

Plans and sketches of the modern type of two-family dwellings being erected in Davis Place are on exhibition under the beautiful tent.

Reasons Why You Can Make Profits in

DAVIS PLACE—

¶ Davis Place immediately adjoins the solid building line of the city—property there can be bought for $70.00 per foot—two families to a lot cut the cost to $35.00 a foot per family—in every other desirable district, where even flats can be built, property is selling at $90.00 to $120.00 a foot. Think what DAVIS PLACE will bring the investor when the Davis Realty Company completes its $1,000,000.00 building program—$375,000.00 for street improvements alone—eleven two-family dwellings now under construction. DAVIS PLACE is different—it is restricted to two-family dwellings — architects will have to go inside to know whether they are for one family or two families. NOW is the time to buy — you can carry one of these lots with a reasonable cash payment and balance monthly — good judges of real estate are buying in blocks of two to five lots each. Buy now (don't wait) in Davis Place. Let St. Louis' mighty growth make profits for you.

Two-Family dwelling now being erected on Crescent Avenue in Davis Place by Ross Crane.

For your reserve fund—for any emergency—for an educational fund for your children—for the new home, or new business, later on—we recommend (no matter what other investments you make) our FIRST MORTGAGE 6% REAL ESTATE GOLD BONDS. Sold in denominations of $50 to $1000.

St. Louis' famous musical organization, will give a program of popular and operatic selections at

in DAVIS PLACE

Under the personal direction of Mr. P. G. Anton, for 32 years a member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. The orchestra will play your favorite selection upon request. Mr. Anton's repertoire is large. His music is delightful. You will enjoy every minute. There is no obligation. The public is welcome. Weather permitting, the music will be on the veranda. If it is too cool there is plenty of room inside. Comfortable chairs for everyone. Parking space for 1000 cars, free.

How to Reach Davis Place

Owing to Clayton road being torn up, drive out to the City of Clayton to west side of Court House, then south on North and South Road to the entrance.

The Greatest Opportunity Is, in ST. LOUIS Today

St. Louis offers the greatest opportunity in the country today for the wide-awake individual to make money.

The City is starting on the largest building program in the entire country, totaling one billion, two hundred-fifty million dollars. St. Louis has one of the best all-year-round climates of any city in the United States.

It is fast becoming the steel center. James J. Hill predicted a number of years ago that "some day Northern iron ore and Illinois coke will meet in St. Louis. I foresee the time when St. Louis will become the steel making center of the United States. The whole manufacturing complexion of this section of the country will be changed because of this fact."

Mr. Hill's vision came true in March, 1921, when the St. Louis Coke and Iron Company began to use the new "Roberts Process" to make Illinois coal into coke, suitable for the manufacture of steel.

United States Senator Owen recently stated—"St. Louis can surpass Pittsburgh as a steel and iron center."

Raw materials to make a ton of pig iron can be assembled at $3.50 a ton cheaper in St. Louis than in Chicago.

St. Louis has the greatest varied manufacturing interest of any city today and leads in many lines.

People are starting to realize the great advantages that St. Louis offers and are moving here in surprising numbers. More will follow as the Bond Issue work gets further under way.

We predict that the city will double in population with these wonderful opportunities for the citizens of this new Greater St. Louis.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

A READER. — Advertise and watch the advertising for a selection as French translator.

D. T.—The real name of Tom Thumb, the famous dwarf, was Charles S. Stratton. He was born in 1838 and died in 1883.

P.-D. READER.—You might go to a good hair dresser and see if she can repair the damage done by using the hair dye.

Thanks.—The hawthorn has been chosen by the State Legislature as the Missouri State flower. The wood violet is the Illinois State Flower, the wild rose the Iowa State flower.

Pinochle.—The origin of playing cards is unknown, although it is recorded that they appeared in Europe in 1350. However, it is claimed that the Arabs used playing cards at a much earlier date.

C. A. B.—It should be possible to remove the stains from the bath tub and sink with the ordinary household scouring powders, but if those will not suffice, rub the spots with a piece of cloth moistened with a weak solution of oxalic acid. The solution can be made by dissolving one teaspoonful of oxalic acid crystals in a half glass of hot water.

RANKEN.— We do not find a formula for a fire extinguisher containing all of the ingredients which you mention. Perhaps the following preparation will suffice: One hundred and eighty-four parts calcium chloride, 57 parts magnesium chloride, 12 parts sodium chloride, parts potassium bromide, 3 parts barium chloride, sufficient water to make 1000 parts. Dissolve and fill into hand grenades.

JR. C. F.—You are probably living in a new subdivision which accounts for the lack of mail service. There will be no service in newly laid out tracts until the streets and sidewalks are made and the block is half occupied. If there are six families living on the Elizabeth avenue block, notify the postoffice, superintendent of deliveries, and a man will be sent out to investigate the matter and establish carrier service if it is advisable.

Anxious Louise.—To remove the ink stain first soak the shirt in clean warm water, remove the superfluous moisture, then spread the fabric over a clean cloth. Allow a few minims of strong ammonia water, specific gravity 0.891, to drop on the ink spot, then saturate a small piece of absorbent cotton-wool with dilute phosphoric acid, B. P., and apply it repeatedly and with firm pressure over the stain. Repeat this process two or three times, finally rinse well in warm water and dry it in the sun. This method will remove old or fresh ink stains and will not injure the fabric.

CHAS.-K.—The bluing of gun barrels is effected by heating evenly in a muffle until the desired blue color is raised, first making the barrel clean and bright with emery cloth, using no marks of grease or dirt upon the metal when the bluing takes place, then allow to cool in the air. Considerable experience is required to obtain an even, clear blue. Another method to blue gun barrels is to apply the following mixture with a small sponge: Dissolve 2 parts of crystallized ferric chloride or iron, 2 parts of chloride of antimony, 1 part gallic acid in 4 or 5 parts of water. After the application let the gun dry in the air, repeat the process two or three times, then wash with water and dry. Rub with boiled linseed oil to deepen the shade. Repeat this until you are satisfied with the result.

ETHEL. — A rich strawberry shortcake is made as follows: Two cups flour, ¼ cup sugar, 4 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains nutmeg, 1 egg, 1-3 cup butter, 1-3 cup milk. Mix the dry ingredients and sift twice, work in the shortening with the tips of the fingers, add the egg well beaten, then the milk. Put in buttered tin and bake. Split the cake and spread the under layer with a sauce made as follows: One egg, 1 cup powdered sugar, ½ cup thick cream, ½ cup milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Beat the white of an egg until it is stiff, add the yolk of the egg well beaten, then the sugar gradually; dilute the cream with the milk, beat until it is stiff, combine the mixtures and flavor. Over the layer of sauce spread strawberries which have been sprinkled with powdered sugar, again spread the sauce, and cover with the upper layer of the cake.

ALLIES WANT GERMAN STAFF REORGANIZED

Destruction of Certain Munitions Works Also Demanded —Security Pact Discussed.

BY SAMUEL SPEWACK.
Berlin Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

BERLIN, May 23.— Dispatches from Paris and London published here indicate the Allies will insist upon complete reorganization of the German general staff, the demolition of certain munitions works and the decentralization of the national police.

The nationalists, who today accuse Foreign Minister Stresemann of treason as the Deutsch Zeitung did tonight, because he said Germany was no more responsible for the war than the Allies (the Deutsch Zeitung does not believe Germany in any way responsible) will find it unbearable to bow their heads to military control.

But Germany will not submit immediately. She has justifiable ground for argument. She will point out that the Allies themselves violate the Versailles treaty in refusing to vacate the Rhineland within the period agreed upon. She will point out how her desire for peace as evidenced in her proposal for a security pact. She will deny military violations.

The Government is watching carefully the fate of the security pact which is viewed with but scant enthusiasm here and is as befogged in a cloud of ambiguity. Germany's real anxiety concerns itself with the report of the Military Commission. Upon this hinges the problem of evacuation of Cologne and also of the Ruhr. Germany has no desire to be in the position of bargaining for evacuation by submitting to military demands for, as she will point out, evacuation was promised to her both in the treaty and in the London agreement. Nonetheless, Germany will have to submit to the ultimatum and unless all signs are wrong she will submit with bad grace.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, May 23.—The French reply on the German security pact proposition sent to London last week has not yet been accepted by Secretary Chamberlain who has requested explanations on many points. The reply has been modified by Quai d'Orsay in a manner which is expected to meet with approval in London and was sent back yesterday. It will be communicated to Berlin next week.

NEGRO HELD IN LIQUOR CASE AFTER ATTACK ON DETECTIVE

Peddler of "White Mule" Encounters Agent; Broke Part of Stock, but Not Enough.

While peddling "white mule" liquor from door to door by the drink, which he served in a glass to purchasers, negro employes of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad living in box cars at Second street and Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, Sam Weddington, a negro of 204 North Second street, East St. Louis, was arrested by a special agent of the railroad company. He carried his wares in a basket on his arm.

On the way to the East St. Louis police station, Weddington resisted arrest, the agent said, striking him over the head with his basket of stock, breaking all but one pint bottle which is being preserved with the basket for evidence. The negro was charged with violating the East St. Louis city liquor ordinance and attempt to kill.

CONVICT DISAPPEARS AT WORK

Believed to Have Hidden Himself in a Load of Goods.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 23.—Arthur E. Wilson, alias Jack Allen, 26-year-old convict from Lafayette County, disappeared at the State Penitentiary yesterday afternoon. He was supposed to have been at work in the cutting room of one of the clothing factories when he vanished. He had served only three months of a six-year sentence for forgery. Prison officials believe Wilson made his way out of prison by secreting himself in a load of manufactured goods on a truck. On several occasions convicts have remained in hiding about the factories and buildings inside the prison for three or four days, without detection, while waiting an opportunity to escape over the walls.

BIG GOLD SHIPMENT BY SOVIET

Bars of Value of £2,000,000 Reach London From Leningrad.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 23.—Gold valued at £2,000,000, some of it in bars said to bear the United States Government stamp, has just arrived in London from Leningrad, says the Daily Mail. The metal was consigned by the Soviet State Bank and deposited in the Bank of England to the credit of Arcos, Ltd., the All-Russian co-operative societies' trading organization.

Extreme precautions for secrecy were taken when the gold was unloaded from the Soviet Government steamer Gercen. Boxes were placed in a motor truck and covered with posters advertising Danish bacon and taken to the Bank of England vaults under heavy guard.

CLOSE HARMONY

Drawn for the Post-Dispatch by HELEN WILLIAMS VANCE.

Why Do They Run Away?

Dr. William Nelson, director of the St. Louis Child Guidance Clinic, explains why so many children persist in leaving their good homes for life in the street.

By Harry R. Burke

MARY HALL of Kansas City, stage-struck at the age of 11, was bound for Broadway when a St. Louis policeman found her asleep on a Compton avenue street car on the night of April 21. Three days before, Mary had found Sunday school monotonous. Besides, she had failed to memorize her text. So she walked out of the Lindenwood Presbyterian Church in Kansas City, penniless so far as her father, John W. Hall of 2314 East Twenty-eighth street, Kansas City, knew—except for the coin she had been given for the collection box.

How had this tot crossed the State of Missouri?

"I got on a bus," she told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "It went to Excelsior Springs and I stayed two days, drinking a lot of water and having a good time. I didn't have any money; but I just went to the hotel and registered. When I was ready to leave I stepped out. Maybe the clerk didn't know I was leaving for good.

"There was a man standing on a patch of grass swinging a club. He was all dressed up with fancy golf clothes. I went up and told him there wasn't any ball at his feet. He laughed and thanked me. Then I thought of something and began to look sad. He asked me what was the matter and I told him I just had to have $7. So he gave me $7 of his own money. That's how I came to St. Louis."

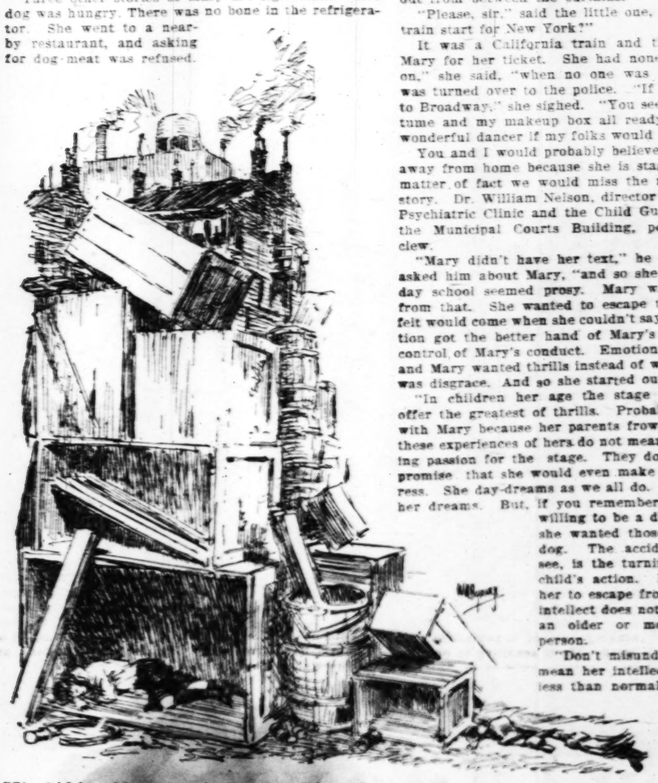
Then Mary offered to pose for the Post-Dispatch photographer—in her most fetching theatrical positions.

It may be that Mary's gift for dramatizing her day dreams caused her to invent the Excelsior Springs details. It is enough that she had traveled across Missouri in a way that seems impossible. But even more surprising is it that Mary, just the day before she started East for Broadway, had returned home from another runaway trip to St. Joseph.

"It's beyond me," said her mother. "She has no bad companions. She reads and reads all the time, and her life seems to be wrapped up in the stage.

"We've never given Mary stage training or dancing lessons or the like—we've tried every way to get that nonsense out of her head—yet she would run off to every amateur-night performance she could find and do a little dancing act which she made up herself."

Three other stories of Mary are significant. Her dog was hungry. There was no bone in the refrigerator. She went to a nearby restaurant, and asking for dog meat was refused.



"She hid in odd corners during the night—slept usually under a pile of boxes."

MARY HALL OF KANSAS CITY. The 11-year-old girl who makes a specialty of running away.

"But I'll wash dishes for you until I've paid for it," she said. Her offer was accepted. Mary washed the dishes. Collie got his bones.

One day last December she was found by police lying, apparently unconscious, on a busy downtown Kansas City street. An ambulance took the child to the hospital. She quickly "came to."

"I must have fainted," she explained. "Please take me to my papa and mamma."

She was sent home. There Mary explained that she had spent her carfare while downtown and "fainted" so she might get a ride back home.

And one night not long ago a Pullman porter entered his car at the Union Station in Kansas City and was startled when a child's bobbed head was thrust out from between the curtains.

"Please, sir," said the little one, "when does this train start for New York?"

It was a California train and the porter asked Mary for her ticket. She had none. "I just crept on," she said, "when no one was looking." Mary was turned over to the police. "If I could only get to Broadway," she sighed. "You see, I have my costume and my makeup box all ready. I could be a wonderful dancer if my folks would let me."

You and I would probably believe that Mary runs away from home because she is stage-struck. As a matter of fact we would miss the real clew in her story. Dr. William Nelson, director of the St. Louis Psychiatric Clinic and the Child Guidance Clinic in the Municipal Courts Building, pointed out that clew.

"Mary didn't have her text," he told me when I asked him about Mary, "and so she ran away. Sunday school seemed prosy. Mary wanted to escape from that. She wanted to escape the disgrace she felt would come when she couldn't say her text. Emotion got the better hand of Mary's intellect in the control of Mary's conduct. Emotion feeds on thrills and Mary wanted thrills instead of what she thought was disgrace. And so she started out for Broadway.

"In children her age the stage often seems to offer the greatest of thrills. Probably the more so with Mary because her parents frown upon it. But these experiences of hers do not mean an overwhelming passion for the stage. They do not necessarily promise that she would even make a mediocre actress. She day-dreams as we all do. She dramatizes her dreams. But, if you remember, she was quite willing to be a dishwasher when she wanted those bones for her dog. The accidental fact, you see, is the turning point of the child's action. Emotion directs her to escape from the fact. Her intellect does not control as with an older or more experienced person.

"Don't misunderstand. I don't mean her intellect is necessarily less than normal. It may even be far above the normal child's. But the normal person, whether young or old, must have a balance of emotions and those emotions must be coordinated with intellect to respond in a given state of facts in a way that would be normal. Children are more primitive in emotion than grown folks. That is why when emotion gets control of them they do things which to us are remarkable—beyond our well-organized understanding."

Upwards of 400 children passed through the Child Guidance and Psychiatric Clinics in St. Louis during the year which ended April 1. And one of the greatest problems presented by those children, Dr. Nelson explained, was the runaways among them.

It's not a question, he said, of the kind of homes they come from. It's not a question of their mentality. Shouldering each other through the clinic are children of very superior intelligence and children who are almost and often quite imbeciles. They may have the best of homes or they may be simple street waifs. But they are runaways.

"By the way," asked Dr. Nelson, "what became of Mary?"

"The last dispatch I have tells of her weeping in the Detention Home in Kansas City. 'I want to go home! I want to go home!' she was crying."

Dr. Nelson shuddered. "It's so easy," he mused, "to try to cramp the kiddies so they'll fit the molds we make. . . . No. I'm sorry for her if she's in the Detention Home. We have our Bellefontaine Farm. . . . Let me tell you the story of a boy that came from there. He's 13 years old. Call him 'Ted.'

"'Ted' is a good boy, but he runs away. 'Incorrigible,' they say. He goes to school and is a little slow in his classes. He started out by sometimes taking the change his mother gave him to go to the store and disappearing. But aside from that he has never stolen. He used to run off about once every two weeks. He would be gone three or four days and come back confused in his memory of where he'd been. His feet would be blistered. He had eaten nothing whatever.

"His home surroundings are happy. But his mother noticed that before he runs away he is very excited for several hours. Then he disappears.

"That used to happen every two weeks, as I said. Now it is less frequent, maybe every six weeks.

"He goes away penniless now. He always comes back with money and he always gives the money to his mother. He won't even spend a cent for food or bed, sleeping in areaways, anywhere, and eating nothing whatever.

"The money he makes by selling papers.

"What is wrong with that boy? In the first place, he has an unhealthy appreciation of the value of money. In the second, he shouldn't be in school.

"That boy wants to work. He wants to make money. Under our State law that is impossible. But I sincerely believe that as soon as he is old enough and I can get him a job where he is earning something, our trouble with him as a runaway will cease.

"You see, Bellefontaine Farm or the House of Detention never could cure a runaway like that."

Dr. Nelson sat thinking. "Or take 'Jane,'" he said. 'Jane' is a girl from a good but very conventional home. And 'Jane' is a 'tomboy.'

"All her life she has wanted to play with boys. Girl-games bored her. She got to be about 9 years old. She stole a suit of her brother's clothes and ran away from home. She would watch boys play. If one of them gave her a chance she would talk to him about the game. She wanted to play baseball, to play football. She wanted to climb trees and do all the things boys do.

"At first she was away from home only a few hours. After she got to understand enough about the masonry of boyhood she stayed longer.

"Soon she was running away from home about every five days. She would stay away for two-day intervals. She hid out in odd corners during the night, slept usually under a pile of boxes.

"Don't mistake me. She met boys on their own terms. She was their chum and companion. There was not a hint of sex in their relations.

"When she wasn't with them, playing, she was at the library. She read works on psychology that the ordinary man would find difficult, and she could understand them. She was specially interested in plant life. She could talk of Luther Burbank and his hybrid plants with a knowledge that would put many professional men to shame.

"She had the highest opinion of intellect. If a person knew more than she, she wanted to know about that knowledge. Yet she was skeptical. She wanted to learn from personal experiment.

"She was brought to us. We got two teachers interested in her. We arranged that her vacation should be spent with them. We arranged with the family that she be removed from its influence. She doesn't run away now. She hasn't for months. The only thing that worries us is that instinct which leads her to speak to any person who seems to her to be an intellectual superior. She may some time speak to the wrong man.

"There is another boy. Let's call him 'Bill.' He has a good home, but a stepmother. She [illegible] the world of 'Bill' and he of her. But she [illegible] You'll think that I am a talker. She [illegible] way I have been letting my hobby run away with me now. It's unbelievable.

"'Bill' don't know it, but her talk gets on his nerves. He runs away.

"We always know about where to find him. He will be around the Pullman shops, towards evening. He will find himself a bed somewhere in one of

The St. Louis Boy
Who Makes a Habit
OF WINNING PRIZES

By Harry R Burke

SCHOOLMATES say that winning prizes is a habit with Walter K. Hancock, the 23-year-old St. Louis sculptor, who only a fortnight ago was awarded the Prix de Rome. From the time he was 15 the boy has been winning prizes. They are not envious—these schoolmates—but they say: "Did you ever see such luck?"

But older sculptors who have worked with Walker, his teachers from boyhood days, have a different comment. "The boy is a genius," they observe. "There never was such a lad to work."

These two comments epitomize the story of the boy. In a sense, perhaps, no young sculptor has been "luckier." Within four months he has won not only the Prix de Rome, which is a three-year scholarship for study in Italy, carrying with it an annual stipend of $1250; but, what is even more significant, the George D. Widener Memorial Gold Medal, given for the most meritorious work of American sculpture done in the past year. The Prix de Rome is an award for students. The Widener Medal was given him in competition with the most skilled American sculptors.

But the "luck" is simply due to hard work. Walter Hancock's genius might have been described by Jan Walaeus when he said, "Genius is an intuitive talent for labor."

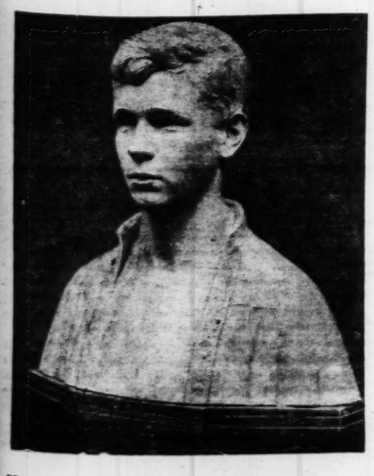
If he has gone from prize to prize during his brief career it has been because he went also from task to task. No sooner was one completed than another followed. The boy lived for his work.

"OUTSIDE of sculpture," said his father, W. Scott Hancock, who was Assistant Circuit Attorney under the late Joseph W. Folk, "Walker has but one passion. It is swimming. He was never athletic in the school sense. But with his work and his swimming he has always kept himself in splendid physical trim. When he was home last February he was delighted. He had found a Finnish bath at Gloucester, where he has been spending the last year in the studio of his teacher, Charles Grafly.

"You will understand I am not describing it from personal experience. They put one in a hot room and whip him with birch switches until he gets up great perspiration. Then he is plunged into the ocean for a brief swim, or rolled in a snowbank.

"Well, Walker had discovered the Finnish bath and was altogether keen in his enjoyment of it."

Physically, then, a tough-fibered youth he is, who loves to swim "better than he loves to eat," as his father says. He is five feet nine inches in height, of muscular build, with black hair and keen dark eyes. His mouth reflects the sensitivity of his being. There is a determined chin. A clean-cut and aggressive youth one would say.



"Tovio," portrait bust of a Finnish lad, which won the Widener Memorial Medal.

Yet Walker Hancock's aggressiveness is manifest only in one direction. He likes to wrestle with artistic problems. "While he was in high school," said Miss Agnes Lodwick, teacher of art in Central High School, "I never gave him a problem but he conquered it. He would not rest until he found the solution. And when that problem was conquered he was ready for the next." There you have the touchstone of his success.

Walker won his first prize when he was 15 years old. The St. Louis Art League had offered money awards for a medal in a competition open to all American sculptors. Designs were submitted under nom de plumes. The first award was to Ulric H. Ellerhaussen of New York. The second went to the St. Louis schoolboy.

"THE ASCENSION." Design for altar piece of St. James Church, New York, which won the coveted honor.

When the word went out that this child had won in a national sculpture competition there were those who tried to have fun with him.

"Hullo, Genius!" they called.

"Aw! Cut it out," answered Walker in the boy-term of that day.

A reporter visited the youth. Walker wasn't particularly puffed up by what he had done. There was so much more to do.

"I used to think if I could ever meet a great sculptor and go into his studio, I'd die happy," he said. "Now I can't die happy until I've become a great sculptor myself."

Until today he has kept that same attitude. "He has the most delightful of dispositions," said an old friend who has watched his career with great and guiding interest. His successes haven't turned his head at all. He is eager to meet people and has a keen appreciation of their interesting qualities. He has a very definite appreciation of living, and he has a surprising fund of information and knowledge, not only with regard to the fine arts but to life and life's affairs."

To those characteristics add this description from a former teacher and one has a portrait of the youth: "Walker has a splendid mind. He has the power of clear thinking and of organization, and this shows in his work. He is sensitive to emotion, yet his brain always controls emotion in the task which is before him. He is one of the most gifted persons I have ever known. He sings well and plays well and, indeed, might have won success as a musician. He is a clever actor, and he has written some truly charming verses."

If it had been left to the boy's own first impulse it is not impossible that Walker Hancock would have been a musician. But someone else spoke.

"There will be no musician in my family," said his father. "You will be a lawyer, just as I am."

WALKER HANCOCK, who confirmed his prize-winning habit by winning the Prix de Rome.

WALKER, you see, is the only boy among the five children of Mr. and Mrs. W. Scott Hancock of 4232 McPherson avenue.

"Look here, son," said his father, "while we don't exactly have to battle to keep the wolf from the door I want you to do something that is going to make money."

Later, when the boy's aspiration turned toward plastic arts, there were family conferences. In one of them Senator Selden P. Spencer, a cousin of the youth, participated. In the end, on the testimony of St. Louis art teachers and the boy's own successes, it was decided to give him his opportunity.

His mother's influence had much weight in that decision. She was Miss Anna Spencer before her marriage and was herself gifted as a painter. From his earliest years she had encouraged her son in his gropings toward creative beauty.

One of Walker's earliest toys was a lump of plasticene. When other youngsters were making mud pies he was modeling in sculptor's wax little figures of the things he saw. It was amusing. It wasn't dirty. It kept him earnestly occupied for hours. But no one thought it significant that Walker played with plasticene until after he had gone to school.

He had attended kindergarten at Eugene Field School and then gone into the grades. A quick, bright student, he played in extra time at modeling.

His teacher asked the children—when Walker was 9 years old—to bring to school the things they had made in their play-time at home. The boy brought a cardboard cut-out of the Parthenon. With his plasticene he had modeled the sculptures of the pediments. Scattered about the porticos were little figures of old Greeks.

At 13 he entered high school, where, under Miss Lodwick's guidance, he began to fulfill earlier promise, and the next year, in knee trousers, he was spending his Saturdays in study at the Washington University School of Fine Arts. Then came the winning of the Art League Medal, and after that an Art League scholarship awarded for the best work done by any student in the art classes of the public schools of St. Louis.

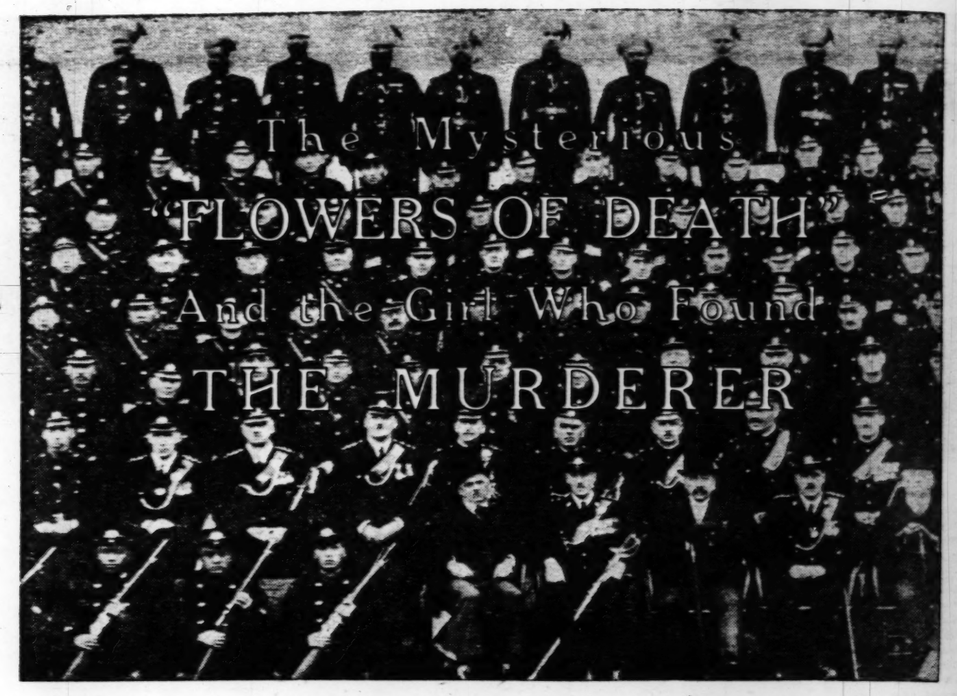
MEANTIME, America had entered the World War and Walker, although under age for enlistment, had gone into a training camp at his father's old school, Virginia Military Institute, where he made a fine record.

For Central High School he designed the bronze tablet erected in memory of its students who had lost their lives in the war. After modeling the tablet he made the molds from which the bronze was cast. It was the first important work he had ever carried through entirely by himself.

He studied under E. H. Wuerpel and Victor Holm at the Washington University School of Fine Arts, and then won a scholarship at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, where he won two Cresson traveling scholarships, which enabled him to spend two summers in Europe. Also, he won the Stewardson prize in sculpture at the Academy.

For the last year the boy has been working at Gloucester in the studio of Charles Grafly, his teacher at the Pennsylvania Academy, and one of America's foremost portrait sculptors. It was in that studio he modeled his "Tovio," a portrait bust of a young boy from the Finnish fisher colony at Gloucester, which received the Widener medal.

And now, the Prix de Rome, the dream of all young sculptors, has been won by him. The winning design was a centerpiece for the reredos of St. James Church, New York. Walker himself had decided not to enter the Prix de Rome competition. Grafly, his master, gathered up and submitted the boy's work. And so he won once more.



The Mysterious "FLOWERS OF DEATH" And the Girl Who Found THE MURDERER

The International Police of Shanghai, China.

By ELEANORE BROWNE,
(Noted Authority on Crime and Criminals.)

HIS EXCELLENCY, the Honorable Edward Schofield, High Commissioner of International Police for the Port and City of Shanghai, China, touched a button on his desk. A Sergeant of his staff appeared and received a gruff command:

"Give my compliments to Constable No. 1312 and convey my desire that the Constable report to me at once."

The Staff Sergeant, a tall, turbaned Sikh from Turkestan, saluted, and went smartly out the door. The High Commissioner returned his attention to a sheaf of documents, slips of yellow paper, which lay before him. He studied the yellow slips, all of which were headed:

"Reports Official; Assassination."

The first one disclosed the details of the mysterious slaying of Arthur Boddy, Briton, banker's agent, in the house at 15 Shantung road, in the native section of Shanghai. Boddy, who had come to Shanghai to open a branch of a great London bank, had been found dead in his bed, without marks of violence. He had been killed during the night. Boddy had been, in a way, an important personage.

The second yellow sheet described the discovery of the body of Mr. L. C. Goodrich, one night later, in his quarters at 160 Avenue Edward VII, in the foreign section of the city. Also there were no marks of violence. He had died while his wife slept next him. And there were no clews. Goodrich was an American, from Chicago, and the representative of a packing company. A great deal of money was in a dresser drawer, brought from the bank to pay household bills during the New Year's season when residents of Shanghai pay their bills for the previous six months. This money had not been touched.

ONE after the other, each yellow slip marked at the top "Assassination," revealed and described a murder. Each victim was a foreigner who had been of importance, either socially or commercially. In no case had there been a robbery or, apparently, a motive. And there were no clews.

Another Story From the Official Records of Foreign Police.

Among the documents there were cablegrams from governmental departments of both England and America, some making sharp inquiries which were embarrassing to the International Police Department of Shanghai. People at home were wanting to know why the slayer, or slayers, had not been caught and punished.

And, more discomforting, an American representative of the Department of Justice, usually known as the Secret Service, had arrived in Shanghai with instructions to "look into" the matter of the unsolved deaths of the three Americans included among the yellow reports. This Secret Service agent, J. C. Markham, now sat close to the window at the end of the big room, silently watching the High Commissioner run the documents through his fingers.

The turbaned Sergeant appeared at the door and announced Constable 1312. The American started. He had expected some alert-looking, businesslike detective, of almost any nationality. Instead he saw a rather quiet young woman, olive-skinned, with the black eyes of Asia, but the manner of Europe. The girl seemed to be somewhat shy in her approach to the Commissioner's table.

"Have you orders for me, sir?" she asked.

THE Commissioner replied in his gruff, jerky way:

"Yes. I am told that you made a request, some weeks ago, to be assigned by your Inspector to the cases that are bothering the whole department—the deaths of Boddy, Goodrich and the others. You said, I believe, you thought you could pick up a clew the rest of us have missed. You were refused, of course. I have decided now, however, to assign you to the case if you still wish to take it up."

The girl's face lighted. She said only: "Thank you, sir!"

The Commissioner turned to the American. "Constable 1312," he explained, "is one of our most dependable officers. She has never been assigned to dangerous duties, although she has asked repeatedly for such work. I shall be glad if you will associate with her and do whatever you wish to do in this extraordinary affair."

The Commissioner handed Constable 1312 the yellow report slips and dismissed her. Agent Markham, fighting down his astonishment, followed her out the door in response to the shy nod with which she had acknowledged the partnership established by her commander. In the corridor Markham asked her name.

"Mura Vidal," she replied, simply. She added: "I am mostly Russian, but with a little of the Oriental in me. My home was at Vladivostok."

It was quite as if she were telling him only that some ordinary chance had brought her down from Siberia to a Constable's duties in China. Most Russian refugees, wherever they are, speak of their changing adventures in just such a casual manner. Later, Agent Markham learned that her father had been a Governor of the Eastern Province of Siberia, under the Czar, and that she was the only one of the family who had escaped the Reds when they abolished the Siberian Republic and took it for Moscow.

They went together, then, about their task of discovering the dangerous slayer whose methods had remained an unsolved secret; who left no traces, and who chose for his victims, not inconsequential residents of the native quarters, but foreigners who held important posts—and who, evidently, did not kill for robbery. How the girl-constable led her American associate along the trail to a garden of "murder flowers" is one of the dramatic records of China's international police.

IN ALL, there had been seven deaths. The circumstances of each had been similar. The absence of any marks of violence indicated poison immediately and surgeons were convinced that some drug had been used, but one that could not be

The particularly baffling mystery was how any drug could have been administered with such care and knowledge that invariably it brought death in the night. Other agents of the police had failed to connect any of the victims with anyone, native or foreign, who might be brought under suspicion. And none of those who died had been involved in any of the native squabbles between tongs or political families which lead to assassination.

"Yet it will have been a Chinese," Constable 1312 declared firmly. "As we have no motive, we must suppose one."

Agent Markham agreed that the policeman who cannot find a motive for a crime creates one in his mind and begins his work from that point. By disproving one motive another, and sometimes the right one, usually reveals itself.

Between them the American and the Russian girl-policeman decided upon revenge. "A Chinese will go far to avenge himself for even a fancied wrong. If he has a mind for murder, he will slay with a clear conscience," No. 1312 explained. This trait was familiar to Markham, who had been detailed to Shanghai once before. So they decided that a Chinese, some one of the millions herded in the vicinity of the neutral port, or a band of them, was taking a toll of vengeance.

IT HAD already been established by other members of the police force that there had been a thread of mutual acquaintance linking all the seven victims of the unknown slayer. Each one of them had known some of the others. Four of them had been married and were accompanied to China by their wives. These wives knew each other. All lived in the typical two-story houses which are built for the accommodation of the foreign residents, and each maintained the usual staff of servants—Chinese "boys," who sometimes are ancient men. The servants in each household had been investigated as the deaths were reported. Constable 1312 and Agent Markham decided to examine them again, and, this time, systematically. Nearly all of them were still available, for it is the custom in China for the servant to become attached to the house more than to the family. A new mistress customarily finds her servants already living in her new home.

The "third degree," as it exists in America, is not so successful, as a rule, in the Orient. The Oriental, particularly the Chinese, does not answer questions if he has the whim to be silent. The Oriental policeman will blandly explain that a little torture will go a long way farther than much inquiry. Neither Constable 1312 nor Agent Markham were of the mind, however, to resort to forbidden methods of torture. The servants gave useless information freely, but none other. Suddenly, during one of the many days devoted to futile questioning of the Chinese "boys" who had served the stricken families, or the masters, like Boddy, who were unmarried, the young policewoman hit upon the thing she had been searching for. For the second time she heard the name of a small dealer in produce mentioned. The Chinese cook in the home of Goodrich had rattled off the names of all tradesmen who supplied foods and other necessities to the Goodrich home. The detectives gathered these names, hoping to find among them someone with a criminal record or one whom it would be justifiable to suspect. They had been, however, the usual run of vegetable and produce dealers, laundry agents and messengers for the foreign meat houses.

Among them, at the Goodrich home, had been one who was called Neu Chi-kwei, who brought vegetables and garden produce from his store in Haskel road, a narrow, busy street at the edge of the foreign district. Constable 1312 had remarked, when Neu Chi-kwei's store was mentioned, that he came a long way each morning to bring small packages of food to the Goodrich home, which was four miles away, at the other side of the district in which the foreign residents live. When Neu was revealed as one who also served his produce to the Englishman, Boddy, on Shantung road, three miles in another direction, Policewoman Vidal was convinced that a clew was being developed at last. Chinese merchants are lazy. They will not serve patrons who require deliveries if they reside far away.

The widow of a third victim of the assassin, a Mrs. Forrest, also revealed Neu Chi-kwei as among her tradesmen. She remembered that he had been recommended to her for his honesties and the freshness of his wares by another of Neu's patrons, an exiled Russian priest. Again, both the Forrests and their friend, the priest, lived far from Neu's neighborhood.

When the exiled priest had been carefully investigated, or "checked up," as Policewoman Vidal would have said, he was disclosed as a kindly patriarch who ministered to a little colony of exiles from the aristocratic families of Siberia, himself a refugee from Vladivostok. What few possessions he had brought away with him he had turned into money, which he shared generously with any of his countryfolk who were in need. After much consideration, it was decided to question the priest frankly as to Neu Chi-kwei. However, he knew little more than the others. Neu had appeared among his house servants with a request that he be patronized and had brought a recommendation from Boddy, who handled some of the priest's money before it was almost all given away. Neu explained that he was more reasonable in his prices than most dealers, and had promptly proved that he was. The priest had few tael coins left, and for each one of these Neu Chi-kwei gave him more vegetables and fruits, and of better grade, than any other tradesman—even though he carried them, each morning, from Haskel road, across the city.

Strangely, Agent Markham and his young associate could find no other patrons of Neu Chi-kwei in any of the neighborhoods close to these houses he served at such a long distance. Constable 1312 was satisfied their clew was leading, in some mysterious way, into the murder trail.

AGENT MARKHAM installed himself in a house near Neu's shop. To the servants he found there he explained that he had come from America to go into business in Shanghai. He informed them that he was very particular about his food, especially such things as vegetables and fruits. He asked that they find for him the best dealer in this sort of produce. When he saw that the tradesman chosen by his servants was not Neu Chi-kwei, he complained about the quality of his vegetables and remarked that he had passed a very promising shop in Haskel road, where the produce seemed to be especially inviting. He wished his trade could be given to this particular shop. His cook promptly explained that Neu Chi-kwei was a difficult Chinese to deal with; that he refused much good trade, and had refused even to serve any more patrons at all for a time.

"Neu Chi-kwei velly busy," the cook declared, "because he take allee time bundles to patlons who live long ways. Shut up shop and go long ways

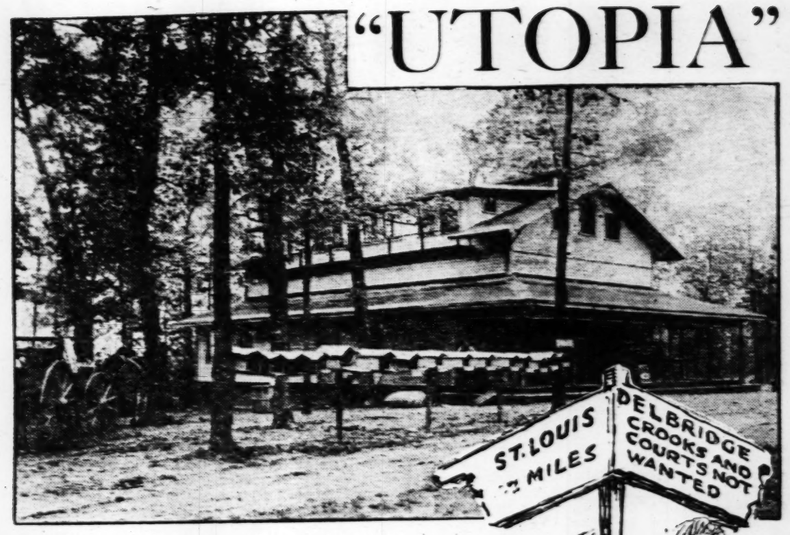
"UTOPIA" MAY BE HERE

If C. L. Delbridge Can Establish This MODEL COMMUNITY



THE GENERAL STORE, first and largest building at Delbridge.

By A. W. King

IMAGINE a broad lonely hill with gently sloping sides and connected by ridges with other highlands. The top of the hill, once crowned with trees and underbrush, has been partially cleared, but visitors approach the central open space through natural avenues of straight young saplings.

Here and there are piles of lumber, newly cut and emitting their pungent fragrance. Door frames and window sashes lean against trees or lie prone on the ground, waiting to be put in position. The sharp clamor of carpenters' tools is ringing through the leafy aisles.

About the middle of the level hilltop stands a large, two-story building of wood, a general store such as may be seen sometimes in the more prosperous country towns. Scattered about nearby are smaller buildings, also of frame construction, their newness evident in the unstained color of their walls, which at a little distance look creamy white.

Birds dart to and fro on mysterious errands, berry bushes bloom, there are wild flowers and all about a thickly forested country through which straggle roads of the rugged, primitive kind called trails.

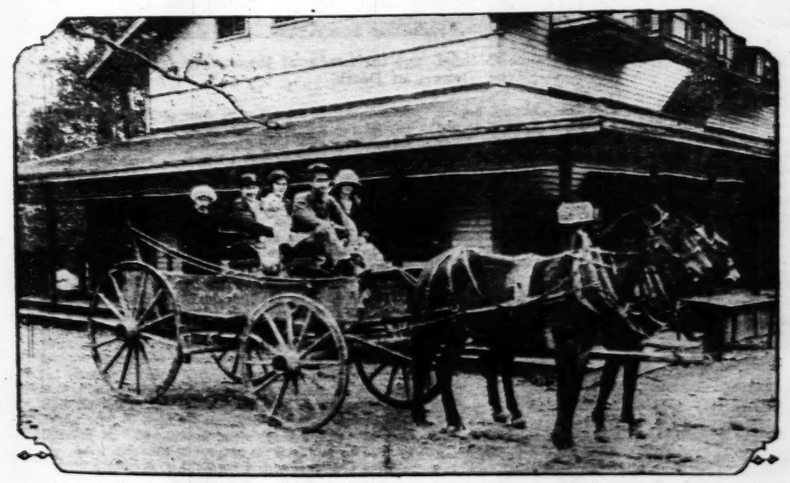
It is the founding of a new town, 85 miles south and west of St. Louis. And it is the founding of a new kind of town, according to C. L. Delbridge, publisher of mathematical books in St. Louis. He and his associates own this 1600-tract in Washington County. Near the center of the oblong demesne the town of Delbridge is rising.

DELBRIDGE, declare its builders, is to be a town unhampered by crime or by politics—uncursed by crime or politics, it might be said, for the founders hold strong opinions on those subjects.

"The biggest burden on the necks of the populace is crime," Mr. Delbridge told me when I visited his town. "It has been the downfall of nations, and it will wipe out our own civilization unless it is checked. Crime can be abolished, instantly and with very little expense. We intend to prove this, in the new town which we are starting."

Equally serious are the evils of politics, according to Mr. Delbridge and the men interested with him in the project. Out of politics come warring factions and their ceaseless strife, the dust of which is apt to hide the goal of common good. So many will use politics for personal and selfish ends. And, in all the machinery of police and lawyers and courts, Mr. Delbridge sees a class who make their living from criminals, and would suffer if there were no crime. Politics and crime are closely related, the curse of most towns and of church and school as well.

There will be no criminals at Delbridge, the founders promise. At Delbridge the collective ownership which prevails elsewhere has been abolished. Individual ownership of the town, with land and buildings in the hands of a dictator, will make it easy to keep out the criminal class, or to eject any residents who misbehave. There will be no politics at Delbridge for the ample reason that there will be no elective offices and no government, except the will of its owner.



A typical farm family in Washington County, photographed as they started home from Delbridge.

Delbridge, the man, is to be Delbridge, the town, much more literally and completely than that French King Louis fulfilled his boast, "I am the State!"

AS A TOWN, Delbridge still is in its swaddling clothes, but it seems a lusty infant. Besides the big general store, a blacksmith shop has been completed and a garage is being built. A planing mill, also, is in course of construction. A big cistern has been finished, topped with a superstructure which looks like a bandstand and may be used for that purpose some day.

A good-sized hotel will be erected at Delbridge this summer. The plans have been drawn, all other arrangements made, and the beginning of the work only waits upon the lumber, which is produced but slowly in Washington County. There will be cottages and bungalows, some for permanent residents and some for summer visitors, because it is expected that the tranquil beauty of the spot will attract people who care nothing about the social experiment being tried on that hill, the latest effort to establish a Utopia. What would it matter to dwellers in cities whether Delbridge is governed by Mayor or landlord, if they go there to enjoy the clean sky overhead, the pure air, the countless encircling trees, the blue of far horizons?

Flint arrowheads are found quite often in Washington County, suggesting that the Indians of bygone days loved well its grassy valleys and wooded hills, its clear streams and crystal pools. Perhaps, many years ago, the redskins may have had a village of tepees on the pleasant site of Delbridge. But as far as white men are concerned, at least, a town is building where town never stood before. So, the harsh music of saws and hammers gives warning to the forest creatures that they now must share their immemorial home with man.

The buildings completed at Delbridge include a cottage for R. C. Delbridge, brother of the owner, who stays there and manages the store, besides overseeing the development work, which has been in progress for about a year. The big store was opened for trade last October, and already is on a paying basis.

"We didn't want to conduct the store ourselves," explained Manager Delbridge, while the wind roared softly through the trees massed about the hilltop clearing. "But we couldn't find anybody else to do it, and to have a store here was the first essential. Some day we'll get rid of the store, for it isn't our desire to be in business here ourselves, any more than we can help. Monopoly? Not a bit of it. I used to manage commissaries at camps in Florida, where they did want a monopoly. But we don't care for any such arrangement at Delbridge. Not only will we turn this store over to somebody else when we find the right man, but if another grocer wants to operate a second store here, and he looks like a desirable resident, we will put up a building for him to use."

Patrons now are coming to the store from points as far as 15 miles away, he said. The big days are Friday and Saturday. Often the whole family comes, in a wagon drawn by horses or mules. Other customers, men and women, too, arrive on horseback. They tie their purchases to the saddle or carry them home in a knapsack.

In many instances the process of trade really is trading. The store accepts any agricultural product in payment for its goods. Butter and eggs are currency there, so are poultry, clipped wool, potatoes, hogs—literally anything in the way of salable products, for cash is scarce among the farmer patrons.

THE founding of Delbridge is not a philanthropic scheme, say the men who have put up the money for it. The place is meant to be self-sustaining. Not otherwise, the owners feel, can the scheme be proven a practical one. Any sort of enterprise, whether factory or farm or town, to be truly successful, must pay its way. The founders even hope for moderate profits, which will be turned back into the enterprise, because it is not a money-making scheme, either. And if neither a piece of philanthropy nor a speculative investment, just what is the idea which has set those hammers and saws to working on the quiet hilltop where men afoot and

LATEST CRAZE
Try Your Hand At Them

HERE'S the newest craze—Glimericks. Made up, it is, of the cross-word puzzle and the limerick, combining the best features of each. The first book, issued by the Glimerick Publishing Co., New York City, is now on the market and soon, it is supposed, rabid fans will be storming the dictionaries with all the old ferocity which was attendant upon the solving of cross-word puzzles.

For the benefit of those who have been waiting for something to take the place of cross-word puzzles, the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine herewith presents several of the latest brain-teasers. The definitions in small print under the row of dots indicating a missing word, or words, have become known as "glimmers"—they give you just a glimmer of the missing words. Supply these words (one or more words at the end of each line) and you reveal the limerick.

The number of words missing is indicated by the way the dots are grouped, thus: one word ...., two words ....; etc. Sometimes, because space is limited, the printer has left only two or three dots to indicate a word of considerable length. Pay no attention to the number of dots; their number has nothing to do with the number of letters in a word.

Here are the Glimericks. See what you can do with them.

Fighting Across — n the

MOVED by an irresistible longing for adventure, F. DeWitt Wells, formerly a Municipal Court Judge of New York, his 23-year-old son Jay, and a cousin, Chanler Chapman, together with two Scandinavian sailors, set sail from Bergen last summer in a ketch boound for America over the Viking trail. Their boat, the Shanghai, had been built in China of teakwood, and had proved herself on a 16,000-mile voyage to Copenhagen. She measured 47 feet over all, and 16 feet 3 inches beam. She was double-ended, with a flush deck of teak, ketch rigged, with mainsail and small mizzen, and was equipped with a 10-horsepower kerosene motor, at best capable of five miles an hour.

Judge Wells purchased the Shanghai at Copenhagen, and with the assistance of the former owners and Chapman sailed to Bergen, where the boat was to be hauled up, painted and provisioned for the voyage. Here the crew was augmented by the arrival of Jay Wells, and by the signing on of two young Norwegians, Ask Bryndelson and "Tom." These five embarked from Bergen on July 10, put in at the Faroe Islands on July 13, and at Reykjavik, Iceland, on July 21, where Tom was replaced by a 20-year-old Dane, Arnold Bagerskov. Continuing by dead reckoning and without serious mishap, the Shanghai sailed from Iceland to Greenland, and thence to Battle Harbor, Labrador, Dr. Grenfell's mission. Two thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight miles had been covered. On Aug. 15 they left on the last leg of their course, the 700 miles of water between Battle Harbor and Shelburne, Nova Scotia. The engine was misbehaving and provisions were low. Concerning the last and fatal leg of that perilous voyage, Judge Wells has written the following account for the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

And then, almost at that brave journey's end, the little Shanghai flung her stout timbers on the rocks of Nova Scotia, and foundered.

By F. DeWITT WELLS.

WE HAD left Battle Harbor on Aug. 15 at noon and had come through the Straits of Belle Isle and down the western coast of Newfoundland to the Bay of Islands. There we had stopped to repair our engine, which proved to be irreparable. We decided to push on without the aid of machinery, and on Thursday, the twenty-second, we tacked out the narrow 20 miles of Humber Arm and through the bay, and at dawn on the twenty-third we were off the outer arm and into the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

For three days there was fog with light winds, and we were glad on the morning of the twenty-fifth to be in the ocean again, where we at least would have wind enough to sail and make some progress on the last leg of our long journey home.

Late in the day we took a tack in toward the shore, but there was a mild fog and a fresh wind, and we did not want to go too close, nor yet miss Cape Canso.

We did not make out the shore. We turned again and went southerly during the night, and in the morning we were out of sight of land, with no possibility of taking an observation or finding out just where we were. We could see a mile or so ahead and from time to time sighted a schooner. Deciding to locate our position, we again turned toward the shore and about 11 came on a fishing boat that was a little to the east of us.

There was a dory out fishing, so we drew near and spoke to the men on the smack and asked them where we were.

It seems we were about four miles off the Cranberry Island light buoy, which is at the entrance into Canso. They gave us some fresh cod from their boatload. It was good to hear the fish come flopping down on the deck as they threw six or seven aboard. We were running short of provisions, had finished our keg of salt mutton which we had brought on deck from Bergen, and were just eating the last of the barrel of salted fish which had been lashed beside it.

It was too late to clean and cook the cod for lunch. Arnold, as usual, made us a meal of rice and tomatoes; we ate our biscuits and opened our last pot of jam—"tyttleberries" was the jam—preserved Norwegian cranberries.

We soon made the light buoy and sailed in until we were sure of Canso Light at Cranberry Island. We then could lay our course.

Canso is at the entrance of the Straits of Canso between Nova Scotia and Cape Breton Island. White Point is noted for shipwrecks. It is almost the farthest southeastern point of Nova Scotia. From where we had spoken the fishing boat, it was about 110 to 120 miles to Halifax.

THE wind was light, the sea calm, and the barometer high as we turned seaward and went out almost southeast four or five miles from the coast. At 7 the wind was stronger and I thought it safer to get away from a lee shore even though we were going miles away from our course, which was about west by south. We sailed away from 7 to 8 o'clock and, the wind being moderate but strong, we had all sails when we had stretched it across the harbor at

to pull us away from shore on the night the wind had given out.

Ask rigged the sea anchor. It was put over on the starboard bow and two drip bags filled with engine oil were put over the side. We also hung cables out to delay the leeway we were making.

The ship steadied and came about, heading to the southeast. I knew that we were doomed, and I could not help feeling that the Shanghai knew it, too. She was comparatively quiet and behaved as if she were crippled and hampered.

Her buoyancy was gone. She rode well to the sea anchor, but her vitality was low. She acted as if she were ill, and although we shipped little water, she was anchored to the storm.

There was no rock above the spray and the white mountains of foam and water rose two or three hundred feet high when we looked out at them in the daylight.

After we put out the sea anchor, the oil drips and gathered up some of the tangle of canvas and ropes, Chapman and Arnold came below for a rest. They had all been working since before midnight and it was after 3. There was no reason why they should not get some rest, and they took off their boots and clothes and turned in.

THEY climbed into the upper bunk, but I had previously made up my mind that I was going to die with my pants and shoes on, and I carefully put two $20 bills in my pocket, and a watch and chain with which I had very personal associations. Attached to the chain are still the rusted keys of the cabins of the Shanghai.

It may have been 20 minutes or it may have been 10 after they came below that I went up the companionway to look at my son at the rudder and Ask at the door of the engine room in the cockpit, watching the vanishing light of the lighthouse.

It went out of sight, and there was yet the chance that we had drifted by the point. There was an open bay beyond, and four or five miles to the north the coast came out to a point called Whitehead. The longer we could last the more chance there was.

I had hardly turned back across the cabin when there came a tremendous thud and crash. It was not in any specific place on the ship. It was simply an overwhelming, thundering blow. The lamp went out; water was pouring through the hatch and down the skylight. I lit the lamp. The lamp chimney was not broken, but the cabin was wrecked. Chapman and Arnold had been hurled from their bunks. Water was knee-deep on the cabin floor. The large teakwood table had been torn from its fastenings. I remembered seeing a book floating about in the mess. It was the nautical almanac, and I wondered whether I ought to rescue it and preserve it for the next voyage.

Arnold picked himself up and I told him to get on his clothes and open the floor hatch to see how much water the boat was taking. He was dazed, but got on his boots and pants and went forward to the galley to find something to open the hatch in the floor. It was jammed and could not be lifted. He came back with an inadequate tablespoon and tried to pry it up. The spoon broke, but we did manage to open the hatch and found there was not a great deal of water in the hold.

It was the outer reef that we had struck. We had come over it and were alive. If the boat had been deeper we could not have passed. Had it been of lighter construction it would have been dashed to pieces. Had it been built of iron it would have been stove in and swamped at once. As a matter of fact, the construction of the boat was so stalwart, the beams and ribs of elmwood so massive, that although the shock was tremendous, she yet held. I looked out. We could see nothing. Within three or four minutes we hit again.

THERE is nothing more rending and terrifying than when a boat strikes rocks. It is a grinding, crushing shock like the end of a terrific fall—the blow of a great weight beating into your vitals. It was an agony of sickening thuds as we struck three times more. Finally we were pounding up against the face of a rock that rose black in the mist against the port side at an angle of 50 or 60 degrees. The spray and water were dashing against it and the waves were hammering up against it. There could not have been more than six or seven feet between the rail of the boat and the rock. Sometimes the ship yawed outward and again it was pounded closer.

My son was on deck with Ask Chapman, Arnold and I were in the cabin. My son had with him his torch flashlight, which in spite of the rain and sea was still allght. We threw the spotlight on the rock. Ask jumped and landed. Arnold threw him a rope, and he caught it. The rope was the other end of a heavy sea-anchor coil and for a moment it would not uncoil. Arnold went down to the engine room to clear it. As we were lying on the deck, clinging to the rigging, it seemed an eternity before it began to pay out. Then Arnold jumped. His heavy rubber boots filled with water and submerged him. He managed to hold fast to the line and to kick off the boots. Ask pulled and a wave washed him up on to the face of the rock. He climbed above. Ask made a turn of the rope around a projecting piece of rock that was 20 or 30 feet above sea level. It was an extraordinary formation of the rock almost like a stanchion, but it gave enough hold for him to take in the slack. As he reached down with one hand and grabbed us, while with the other he pulled in, Arnold held on to the end of the rope.

My son then went over the side, and as he did so the ship gave a heavy lurch, so that he seemed to be crushed between the ship and the rock. He clung with one hand to the rope and with the other fended himself off. Ask grabbed him, still clinging to the rope, out of reach of the waves. My turn was next. We had been holding to the rigging and I had both arms around one of the towing posts that was on the starboard side. Every wave completely submerged us and washed over the whole ship. My son on shore held the electric torch so that we could see what we were doing. Unfortunately, as I started, the water washed off my pants and they became entangled about my feet. I could have kicked them off, but I was bound not to lose them, for their pockets held my few earthly possessions. That foolish sense of property made me intent upon holding them.

As I threw myself over the side, holding the rope, I sunk deep in the water. It was only a moment, however, before I found myself against the face of the rock, with Ask's hand on my collar. My feet were still entangled, but I was able to get a kneehold and in a moment was dragged to safety. Ask had almost torn the shirt from my back. Chapman came last, in underdrawers and bare feet. We all scrambled or climbed to safety above the waves.

THREE or four minutes after that the ship broke and the decks disappeared, only the masts above the water swinging and swaying with each pounding of the waves. We climbed to a farther height, into a hollow where there was a lee from the storm. There in some mossy turf we lay huddled together, striking each other to keep up circulation. Chapman and Arnold dug burrows in the wet moss, but as soon as I could I got to my feet. I preferred climbing and crawling to lying still.

It must have been 3:20 or nearly 4 in the morning by the time we were out of the water and saved. Probably there was not an hour to wait until daylight, but in the darkness, with a raging sea lashing the shore, the flying spray, and the howling wind, it was long waiting. It was cold and dark. The water was thrown from the sea over the top of the bluff and the storm was relentless. Chapman and Arnold were but half-clad. Ask insisted on my taking his woolen sweater and leather seaman's waistcoat. My shirt had been stripped in the struggle to land and I was bare to the waist, but in my trousers pocket were a photograph, my watch and chain and two $20 bills, soaked and limp.

There was a disposition reaction toward trivialities, and the habits and property inhibitions of years kept thrusting themselves into my mind, notwithstanding the enveloping sense of thankfulness and gratitude that we were alive. I recollect no sense of terror, nor did I hear one word or exclamation of fright or fear from the other four. They were all efficient, intent, and possessed. Each did his utmost with courage, and each thought of the others. There was not a sign or gesture of selfishness, but a great show of bravery. As one of us said, "What else was there to do?"

As the light came, we began to explore the rock where we were. There seemed nothing but sea and rock and wind. The bluff was about 90 feet high; the raging sea was to the north, to the south, and to the west. Reefs with mountains of white foam were all about; to the east the water was surging.

We climbed over to the seaward side and there against the bluff was the wreck of the Shanghai. The masts and part of the bow were still above water. We had hit the outer reef a half-mile out, which had given the first crushing blow. Then we had been blown in, dashing against rocks, and finally had been thrown against the bluff. There was a narrow outer point and we had been partly protected against the full force of the waves. It was a miracle how we had come over to the reef through the rocks and against the bluff, with yet enough protection from that narrow point to break the waves before they swamped us. It gave us enough time to get on the rock. It would have been impossible, guided by human hand, to have made the shore or to have come through the wild sea and the perilous reef.

Below us, the beautiful boat was pounding. Each blow was an agony. We watched it, helpless. The masts were thrown back and forth, swaying. Like protesting, entreating arms they stretched upward, calling for aid. There was a large hollow in the rock opposite, above the water—a small cave. As planks and wreckage were swirled across against it they were thrown 20 or 30 feet in the air and hurled in splinters, yet the hull and the masts stayed. There was a sob in Ask's voice as he cried: "Oh, the Shanghai! Oh, the Shanghai!"

To the very last she was gallant; the masts stood up and she fought unyielding, although conquered. There was no weakening or crumbling, no sinking. The mizzenmast went first, and for a space the heavy mainmast stood alone; then there was a tremendous blow and over it went. No one was to sail the Shanghai again. The long voyage from China through the Indian Ocean, around the Cape of Good Hope, up the Coast of Africa to Denmark, from Copenhagen to Norway, to the Faroe Islands, to Iceland, Greenland, and America was over. The beautiful boat—one of the most wonderful and perfect boats in the world—the Shanghai, my dream ship, was gone.

WE WERE bitterly cold as we lay now on the wet moss behind the shoulder of the bluff. Ask went down and came climbing back with something in his hand. It was the bottle of aqua vitae. He had found it on the ledge of the rock, unbroken, with the cork still in. Only the label was washed off. It had floated and been lifted gently to a ledge of the rock and out of reach of the waves. It seemed a miracle of Providence. What that half-bottle of fiery warmth meant to the exhausted crew of the Shanghai!

Arnold Bagerskov said that it was just a month he had been on board. We had sailed from Reykjavik July 28. July 27 was his twenty-first birthday. It was now the morning of Aug. 27, exactly a month since he had brought his clothes to the ship.

He had been lying curled up and trying to keep warm under a burrow of moss which he had dug up as shelter from the wind. His hands and feet were scratched and bruised where he had been thrown against the rocks. When he jumped overboard to get to the shore he had on his boots and had found he could not do anything with his feet. His boots were too heavy, so he kicked them off. His feet were bleeding; my knees were raw, scratched and scraped against the rocks; the others had bruises. Chapman was barefooted and in his underclothes. Otherwise we were sound and unhurt, and we were warmer from the drink.

After Ask had found the bottle, Arnold climbed down and came back with a litte round black case about three inches long. I didn't remember having seen it before on the boat. It had evidently come from the medicine chest, which we had had no occasion to open during the voyage. It was made of hard rubber, with a screw top.

"See what I found!" he cried. He handed it to me and I unscrewed the top. It seems unbelievable, but inside was a full ounce of powdered aristol and bismuth, perfectly dry and unspoiled. It was the one thing needed for our cuts and bruises.

We mended ourselves as well as we could, and from time to time went down the rocks to find pieces of planks and boards, an oar, the deck mop, the long, heavy boathook. A mattress was washed ashore, with the linen cover; also a linen cover for a pillow—the pillow was gone. There was one of the leather-covered mattress, a supply of lard, some candles and three cans of kerosene from the engine room. One, a five-gallon can, was leaking but nearly full. There were two 25-gallon cans, too heavy to lift. We found a smashed plank from the bow. It was narrow and splintered at both ends, but on almost the only piece that was large enough to hold was painted the name of the boat, the letters S-H-A-N-G-H-A-I.

AS THE light grew we began to distinguish objects. To the south was the roaring sea. The line of the reef lay half a mile off. The sea breaking on it made a mountain of white foam higher than the cliff where we were. The rocks were almost continuous. It was unbelievable to think that we had come through. We looked to the west—open, angry sea. We looked to the north, tumult, waves, and anger. The light was faint and the wind howling. We climbed down to a narrow point and found a surging gully of waves breaking from both directions, and a wild current. We were on a small island out at sea.

We gathered planks, and against the flat face of a rock we tried to build a shelter from the wind and cold. The linen cover we tore into a streamer and fastened it to the end of the boathook. Ask and I planted it in the moss on the top of the bluff. There could be no boats living outside in that weather, but it might be seen from shore and we might be rescued. There was no water on the island. We found blueberry bushes and a few groundpine and spruce buches, and with these we made a couch. Ask had kept in his pocket an old hunting knife of mine. Once we thought we saw a house or hut, but when we came nearer it was a square boulder.

From time to time we climbed down to see if there might be anything to save. There was practically nothing, not a relic; no clothes, instruments, gear, ropes, parts, or anything of value. Everything was gone, smashed by the waves or carried to other rocks and washed out to sea. We were more interested in saving our lives. The question was, where were we and how could we last, with no water, food or protection from the cold? We were still wet.

The light grew stronger, and across the point we thought we could see what looked like a hut. It was doubtful, but after a while we were certain and made out a fisherman's hut, and farther off a group of buildings. They were gray, small and silent. The question was, How to get to them? Ask was for plunging in. The gulch, or, as it is called in Nova Scotia, the "tickle," was not wide, but the waves broke from both sides and the tide was racing through. The narrowest part, filled with rocks, was not more than a hundred feet across. It was like the rapids in a river, only with a high, breaking surf. I begged Ask to wait and se if the tide would not go down. He waited for a while, but it was hard to tell whether the water was getting higher or not.

He had given me his sweater and leather vest. With only shirt and pants he finally plunged into the broader part, where the current was less. Four times he tried and was buffeted back. Finally he gained the opposite shore. We saw him go to the hut and over to the other buildings and then, running to the top of the hill, disappear. It was as if he had seen something. He was gone half an hour and, coming back, shouted to

THE RABBLE ROUSER

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

THE other night, after the banquet to the celebrated Hon. Milt Leffing, when I got to telling what I really knew about him, and the gentlemen I was talking to said I just absolutely had to write it all up and get it multigraphed and give each a copy, why, I was pretty well stumped till I thought of dictating the thing to my stenographer, so that's the way I'm going about it. However, I think my friends will find the details of the peculiar facts the same as I told them when we were sitting around smoking on the mezzanine floor of the hotel, after the banquet to the Hon. Milt.

Now, to philosophize a minute, at the start. It's begun to strike me lately that the story of the rise of Milt Leffing is the story of the moving of our country in a contrary direction, as it were; and by that I mean it seems to me our country has been moving downward in certain ways, instead of up, as we all used to think it was going to move in all ways. The young people won't understand this, of course. Young people nearly always think the times of their own youth are 'way in advance of the times that have just gone before. Times they don't really know anything about at all, of course. I'll bet my wife's best hat that if you could have talked to the young people that were getting out of college when the Roman Empire was cracking all to pieces they'd have told you their papas and mammas were mossbacks—and that the past generation lived in awfully backward times, compared to their own.

I'm 64 years old and I've been in politics, one way or another, 43 of those years, so, naturally, I knew Milt Leffing when he started, because he's still a comparatively young man. Right at the start, we saw he was going to give us trouble; he wouldn't begin like anybody else, the regular way, and work up from the ranks, not Milt! All his life he's been a great hand for the short route to success—no plodding for him!

And of all the men I ever knew that have what's called "the gift of gab" Milton Leffing is certainly the giftedest. Boys that went to school with him say he was born with it. Not that he was an orator, particularly—he didn't take any prizes for speechmaking. No, sir; the fellow that took all the big prizes in oratory at the university in Milt Leffing's time was George Brooks—George Thomas Brooks—he and Milt were classmates. Pretty much everybody in the State has heard George Brooks speak since then and knows what a really fine orator he is; and, what's a great deal more important, the intelligent people of the State know what a fine man he is, too.

George Brooks isn't merely a man with a talent for speaking; he's a hard-worker, a scholar, and he thinks for himself. As everybody knows, George Brooks has always been both able and upright; and when you add that he looked what he was, why, no wonder everybody thought he'd be Governor, or United States Senator, by the time he was 40, and who knows what after that! In those days Milt Leffing wasn't considered to be anybody at all alongside of George Thomas Brooks.

MILT was around selling insurance and getting acquainted with people a couple of years while George was in law school, but they both got elected to the Legislature on the same ticket the year after George began to practice in his father's office. That was the year Josie Pettibone came home from Europe, and about 15 of our most promising young bachelors (and all the widowers) started right in to marry her. She was Truett Pettibone's granddaughter, the only kin that old rascal had left to him, and everybody knows Pettibone's Paints. The Pettibone Works is one of the biggest industries in the whole State today; but nobody ever accused either George Brooks or Milt Leffing of being after Josie on that account.

I used to pass old man Pettibone's big house on my way home from the office every afternoon about 5 o'clock, and I certainly saw a few symptoms of Josie's being a "popular girl"! Some days it looked as if even Pettibone's big front porch couldn't hold the boys, there'd be so many of 'em. And moonlight nights in our neighborhood—I only lived three doors from there—well, as I say, on a moonlight night in summer it wasn't any use to go to bed and try to sleep; not until after 11 o'clock, anyhow.

Still, she was a mighty nice sort of girl, and it was easy to see why there were so many wanting her. Of course, a plant like old man Pettibone's made a mighty fine setting for such a jewel, and a lot of money behind a girl does show her off to advantage; but I think there'd have been almost as many suitors if she hadn't had a cent. And I certainly felt sorry for George Brooks when he saw he wasn't going to get her.

I met him one afternoon as I was going by there; he was coming out of their big wrought-iron front gate, and he walked along with me, because he lived just up above me a little way, on the same street, though I don't think he wanted to be with anybody just then—he was looking mighty solemn and a little pale.

"Well, George," I said, "I hope you're making headway in yonder."

"I'm afraid not," he told me, and I asked him if it was Milton Leffing he was afraid of. "I guess I'd be afraid of young Milt in your place, George," I told him. "I'd be afraid he'd talk her into taking him whether she wanted to or not. They say he can talk a coon down from a tree!"

But George shook his head. "No, sir," he said. "I'm afraid neither of us has much chance."

"What's the trouble?" I asked him. "If Milt can't talk her into it I should think you'd have a pretty clear field. I don't see who else would stand in your way around here."

"That's the trouble," he told me. "It isn't anyone around here."

And I could see that Josie had just let him know there wasn't any chance for him, because she was going to marry some out-of-town man.

HE WAS an usher at Josie's wedding; but Milt Leffing went out of town, and they said he was mighty upset. Josie married a Frenchman she'd met abroad; a professor of some sort he was, named Leclerc, and she went over there to live, and stayed there. After the wedding, George Brocks and Milt Leffing went around with the young people the same as ever, but I never heard that either of them showed particular interest in any of the girls.

Now, as it happened, when George had been twice in the Legislature, and made a good record there, he was the man we old-timers at headquarters picked to run for Congress to succeed fat Joe Eli Smith, who had been our district's representative for 12 years, and never did a thing in Washington except eat oyster's at Harvey's until he couldn't walk.

Milton Leffing had the nerve to come out against him for the nomination. He didn't have a chance on earth—in fact, everybody of intelligence in the whole State considered that he covered himself so absolutely with ridicule that he'd never be able to hold his head up again. His speeches were just a scream, as the girls say, and the newspapers had so much fun with them that what he called his "campaign" got to be a joke all over the country.

Milt was a "mixer" from the start. After he got out of college he made it his business to know everybody in town, especially the riffraff—and there's an awful lot of riffraff in a city of 250,000, which was about our population then. Milt mixed around with them, and with respectable workingmen, too; he mixed around with just everybody; and he picked up a kind of roughneck talk that he could use when he wanted to. Milt could go right up to that sort and talk "youse-guys" stuff with the best or worst of them, and when he spoke to an audience of that sort he'd slip in a few expressions of their own dialect. It made me think he was their kind of a man, you see.

"Boys," he'd say, "are you going to send me to Congress or are you going to send that cold-blooded, kid-gloved little gilt-edged calling card, G. Thomas Brooks, that lives up there on the North Side and has to have his pants pressed by a nurse every morning before he crawls out of the hay? Honest, boys, if you send him to Congress, he'll spend half his time getting his little kid gloves washed in gasoline, and the other half he'll put in trying to teach the sergeant-at-arms to turkey-trot.

"Just you go up to his house and holler or whistle for him, or give him the high sign the way you would a neighbor—why, he'd send some sway-backed English dead-eye in a solid gold livery out and tell you to go on home and stop being naughty, naughty; or else he'd have a couple of bulls shoo you away from his part of town. You better put a jinx on that pair of kid gloves, boys,

Milt said he was afraid she'd be bored if she went, and gave me a hardish look.

THE LOVE STORY OF TWO RIVALS

and I'll see that you get yours out of it. There's a lot of you boys, for instance, that like to have little gardens in your back yards. You reckon that slick-haired walking-cane would ever send you any seeds? You send me to Congress and I'll show all the gilt-edge calling-cards and crooked gold fish that this is a poor man's country! You send me to Congress and you and me together will put a hot crimp in this Government's handing all that dough to Wall street. You send me to Congress and I'll see that what they got left goes to the people that ought to have it! Boys, I'll begin with the seeds. You send me to Congress, and I'll see that every man in this audience that wants seeds gets a barrel of 'em!'"

That was Milt Leffing in his first campaign for Congress, gentlemen. Of course, as he knew perfectly well, George Brooks never called himself "G. Thomas Brooks" in his life, but what seemed most ridiculous about the speech was Milt's proffering seeds to that bunch of city riffraff. The newspapers called him the barrel-of-seeds candidate, and I did hope the name would stick to him, but I guess now I was wrong to hope so, because I've come to believe it might do him more good than harm. It did him more good than harm even then, so far as the people he made that speech to were concerned, because it's a fact that the "old Twelfth Ward" has been solid for him from that day to this. They liked his promising them a barrel, you see, whether they could use it or not.

Of course, he didn't have a ghost of a show at the nominating convention; we put George Brooks in a-flying, and if you'd been there you'd hardly have noticed that Milt Leffing was running. I met him on the sidewalk the next morning, and he laughed about it; but, 'You wait!' he said. "I'm going to make the whole bunch of you look like mossbacks before I'm through. I'm starting slow," he said, "but when I get really going it'll take two men to see me whiz by."

WELL, George Brooks made a fine record during his three terms in Congress—not a showy one, but nobody of intelligence doubted that he was going to stay—at least until we sent him up higher—and that's why we got a tolerable-sized shock when we found we had a real fight on our hands to keep him there.

You see a good deal of water had flowed under the bridge in George's time in Congress. I should say so! We used to have a nice-sized city here; just about right for a fellow to feel comfortable in and be able to say he knew practically everybody that was anybody, and then, before we actually realized what was happening we found we were living in a metropolis where sometimes you wouldn't think you knew anybody at all, the place had got so big! There were parts of it where you could hardly hear your own language spoken. You can hardly blame an old-timer for feeling as if the country was "going crazy."

I happened to say so to Milt Leffing one day, meeting him in the lobby of the safety deposit where I kept my under-sized box. "You bet it is!" he said, and he laughed as though he thought I was a right comic man. "It's going just as crazy as it knows how; it's running away like a crazy bronco, and it's going to need some mighty smart people to ride it. The trouble with you is, you can't keep your feet in the stirrups and you're getting uneasy about your seat in the saddle. Look out, Uncle Ben!"

"Is that so!" I said.

"You bet it's so!" he told me, and he went on laughing, right in my face. "Did you notice how much I gained on your little pet, Georgie Brooks, last time I came out against him?"

"Oh, you gained two or three," I told him. "It didn't exactly scare us, though, Millie," I told him.

"No?" he said. "Wait till next time. Watch me handle this improved primary system; I'm going to walk right over you. I told you once I would and the day's about due, Uncle Ben!"

WELL, most everybody around here knows the way Milt went into that campaign to get the nomination away from George Brooks. His "barrel-of-seeds" speech was mild—it was just nothing at all—compared to what he went around promising the "people" now. I went to hear him once, and part of what he said went about like this:

"Ain't you dead ones ever going to get wise? Ain't you tired yet of having a pair of creased pants represent you in Washington? Honest, folks, I should think you'd rather have a good busy cockroach down there for you, because a cockroach would anyhow do something; at least he'd move around spryer! Don't you ever get tired of letting that crooked millionaire push ride you? Now, the latest thing I hear they're talking about is putting up the gas rate, the telephone rate, the street-car fares. They're going to make the people and the poor man pay all this on top of the freight rates and the passenger fares the railroad crooks are already charging; and, just to make your life pleasanter, the coal profiteers are raising the price of coal about a dollar a month. And you poor fish sit here and let 'em do it to you!

"What are you paying for a beefsteak? I mean if you been lucky enough to see a beefsteak since G. Thomas Brooks went to Washington to help the packers and profiteers run the Government. What's the reason these corporation millionaires tell you they got to put up the price of everything a poor man needs? They say it's because wages are so high! The Rockefellers, the Astors and G. Thomas Brookses won't be able to keep their pants creased unless they raise prices on you and lower your wages! Somebody might have to get along with one less gold-liveried English butler to peel an orange for him every Tuesday on the yacht! Ain't that a pity now!

"Listen, boys! Send G. Thommy Brooks back to Congress again, and you'll get the same old deal you've always had. My Gad! Haven't you got that into your beans by this time? I came here tonight to tell you what I stand for if you send me to Washington to work for you. The millionaires say the workingman is getting too much wages. All right, I stand for putting those wages higher! The millionaires say their high prices are too low. All right, I stand for putting them lower! Yes, and then some! They want to raise your street-car fare from a nickel to 7 cents; I can stand for higher pay for the motormen and conductors and a 3-cent fare! Now answer me: Do you want it?"

He got a roar out of them on that, and I suppose I was about the only person there that thought of the ridiculousness of a candidate for the nomination to Congress promising to reduce street-car fares in a city outside the District of Columbia.

There wasn't any doubt of it: he'd begun to worry the "organization" a good deal. For one thing, he got the most enormous publicity; he was so outrageous that everybody talked about him, and everything he said or did was "news" for the newspapers. They were all against him, but he was such good copy they couldn't help from playing him up on the front page. And another advantage he had, he worked the "under-dog" sympathy to a standstill. He posed as the one single figure struggling for the helpless "masses" against a horde of powerful scoundrels who were trying to run the "steam-roller" over him. No doubt that got many votes; but what brought him the most support was his promises. He promised the whole United States to everybody that voted for him, and to the crowd of heelers that he'd worked up into a kind of "opposition organization."

WELL, along toward the day of the primary, we took a count of noses, and it scared us. Personally speaking, it scared me worse as a patriot. If he could put it over our people like that, what sort of people were we getting to be?

Another thing in his favor was that he had the "wet" element behind him, and hadn't hurt himself with the "drys." He simply kept off the subject and let his friends whisper to both sides, whereas George Brooks had come out square, and taken the position that prohibition was now a part of the Constitution and therefore must be absolutely enforced, which got the "wets" against him, of course. They worked hard, so hard, in fact, that it was really an issue—the issue—and then we saw that Milt Leffing had to be forced into declaring himself openly. If he went to the "drys" he'd lose most of the "wets," who'd be sore, of course, after all the whispering; and if he went to the "wets" there were enough drys to make it pretty sure he'd be beaten. We decided to wait for a speech he was booked to make at Eaglesfield, a little town 22 miles from here, and then we'd pin him down.

Now, here's where the queer part comes in. Old Truett Pettibone had died, back in 1915, and a trust company and a board of directors was running the works for Josie. Her husband got killed just before the armistice, and one day that winter I heard she was coming back to live there again, for a while, anyway, and then I heard she'd arrived, and was settling herself in the house; but I didn't see her until one afternoon as I was going by there, I took a notion to go in and present my respects.

We talked about how the town had changed and about who had married who among the young people she'd known, and then I mentioned kind of pointedly that George Brooks wasn't married yet.

"He's the finest young man in the United States today, Josie," I told her. "He's having a career that makes all his old friends mighty proud of him. He didn't let on what he was going through at your wedding; he took his medicine like a man; but he never got over it," I told her. "He's never looked at any girl since."

Well, she seemed to be kind of surprised—I don't mean about George, but I suppose she wasn't used to anybody's coming right out at her with things like that. Still, she laughed and said she'd seen George and thought he was looking very well.

"Yes," I told her. "Washington life agrees with him. They say it's a mighty nice climate. I should think you'd like to spend some time there yourself, Josie."

Then she surprised me; she came right out with it flatter than I had. "Not as the wife of a Congressman," she said. And she laughed again. "I don't think I'd like it at all!"

"Well, you mightn't have to do much of that," I told her, and I laughed, too, because she kept on laughing. "George is liable to go a good deal higher than the House of Representatives."

"Isn't that charming!" she said, and just then George Brooks himself walked in. And he hadn't been there three minutes when Milt Leffing showed up, too! What's more, I saw right away they'd both of them been there often before.

I was just going to get out and leave her and George alone; but when Milt came in I decided to stay a little longer. "It seems like old times, seeing you three young people together. Do you take any interest in American politics, Josie?" I asked her. "Do you think you'll take out naturalization papers and vote? Our two friends here are both candidates."

"Oh, yes, I know," she said laughing, but both George Brooks and Milt Leffing got kind of red.

"Miss Josie," I told her, "you certainly ought to go and hear some of the speeches. They'd interest you a whole lot," I told her. "Especially some of Milt's."

"Oh, no," he came back at me. "I've never been an orator; George has always been the orator. I only talk to the people."

"Yes, I should say you do!" I said, and then I turned to Josie again. "You mustn't miss hearing Milt," I told her. "He's going to make a great speech at Eaglesfield about a week from now and you could motor over there for it."

Milt said he was afraid she'd be bored if she went, and he gave me a hardish look that showed he understood what I was up to. If he didn't make one of his usual tirades, the crowd would be disappointed, while if he did, why, Josie was an intelligent woman, and she'd certainly know what to think of him. Besides, it was Eaglesfield where we were going to heckle him into a corner, though of course he didn't know that.

Pretty soon Milt began telling stories about some of the rough-neck workers of his Twelfth Ward, and I'll have to say this for him: he knew how to tell a story, and he made Josie laugh more than I guess she'd probably laughed since before the war. The truth is, I laughed once or twice myself; I couldn't help it—but I didn't intend to sit there and see him do it all, with poor George never saying a word; so I waited till Milt was about the middle of one of his stories, and then I got up, pretending I didn't notice he was talking, and said I'd have to go. "Good afternoon," I said, and I walked to the doorway. "Be sure you don't miss that Eaglesfield speech of our friend here, Josie. I think it'll be quite a revelation!" I told her. "You better go!"

"I shall!" she called after me; and when I was getting my hat in the hall, George Brooks came out and got his, too. "You go back there!" I whispered to him, but he shook his head, and when we got out on the sidewalk I went for him.

"What the dickens you want to give him a clear field for?" I asked him. "What in thunder you want to let Milt Leffing run you out like that for?"

"I can't stand him," George said, "I can't speak to that fellow with any civility, and, of course, I can't speak to him any other way before a lady, so all I can do is not to speak at all. I know how that makes me look!"

"But, my goodness!" I told him. "You can talk to her, can't you?"

"Not when he's there. He's got a way of making it impossible, because he either keeps talking about me or else tells her funny stories one after the other the way he did today."

"Don't you know the most dangerous thing in the world is to let the other fellow keep a woman laughing?" I asked him. "Especially a widow!" I told him. "You better stop him!"

"Stop him!" says George. "Who knows how to stop Milt Leffing?"

"Oh, I don't think it's that bad," I said. "I think we're going to get him stopped politically at Eaglesfield. If he can talk himself out of what we got fixed for him there, I'll eat the Soldiers' Monument! And in my opinion, if that lady we just saw ever hears one of his mob-rule speeches she'll never let him in the house again. And I'm going to see that she does hear him, too, George. I'm tolerably sure she'll go over to Eaglesfield. Don't you want to take her, yourself?"

"No," he said, "I won't go. If I did I couldn't pretend it wouldn't be in the hope of ruining him with her."

"That's so," I told him, as I turned in at my own gate. "I kind of wish sometimes you did know how to pretend better, George."

WELL, as it turned out, I was the one that went with her, myself.

Everybody in Eaglesfield had jammed in somehow, and brought along the children and babies.

"Gentlemen and ladies," the chairman told us, "we have heard all these candidates for minor offices that came here to invite our suffrages. We will now listen to one who desires a more important function, that of our Representative in Washington. Wherever our sympathies may lay, gentlemen and ladies, the reputation of the gentleman about to address us assures us we shall certainly be entertained in hearing him. I take pleasure in introducing the Hon. Milton Leffing."

Well, about half the crowd began to cheer and holler "Leffing! Leffing!" so loud you couldn't have heard a cannon, if it had been shot off in there, but in a little while they quieted down and I bent over to Josie and said: "Now, listen to him and think whatever you will think!"

She nodded, and leaned forward; and she looked right excited.

"The Hon. Milton Leffing!" says the chairman, shouting; and I saw the man that had been making signs to me stand up and look all around. Everybody else was looking around, too.

"Isn't Mr. Leffing present?" asks the chairman.

Then was when I got it right in the face. A man with a new ready-made suit on and the size tag still sewed to his coat, walked up on the platform and spoke to the chairman and then to the crowd.

"I greatly regret to announce that a message received by long-distance phone conveys the information that a sudden attack of acute indigestion has necessitated Mr. Leffing to remain confined to his room under the care of a medical man. He will not be able to address us this evening."

"The quitter!" I said, and I said it out loud.

I apologized to Josie on the way home for dragging her out on such a night—64 miles!—for nothing on earth. She was friendly enough to make light of it, but I felt about as silly as a man can; and I caught a horrible cold, too. I was in bed with it for 10 days.

BUT here's the queer part of it: The day I got out again, and down to my office, I had to O K some very private accounts, and one of them was for a taxicab that our people had hired to haul voters to the polls for the primaries. BUT here's the queer part of it: The day I got out again, and down to my office, I had to O K some very private accounts, and one of them was for a taxicab that our people had hired to haul voters to the polls for the primaries. The driver brought his bill himself—an old night-hawk driver I'd known a long while, and he owned his car. His name was Jeb something-or-other.

"I reckon Milt Leffing'd never got many dry votes if they knew about his drinking," Jeb said, among other things. "Why, he was tighter than I ever saw him the very night he was to make that big speech. That's why he never got there."

"How do you know it?"

"Why, because," Jeb says, "because he told me to take him there and he thought he was going there."

"Come off!" I told him.

"I can prove it," he told me.

"Prove it, then," I asked him.

"Sure!" he said. "It was like this: It came on dark early that evening and you know how cold it was. I was in Joe Leminski's nice warm boot-leggin' parlors just about dark, with my machine parked around the corner, when Milt come in there. He was just about ossified; he could just barely navigate and make himself understood. He come up to me and he says: 'Git me into your taxi, Jeb, and take me to Eaglesfield; I got a speech to make there.' 'You better not make no speech tonight,' I says. 'You'll fall on your face.' 'No, I won't,' he says. 'I make some of my best speeches jest when I'm soberin' up. I know what I'm doin',' he says. 'You git me in your taxi and I'll sleep most of the way there and wake up ready to make the speech of my life. I got to make a special effort tonight,' he says, 'and after jest one more big drink we'll start,' he says. So he had the big one, and it looked to me as though it pretty near finished him, but I got him out and into my car, and he went to sleep before I could git the door shut! Well, I started for Eaglesfield, but when we got out into the country I thought I was goin' to freeze. We was headed east and the wind come from the north fit to blow us over. My car's open at the sides of the driver's seat, and I didn't have no protection at all. That rain was half snow and sleet, and by the time we got off the paved road I decided Milt didn't actually need to make no speech at Eaglesfield that night! So I turned right around and come back to that bum restaurant of Miller's on Columbia avenue. I went in and got warm, and then I went back and looked in the door of the cab without opening it. The glass was pretty near covered with snow, but I could see him in there, and it looked to me as he had one eye about half open. So I put both hands on the side of the car and rocked it and shook it as hard as I could, to make him think I was still goin', and he closed his eye and went on sleepin'. Well, and so I went back in Miller's and kept warm until I thought I better go out and rock the car again. I rocked it a while and then I opened the door. He kind of half woke up, but didn't open his eyes.

"'What's the matter?' he says. 'We ain't at Eaglesfield yet, are we?'

"'No,' I says. 'We're jest at Hillstown, half way. I'll have to charge you $10 more to go on to Eaglesfield.' Well, he reached me out a few $5 bills without opening his eyes, and I went back in Miller's again.

"About 9 o'clock, when I reckoned Milt would be due for his speech I had Miller call up the hall at Eaglesfield and say their big speaker had acute indigestions. Milt woke up about 10 minutes after that and come in the restaurant as bright as a daisy. He thought it was some place in Eaglesfield, and wanted to know why I hadn't taken him straight to the hall. Well, I stalled around, because I was afraid he'd about kill me when he found out how things were, but he didn't. He studied a minute and then broke out laughing. 'My goodness, Jeb!' he says. 'I believe you've done more for me than I knew how to do for myself!' So he give me another $5 bill and I drove him home. You can see how it was; if it hadn't been for me he'd a' made that speech at Eaglesfield."

"Yes, Jeb," I said. "If it hadn't been for you a good many things might have happened!"

THAT was true. If it hadn't been for Jeb, the taxicab man, I believed then that the career of Milt Leffing would have ended right there. But, in the retirement some of us are sharing with poor George Brooks, I've had more time to think it over. If Milt had reached Eaglesfield and made his speech, I incline now to think he'd have put it over on us some way; that fellow is so all-fired smart! I think now we couldn't have stopped him from getting hold of this mixed-up queer new "people" we've got. They like him too well. He knows them and knows how to ride them; he makes them think they're riding with him and he's their man! It doesn't make any difference that he can't keep the promises he makes them; he makes so many new ones all the time that they never get a chance to think of the old ones.

Well, he's certainly been riding way up on top ever since he got that nomination away from George Brooks. The fact all the conservative and sensible gentlemen I'm dictating this for were at the banquet the other night to celebrate Milt's election as Governor—isn't that proof of it? For that matter, I was there myself.

THERE'S one more thing my thinking it over has made me conclude: I don't believe we could have stopped him with Josie Pettibone Leclerc, either. Women are hard to count on; you can't predict about them any more than you can about the "people"—and how she did fool me about not wanting to be the wife of a Congressman! Of course, she didn't stay but two years. Everybody saw how handsome she looked in the ladies' balcony at the banquet, and how proud she looked of her husband, the Governor, when he made his speech of thanks.

The Mysterious "Flowers of Death"

evely day." When Agent Markham dropped into Neu's shop to purchase for himself an especially attractive box of fruit he discovered that instead of being unusually reasonable in his prices Neu was really exorbitant. The last circumstance was directly opposed to reports gathered from the families of murder victims he had served, and from the Russian priest on the other side of the foreign settlement. It was plain that Neu did not want any more trade than he had and, to the watchful eyes of Agent Markham, it was apparent that what trade Neu did have would be very unprofitable. He spent too much of his time making his far-away deliveries, which he invariably made himself. On his trips he shut his shop as, evidently, he did not think it worth while to employ an assistant to watch over his tiny store while he was absent. Agent Markham and Mura Vidal knew he was engaged at something else than merely selling vegetables and fruits.

EVERY other investigation was now abandoned in favor of Neu Chi-kewi. His antecedents were secretly assembled. He operated his own truck garden some place outside the city borders—inland and along the Nankin road, the "Lincoln Highway" of China, which passes through many fertile provinces. Each morning Neu came in from the Nankin road in his one-horse cart. During the day the horse rested, and then drew his master out along the road again at sundown.

All police records seemed to prove Neu to be a very respectable, diligent gardener-merchant. That he was prosperous in his way was indicated by the total absence of any financial imbroglios. He paid his bills promptly, every six months, kept the joss sticks burning through the twilight in front of his shop, made his obeisance to Buddha on all proper occasions, and drove the devils out of his shop each morning by making a terrific din on his copper toms. Because a Chinese never answers questions that appear to be infringements upon his own affairs, no one knew just where Neu's garden was located. And it would have been useless to ask him.

EVERY sundown a long procession of carts, rickishaws and nangpangs, quaint baskets carrying human freight strung on poles borne by runners, goes out the Nankin road. It is the road the gardeners and truck merchants take to their little truck farms. The appearance in the procession of a foreigner would be chattered about for miles, in the sing-song tone with which the coolies pass on their gossip to those ahead of or behind them. Neither Constable 1312 nor Agent Markham could openly follow Neu, and they decided not to bring to their assistance any of the native Chinese police. So it was that a "Chinese" girl, shrouded in a white veil, was carried in a "nangpang" on the shoulders of two coolies, out the Nankin road just at dusk. Close ahead of her Neu Chi-kwei rambled along behind his horse.

Constable 1312 did not return that night. As she had said she would remain in the neighborhood of Neu's garden if she succeeded in tracing him to it, Agent Markham did not worry. The next afternoon he, too, went along the road, almost deserted now. He traveled openly, on horseback. He watched keenly for a sign or signal. When he found a bit of white linen caught on a fence-post, some two miles outside the city, he stopped. At the base of the post there was a mound of freshly disturbed earth. He scraped the mound and found a hastily scribbled note:

"Go back and leave the horse. Come again tomorrow afoot. Turn to the left at the next path. Pass the twelfth hut on the left of the path. You will come to a square garden around a little house painted white. Watch carefully. I shall be hidden above the rafters. Neu lives there with one boy. The boy stays in the garden during the day. Bring me some decent food and enter the house when you have located the boy in the field and are sure he doesn't observe. We are on the right track."

MARKHAM obeyed the girl's instructions. Shortly after noon he walked with the idle stroll of the sightseer along the Nankin road until he came to the post which he had marked. He found the path and made his turn to the left, counted twelve of the little thatch-roofed huts, in which chattering families of coolies and gardeners live in a single room, until he came to the better house painted white.

All about him gardeners, men, women and children, were busy in their fields. They paid him scant attention. Foreign visitors in the city frequently ramble through the countryside during the midday, and when the Chinese are busy in their fields they are not curious.

When he had located Neu's assistant, busy in the garden, the American stole into the white house. For a time he was convinced the girl had fled, or that something had happened to her. There was no sign of her. Unlike the majority of the Chinese huts, the house held two rooms, a large and a smaller one.

Markham examined the smaller room and was startled to see the complete paraphernalia of a small laboratory. Evidently, Neu Chi-kwei was a student and semi-scientist when he was not delivering cabbages and radishes to his customers in the city.

A noise attracted Markham and he swung around with his revolver drawn. A little laugh drew his attention to a corner of the room. Mura Vidal had dropped from above onto a cushioned chair and bounded lightly to the floor. Her first words came in husky whisper: "Get me water, quick!"

She had remained throughout the night and day, except for her one escape to the road to leave the message and mark it with a bit of white torn from her underwear, stretched with her face downward among the ceiling rafters. Through the night she had watched the movements of Neu on the floor below. She had been unable to move, for the slightest sound would have alarmed him.

While she watched the garden through a window Markham hastily searched the house. He gathered handsful of dried flowers, poppies of a peculiar color and form—specimens that differed from any that he knew. He also put into his pockets a glass test tube and a nickel-plated instrument or two.

CHEMISTS began their analysis of the drying poppy blossoms at once, and examined the test tube and other things filched from Neu's laboratory. Markham, his appearance changed, visited the house again, and this time called to the assistant in the garden for a gourd of water. He noticed that a corner of the garden was given over to poppies that resembled the blossoms found in the house. In pidgin English he remarked to the Chinese upon the strangeness of their appearance. The boy observed, with a gesture of his hands: "Neu Chi-kwei, he glow them diffelent. He play muchee with. He clazy!"

Markham was certain Neu Chi-kwei was not so crazy as his helper thought him to be. Mura Vidal kept her vigil through another night. When she crept out the next day and joined Markham on the road, she knew that Neu Chi-kwei brewed a poison from his flowers and with it impregnated leaves of cabbage, handsful of fruit and the little lemonlike oranges that grow in China. She knew the secret of the poison which the chemists were unable to analyze. They discovered in the blossoms the usual traces of that insidious poison which is in the Chinese poppy naturally—the poison that becomes opium, but they had found no such traces in their various autopsies on the bodies of the murder victims. Yet Mura Vidal knew, for she had seen, that Neu Chi-kwei distilled something from the flowers which he transferred to his vegetables and fruit.

In the home of the Russian priest, where his daughter and two refugee Princesses lived with him, a watch was placed on the produce merchant. When he had left his cabbages and radishes one morning, they were taken hastily to the chemists. They found in them telltale traces of the same mysterious matter which had been revealed in the analysis of the grafted hybrid poppy flowers. Whatever his reasons, Neu Chi-kwei had marked the Russian priest and his little family of dependents for the same death he had meted out to Boddy, Goodrich, Forrest and four others. Physicians provided the family with such antidotes as they could agree on and, fortunately, one of them was successful. None suffered from the poison that had been fed them.

THE officials knew quite well the utter futility of simply asking Neu Chi-kwei to explain, after his arrest. Mura Vidal was not satisfied, however, that the garden boy was as ignorant as he appeared to be. At least he could tell, she concluded, how and when the hybrid poppies were cultivated.

They arrested the Chinese merchant in the morning, and within an hour the American and the girl detective confronted the Chinese boy in Neu's big room. He stubbornly maintained that he knew nothing except that his master "played like clazy" in his poppy garden. Constable 1312 asked her companion if he would mind standing guard outside the cottage door. "And," she said, "do not be concerned if you hear some shots from my revolver. When I want you I will come to the door myself."

Agent Markham stood guard. Presently he heard a shot, and a shout of pain. He did not leave his post. There was another shot, and another—at intervals. Then a sudden volley of them.

Presently Constable 1312 opened the cottage door and beckoned to the American. Her face was very white, and there was strange light in her black Asiatic eyes. "We must get a physician at once," she said. "You go. I'll wait!" Markham strode across the threshold. The Chinese boy was lying on the floor, twisting. "Oh, he's quite all right!" the girl announced. "I just grazed his flesh with every shot. My last ones went a little deeper and he knew I meant what I said."

WHATEVER it was that she had said, or threatened with "shots that went a little deeper," had had its effect. They were able to report later that day to the High Commissioner:

Neu-Chi-kwei had lost his grandfather and grandmother and two others of his "ancestors" in the Boxer rebellion. They had been killed by a detachment of foreign troops, of what country it is not necessary to say here. When he grew up his father repeated the circumstances to him every twilight until he, too, was dead. And at every twilight young Neu Chi-kwei swore the Chinese oath of vengeance in the name of his ancestors. He learned chemistry in the college at Singapore. And he learned much of botany. Through many years he labored in his poppy garden to increase the poison duct in the poppy bloom, and succeeded at last when he had successfully grafted to his poppy plants spriga of the deadly "chulkow," or poison weed that resembles the nightshade.

The International Police Commission gathered the blooming "flowers of death," as they are described in the Shanghai records, and destroyed the garden. The secret of the poison is preserved in the police archives. Of the case there is nothing left except the hope that Neu Chi-kwei had not yet confided his secret to any of his relatives. He was executed in the Shanghai Prison.

us. The huts and buildings were empty. They were fishermen's houses, used for lobstering. There was no sign of life. It was another island and at the other end was another wider gulch which he was going to swim. Beyond that was what looked like the mainland.

I WAS too feeble not to agree. My heart was pumping and the others were exhausted. It must have been 7 o'clock in the morning. The sun was coming out and the wind was falling. The hurricane was past, but the sea was still roaring and lashing. We climbed about, ate blueberries, and watched the gully. Gradually we saw more seaweed on the rocks and we knew that the water was falling. We watched. By 10 o'clock the water was only knee-deep. Chapman and Jay waded across first to show how easy it was. I was thoroughly a coward. Arnold had been wearing a woolen scarf and tied it around my neck. I had torn up the rest of the linen mattress cover with which to bind Chapman's and Arnold's feet, which were bare and bruised.

I felt that I had had enough shocks for one night and that I could not swim the current if I should fall in the rapid water. I kept quietly feeling of my heart, which pained me. I discovered it was tender to the touch and swollen. Then I realized for the first time that I had been flung against the rock when I came ashore. This gave me courage, and with the help of an oar I was able to wade across and stumble my way through the furze bushes to the nearest hut. It was empty, with a seaman's bunk on one side, a plank table, some three-legged stools, a window, and nothing else, and had been used when men came lobstering. Over the doorway someone had derisively painted: "London Hotel."

The sun came out and the wind died down. Outside the sea was raging. We lay about, dried our clothes, slept, and waited. What had become of Ask? Had he been able to swim the broader current and make the mainland? It seemed more questionable as the hours passed on. We were getting hungry and thirsty. I realized that with protection from the weather, and with the berries which grew about, we could hold out for several days until we were rescued or had gained strength to explore the island. The great question was fire and warmth. We had no covering and were hungry. If we could only get some kind of fire or find a way of making a light we could start a bonfire and attract attention. The other hut was full of lobster pots and buoys and we felt that we were justified in burning them up if it were necessary, but there was no way of starting a fire.

I had crawled into the board bunk in the hut and was thinking of the coming night. As I lay there I happened to notice an old matchbox beside me. It was empty, but I began to wonder how it happened to be in the bunk. Possibly the fisherman who had left it there had been a lazy man who had been smoking in bed. Otherwise, why should he have left it in the bunk rather than on the table or window ledge? I got up and began to explore the planks of the bunk and the chinks between them. There I found two—and only two—dry, untouched matches! I realized that with caution we could have our bonfire and warmth.

Arnold remembered the cans of kerosene that had been washed on the rocks from the Shanghai. He and Jay waded across again to the small island where we had come ashore. They brought over a leaking can of kerosene and three candles which they had picked up. If the wood for the fire were soaked with the kerosene it would certainly make a blaze and attract attention. We now had warmth and light for the night.

BY 4 o'clock in the afternoon we had made up our minds that we should have to spend the night there. Ask, even if he had not been drowned, had found it too hard to get help, or that the sea was too dangerous for anyone to venture out in such weather.

Jay, across the island in another hut, had found a dried codfish skin, on which had been left a few shreds of salt fish. We picked this off and ate it, although it made us more thirsty. We were still afraid to try the swampy rainwater which we found in the pools under the moss. There was not yet need to run further risks.

At 5 o'clock the others were lying in the grass at the side of the hut. I was inside trying to collect my thoughts and peace of mind. Suddenly there was a shout and halloo, and there outside were two Nova Scotia sailors, smiling, hearty, and vigorous. They were welcome savers of life.

Ask had tramped across the island without finding anything but the empty huts and a boathouse which we had seen. The island was deserted. He plunged into the current of the gully at the other end. The land across was another island, uninhabited and bare. By this time his knees were stiff and his legs and feet heavy. The water beyond was wide and the tide rushing. He could hardly swim. His shoes he still wore, but he was exhausted from the night of shipwreck and the struggle up the bluff. He had run and was now swimming the third gulch. The tide was racing and the waves breaking. White Point consists of a series of three island. The outermost, on which the Shanghai had struck, is called White Bluff. Beyond that are the reefs, and to the west is Dover Bay, where the transatlantic cable comes. The next island, to which we had crossed and where we were now waiting, was used for lobster fishing during the season. This was the reason for the huts and shelters.

Ask was powerful and young and had won a championship for swimming in Norway. Finally he reached the mainland. No houses or any signs of habitations were in sight. He started running through the swamps and woods, not knowing where or how far he was going. Tearing through briers and stumps, over rocks, across streams, he found no road or path. He was headed east along the coast, with a wild desire for help. How many miles he went he does not know. The direct distance is about 12 miles, but he must have gone many more. Eventually he saw the spire of a church.

Running toward this, breaking a way through the underbrush, he came to a cleared space. There was a farmhouse with a woman standing by the door. He must have been a wild, terrifying sight, coming from the woods, with black, disordered hair, bare throat and breast, torn shirt, breathless, gasping, exhausted.

"What did you say to her?"

"Nothing. I looked so wild she was afraid and went in and shut the door."

HE followed the road into the town of Canso. Men gathered about him. He told of the wreck, the need for help and rescue. They took him through the town and down to the wharves, where was the fishing station with smacks and schooners. Volunteers were called for. Capt. MacDonald offered to go with his smack. Five brave men volunteered. Ask went with them. The sea was yet high, although the hurricane had passed. They sailed through the passage between the islands and came to the inner side. It would have been impossible to land on the outer. The boat lay to while they launched a dory. Ask had described as well as he could the position of the island and directed them to the place. The two men came in the dory through the surf, landed on a rock, walked across the island and were about to cross to the smaller one where the Shanghai had been wrecked when they saw the fishermen's hut where we were.

We had taken Arnold's scarf and tied it to an oar and stuck it from the hut to make a signal. In an hour we were brought to the town of Canso and were rescued.

Two days afterward we went by train from Canso to Mulgrave, where we were to take the train through to Halifax on our way to New York. We had been outfitted with new clothes, and the adventure in the Shanghai was finished.

those Pullman cars on a siding for repairs.

"During the day 'Bill' is at the Public Library. He's reading. He knows more about primitive man than I do. Everything he can find on that subject he reads. He knows a lot about odd islands and faraway countries. He knows about the new exploration in Tibet, or some other outland place.

"Now ordinarily one would think 'Bill' wanted to be an explorer. He doesn't. He just wants quiet. When we find him he goes home. He's glad to be there. What sends him away is his spirit of rebelliousness against his stepmother's tongue."

Dr. Nelson sat thinking.

"These aren't cases," he said, "that you can measure by a foot-rule. The girl we've helped, and we hope for the best. 'Bill' and 'Ted' are not running away so often, but, to be candid, I have reports on both of them here and I'm not sure that they are at home today. What encourages us is that they don't run away so often as they used. We may, and we hope eventually we will, make them good members of society."

So they work on in the Child Guidance Clinic, with the runaway "Marys" and "Janes" and "Teds" and "Bills." They try to mold the round holes to fit the square pegs and try to file off the edges of the square pegs to fit round holes. Often the whole difficulty is in the child's environment. And often those who most truly love the child are most rigid and unbending in attempting to make it conform.

"Utopia" May Be Here

on saddle horse, teams and automobiles, are wearing broad paths through the greenery, perhaps future Main streets?

It is a testing of Mr. Delbridge's theory that crime and politics are the greatest handicaps to other towns, and that these evils can be eliminated.

"We not only believe that crime can be stopped, but we are going to show you a town where it has been stopped," remarked Mr. Delbridge.

"The world must be rid of crime, or eventually it will be depopulated. The collective ownership of cities is doomed. Individual ownership, and one-man control, is on the way because of its greater efficiency and economy.

"Individual ownership of a town means that undesirables can be kept out, because they will have no chance to buy land or rent houses. Suppose a man rents a house from us, and an undesirable person goes to board with him. If that householder doesn't put out the undesirable, he will be put out himself.

"In getting rid of the criminals we also shall be getting rid of the criminal courts, and of the police officers, the bondsmen, the lawyers, jailers and others who get their living from crime. Without criminals, they could not carry on their business. And how about the civil courts, which are just as much of a curse as the criminal courts?

"The collection of debt by law is a farce, a humbug and a tragedy. Eventually, we intend asking the State Legislature to exempt Washington County from the collection of debt by law, and we'll make the county the most prosperous place in the world. Certainly, a man should pay what he owes. If he hasn't the refuge of the courts, and knows that to beat a creditor means that he can get no more credit from anybody, he will pay or starve."

THE saws and the hammers have much work ahead of them at Delbridge, if the plans of the founders materialize. A grist mill will be built about one and one-half miles away, near a waterfall, where the founders of Delbridge now operate a sawmill.

A broom factory at Delbridge already is assured, and broom corn has been planted on nearby farms with seed supplied them at Delbridge. Another factory planned is a wood-working plant to produce useful articles from the huge available supply of hickory.

But the industrial side of Delbridge is not the only one which has engaged the attention of the owner and his associates. The dairy industry thereabouts is being encouraged, and cream is shipped regularly to St. Louis. Efforts also are being made to improve the quality of the cattle and the sheep, both important items in Washington County, where the principal occupations are grazing and lumbering.

Much of the work at Delbridge has been the clearing of land for cultivation. Thickly wooded in part, and with large trees frequent even on the lowlands and in the valleys, the chopping down of trees and the uprooting of stumps is a toilsome but necessary task. Dwelling houses, barns and other farm buildings are being erected, and will be rented with as much acreage as the tenants may desire.

None of the land in the town of Delbridge, nor in the balance of the 1600-acre tract, is for sale. None of it ever will be sold, says the owner. It can only be rented, or, in exceptional cases, leased.

THE 1600-acre tract stands in the name of C. L. Delbridge, trustee. At his death it will pass to another trustee, whom Mr. Delbridge has chosen, the next trustee will select his successor and so on. The project had its inception when a well-to-do friend of Mr. Delbridge wished to establish a sanctuary for animals and birds. There will be no shooting nor trapping at Delbridge, and food is being put out for the birds regularly. Kindness to animals and birds is an unwritten law at Delbridge.

Mr. Delbridge is well known, not only as a publisher of mathematical works, but for his battle against express companies, prior to the starting of the United States parcels post, and for his active opposition on numerous occasions to the management of the United Railways system, St. Louis. Always he has been a formidable antagonist.

How Women Make $50 and Up per Week

Here is the easiest, most fascinating way for women to make money that anyone can imagine. You simply can't think of anything more simple, successful and delightful—entirely different from old, hard methods. No canvassing, no tramping from door to door, showing samples, or carrying goods, no arguing or persuading to do.

We've worked out a marvelous selling plan for the new and wonderful Luzette corsets, girdles, brassieres, combinations and reducing garments. It's much on the principle of the mail order business, getting orders from catalogs. But—instead of working from headquarters in a big city, we have women as local representatives in different places to take care of the business produced by our handsome free catalogs. The catalogs sell the goods. The representative sees that the orders are sent in. That's all.

No Experience Needed

Just see what this offers to you. You don't need any experience. Your spare time will be enough, and you can make a lot of money. It just depends on the number of catalogs sent out. Miss Glinape made $14.50 in three hours. Mrs. Zabel sold $47.00 in half day. Mrs. Kostankow made $15.72 in one day. Miss Levington made $54.00 in four days. Agents making $15.00 and more per day.

Women simply can't resist the wonderful Luzette corsetry. These new and amazing garments give the much desired "straight" figure and absolute comfort. Even the most ungainly form becomes graceful in a Luzette. Sizes for all women. Splendidly made of finest materials. We sell them for about half what they would bring if sold in stores. Women buy on sight. They will hand the orders to you—and you will make big commissions.

Earn this Money and Your Corset Free

If you haven't received a Luzette Catalog yourself, it means that we haven't anyone in your locality. So here is your chance to make an independent income, simply by answering this ad. Other women are succeeding wonderfully, and so can you.

Just comply with our easy requirements and you not only get the full commissions on the business done, but you also get your choice of the charming Luzette models free. Write at once and secure the appointment while the territory is open. Postcard or letter brings full particulars by return mail.

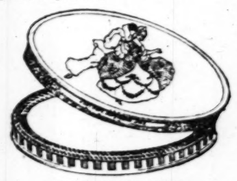
At Last! The Perfect Vanity To Carry Your Loose Face Powder

The newly-invented La-May Vanity is by far the most perfect—faultless—way yet discovered to carry loose powder. Each time you lift the cover you get just enough powder on your puff—it almost works itself—no spilling, no messing with powder. It works so perfectly that every one who gets one exclaims—"Why wasn't this idea patented before?" They say they would not part with it for anything, if they could not get another. And, it's so smart in appearance—beautifully finished in lustrous black enamel with delicate painted border—has fine mirror, hinged cover and extra thick soft wool puff. Of course, it's thin enough and light enough to carry in your purse. This dainty box sells for only fifty cents. But, exactly the same box is being made of sterling silver to sell for five dollars. The wonderful loose powder feature alone makes it worth its weight in gold.

The reason this delightful handy vanity is sold for only fifty cents is to advertise La-May Face Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). Each vanity is filled with this wonderful powder. La-May is the successful creation of a specialist who spent twenty years to make a beauty powder to prevent and banish enlarged pores, instead of producing them, to keep the skin young instead of aging it and to prevent and remedy eruptions instead of causing them. Women say La-May stays on better and looks prettier than any other powder.



Free HOW TO GET YOUR LOOSE POWDER VANITY Free

Instead of paying your druggist or department store fifty cents for one of these La-May Loose Powder Vanities, you can get one free by purchasing a regular one dollar box of La-May Face Powder, enough for six months. One of these vanities will be found packed inside the cover of every one dollar box. What Readers of "Nerve Force" Say:

"I have gained 12 pounds since reading your book, and I feel so energetic. I had about given up hope of ever finding the cause of my low weight."

"I have been treated by a number of nerve specialists and have traveled from country to country in an endeavor to restore my nerves to normal. Your little book has done more for me than all other methods combined."

"Reading your book has stopped that dreadful feeling of FEAR which paralyzed my stomach and digestion."

"Your book did more for me for indigestion than two courses of dieting."

"My heart is now regular again and my nerves are fine. I thought I had heart trouble, but it was simply a case of abused nerves. I have reread your book at least ten times."

"The advice given in your book on relaxation and calming of nerves has cleared my brain. Before I was half dizzy all the time."

A physician says: "Your book is the most sensible and valuable work I have ever read on the prevention of neurasthenia. I am recommending your book to my patients."

IT is a fact which usually surprises a woman that a fabric so like silk in its feel, so like flower petals in its tints, can have woven into it such resistance to hard wear and frequent tubbings.

It is this remarkable combination of beauty with long service which explains the tremendous favor and ever-growing demand for Lingette—for every kind of lingerie, for Princess slips, nightdresses, and for men's pajamas and athletic underwear.

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any drug or department store and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

We recommend Othine Complexion Soap for use with Othine, also as a shampoo—it is wonderful for bobbed hair—25c a cake at all drug or department stores or by mail. Othine Laboratories, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y.

SNAP-SHOTS

Some of the well tailored Palm Beach Suits—just as they look on regular men—on the bank steps, at the seashore and in the park. These men are cool and well-dressed in Palm Beach. Remember, these are snapshots and the camera tells the truth.

Look for the registered Palm Beach label in your summer suits, to make sure of getting a really smart, cool summer suit.

Wear Palm Beach clothes all around the clock—morning, afternoon, evening—for business, sports wear, automobiling. You can be well-dressed for any occasion and still be cool. And for golfing, Palm Beach Knickers are ideal.

Your clothier can show you cool Palm Beach Suits in light and dark colors and patterns just as in woolens and worsteds.

This Advertisement Registers A Violent Kick

TAKE a look at the suits in the snapshots. Smartly cut, finely tailored, well fitting—aren't they? Besides that, they are the coolest, lightest-feeling suits that ever brought relief to a sizzling body.

Now for the glad tidings—

Clothing stores offer Palm Beach Suits at prices which usually range about $12.50, $15.00, $16.50 and $18.50. Some styles and makes sell for more. And here comes that kick—

The weavers of Palm Beach Cloth protest against having people think that all suits made of summer fabrics look as though they had been slung together by a tent-maker. They want you to know that you can get good-looking suits of genuine Palm Beach if you pay for good tailoring.

And you can get Genuine Palm Beach Suits in all the handsome new colors and patterns—in both light and dark shades—that you see in the finest imported woolens and worsteds; also the famous tan and other light colors individual to Palm Beach.

You just can't get better looks, comfort or wear than in well-made suits of Palm Beach—and that's a fact!

Puts Driving On Velvet

POLARINE maintains a film of oil between all frictional surfaces, sealing full compression, gives the action of your engine a velvety, resilient quality. This means marvelous motor flexibility and a frictionless response which makes driving a sheer delight.

This unbroken Polarine film, while it is tough and resistant to pressure and heat—yet acts as a cushion for moving parts—is the supreme achievement in modern lubricating science, accomplished after years of labor by technologists of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

The Polarine film means scientific protection of your motor parts—provided, of course, that you use the right grade of Polarine specified for your car, in the chart above, and drain and refill your crankcase every 500 miles.

FATE OF AMUN STILL MYSTER FAVORABLE

Dispatch From Spitzbergen Reports No News From Polar Explorer Up to 2 A. M. Today.

SOME DEPRESSION AMONG HIS PARTY

If Planes Were Damaged Expedition Will Have a Long and Dangerous Return Journey.

By H. SUNDBY-HANSEN.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OSLO, Norway, May 25.—A special radiogram just received from Spitzbergen says the temperature has dropped to zero fahrenheit and that a low pressure area extends over the polar basin.

Even the most optimistic now fear that Amundsen's return to Spitzbergen by plane is out of the question.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Up to 2:15 o'clock this afternoon the North American Newspaper Alliance had received no word from the Amundsen-Ellsworth seaplanes since their departure Thursday afternoon from King's Bay, Spitzbergen, for a flight to the North Pole. This was announced at that hour through the Associated Press by Loring Pickering, general manager of the alliance.

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, May 25.—The Norwegian capital at 9:54 o'clock this morning was still without news from Capt. Roald Amundsen.

A dispatch from Spitzbergen to the Shipping Gazette here says no news has been received there regarding the Amundsen polar flight expedition up to 2 o'clock this morning.

The dispatch reads:

"As late as 2 a. m. today there was no news of Amundsen. The Hobby (one of the expedition's steamers) has returned to Wellman's Bay, having patrolled north and east of Dune's Island. She found ice conditions difficult."

The dispatch added that "Among members of the expedition a certain amount of depression prevailed because of Amundsen's non-appearance. If their flying boats were damaged, the members of the expedition will have a long and dangerous return journey.

"The weather is now cloudy with a raw temperature which has dropped to below zero.

"From the top of Amsterdam Island the captain of the Fram saw open water to the northward, where the machines might have descended."

Disquieting Report Regarding Weather

By H. SUNDBY-HANSEN,
Special Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1925.)

OSLO, Norway, May 25.—The Government Weather Bureau issued a disquieting bulletin early today indicating that clear polar weather upon which the fate of Roald Amundsen probably depends is nearing a termination. Reports from Siberian Russian stations indicate a low-pressure area moving toward the pole. It was impossible to predict definitely when the change would come, as there was no way of knowing how far north the low-pressure area had advanced.

It was reported here late last night that the Farm had radioed from Spitzbergen that weather conditions were somewhat better than those of Saturday. It was still cloudy, but not sufficiently to prevent safe flying with fair visibility. Meteorologists report continued clear weather over the polar basin. In the event of a storm blowing up from Siberia, it is thought that the winds would be southward, aiding Amundsen on his return, but if he is delayed he probably will encounter heavy snow and clouds. If bad weather sets in, the Farm and the Hobby will leave Wellman's Bay, whither they returned yesterday and in accordance with Amundsen's instruction to proceed north for reconnaissance along the edge of the ice barrier where there
